

For the Quincy Patriot.

SOUTH SHORE RAIL ROAD.

At a meeting of the citizens of Duxbury, Marshfield, Scituate and Cohasset, favorable to a Rail Road from Duxbury to Boston, passing through Marshfield, Scituate, Cohasset, Hingham, Weymouth and Braintree, to intersect the Old Colony Rail Road at some convenient point in Quincy, held at the Hotel of Luther Rogers in Marshfield, on Saturday, 27th ult., Hon. G. B. Weston of Duxbury was chosen Chairman, and Daniel Phillips of Marshfield, Secretary.

Spirited resolutions were adopted, Committees from the several towns chosen to procure a survey of the route and money raised to defray the expense of the same. D. P.

QUINCY PATRIOT.

SATURDAY, OCT. 4, 1845.

John A. Greer, Editor.

ANOTHER HINT. We have several times given notice to all indebted to call and settle, if not pay up which would be more agreeable. Few have attended to this call, and for what reason we are unable to divine. We have called upon a portion, some of them several times and at much expense without meeting with success, and cannot afford thus to expend as much in the collection as the amount of the debt. Without further parley, we desire all to pay, at least settle their bills, so that we may liquidate whatever demands may be against us. Do not give us the trouble to call too many times as our patience may be exhausted.

"HOWARD ATHENEUM." By the politeness of the proprietors, we visited this establishment a few days ago. This house, formerly the Miller Tavern, made in Howard Street, Boston, has been remodelled and will be opened in the course of a few weeks as an Opera House, under the direction and management of Wm. F. Johnson, Esq. The House when finished will comfortably seat twenty-three hundred persons—the seats or pews are cushioned and painted in splendid style. The stage is thirty feet wide and forty feet deep, and raised about six feet from the centre of the floor. The three distinguished American Artists, Curtis, Jones & Whitaker, are busily engaged in producing the scenes and appointments of the establishment. Myer is engaged as leader of the Orchestra, and of course that department will be complete.

This beautiful Temple when finished will be devoted of all the objectionable concomitants of a Theatre—there is no place appointed for females of doubtful character or for intoxicating drinks.

Engagements have been made with Mr. and Mrs. Keen, Mrs. Mowatt, Mr. Hackett, Mr. Murdoch and the Seguin's.

The Bostonians will now have a place of amusement which will be creditable to the city, the proprietors and all those who are concerned. It is to be hoped that the enterprise will prosper. We understand the house will open on the 13th of this month.

OLD COLONY RAILROAD. It is confidently anticipated by the Directors that another month will so complete this enterprise that passengers will be carried from Plymouth to South Boston. Only a few miles of the track remains to be laid. The passenger houses at the stations in Plymouth, Kingston, North Plympton, Halifax and Dorchester, and other places are nearly finished. The Passenger depot, in Boston, says the Traveller, is in process of erection by the Worcester Railroad Company, on Albany, near Beach street, in the immediate vicinity of their own station—an arrangement having been made with them to provide for the reception of the passenger cars of the Old Colony road, on the premises of the Worcester road.—The Freight Depot of the Old Colony Company is to be at the termination of their road in South Boston, near the southerly end of the lower bridge.

DEDHAM COMET. This sprightly sheet, which is occasionally published at Dedham, (Mass.), and whenever issued is filled with racy and spicy articles, has reached us this week, from which we extract the following article relative to the prosperity of that town:

"Among the new buildings now erecting in this village, we are happy to notice one on the site of the Silk factory destroyed by fire a short time since. We understand it is to be furnished with new and improved machinery for the manufacture of Silk, which will soon be put in operation, and, under the direction of its former superintendent, its fabrics will doubtless sustain the high reputation already acquired in our markets by the New England Silk manufacturing company."

FATAL ACCIDENT. On Sunday, September 20th Mr. Benjamin Drake of West Scituate, was instantly killed, by falling from the tongue of a heavy loaded team he was driving, the wheels of the cart passing over his neck and head, crushing them in a horrible manner. He left a wife and children. He was about forty-five years of age.

LOOK OUT. A new batch of counterfeit five dollar bills on the Nashua Bank, (N. H.) are in circulation. Several have been detected in Boston, and a number of individuals held to bail for passing them.

JOHN B. GOUGH. This individual has at last made and published a confession, which corresponds nearly with the statement of his friends. Let him rise up again, and stand the temptations of alcohol more powerful than ever.

PEACE CONVENTION. The annual meeting of the New England Non-Resistance Society will be held in Boston, on the 16th and 17th instants.

SELF MURDER.—The John White of Richmond, (Va.) committed suicide on the 29th ult., by firing a pistol ball through his head. The cause given for the commission of the act is pecuniary embarrassment. He was, at the time of his death, Judge of the nineteenth Judicial District, to which station he was appointed just before the termination of the last session of Congress. He represented the district in which he resided, for the last ten years in the Congress of the United States, and presided as Speaker over the twenty seventh Congress.

CONGRESSIONAL JOURNAL. In our columns will be found the Prospectus of Messrs. Fisk & Dow for publishing a Congressional Journal, commencing with the long session opening in December next, and continuing till its close. They are fully competent to give an accurate and interesting report of debates, and to do justice to both parties. We know of no publication of the kind that can be so cheaply obtained. Read the prospectus.

LIUTENANT GOVERNOR. At the recent meeting of the Democratic State Central Committee, holden at Boston, the Hon. George Savory of Bradford, was unanimously nominated as a candidate for the office of Lieutenant Governor, in place of H. W. Bishop of Lenox, who had declined the situation. Mr. Savory has accepted the nomination. This gentleman was formerly a member of the Senate Board from the County of Essex.

LIBERTY PARTY NOMINATIONS. The State Convention of the Liberty Party of this Commonwealth, which has been in session at Boston, the present week, nominated Samuel E. Sewall of Boston, for Governor, and Elihu Burritt of Worcester for Lieutenant Governor, to be supported by their party at the November election.

COUNTY NOMINATIONS. The Norfolk County Whig Convention, which assembled at Dedham on Wednesday last, selected the following gentlemen for Senators, viz: OLIVER FELT of Wrentham, JAMES MAGUIRE of Randolph, and SAMUEL GUILD of Roxbury.

CONVICTION OF AN ANTI-RENTER. A Dr. Smith A. Boughten, who has been called 'Big Thunder,' and the ring-leader of the whole movement, has been convicted of participation in the rebellious anti-rent movement in New York, and sentenced to the State Prison for life.

ANOTHER FAILURE. There is again no choice for a member of Congress to fill the vacancy in the delegation from New Hampshire. The Democratic candidate lacks about five hundred votes of an election. It is not expected another trial will be ordered till the annual March election.

EXTENSIVE ROBBERY. Mr. Reuben Rowley of Wrentham, in this State, an elderly gentleman and very wealthy, was robbed on his journey to New York while in the steambath. During the passage, a man, who was dressed in a gentlemanly manner, and who represented himself as an acquaintance. During the conversation, he offered Mr. Rowley a peach, which he ate, and shortly after was seized with dizziness, violent cramps and vomiting, which continued until the boat reached the city, when he discovered that, during his sickness, his valise had been stolen, containing twenty-seven thousand eight hundred dollars, chiefly in eastern bank notes; his pocketbook was also taken from him, containing papers of value. The peach doubtless contained some drug which caused the sickness.

ANTI-MORMON TROUBLES. The latest intelligence from the belligerent parties in Illinois, is, that the Anti-Mormons had been completely routed by the Sheriff of Hancock County and his posse, he loosing three men and they having eighteen killed; that the mob-supporters in all the surrounding villages of Nauvoo were in great consternation, and were fleeing into the neighboring counties, where they were endeavoring to obtain volunteers to renew the war. Gov. Ford had issued a call for five hundred men to quell the disturbances. It was rumored that the mails had been stopped.

SIGN OF A TEDIUS WINTER. It is a remarkable fact that bees, this year, says the Hartford (Ct.) Times, have almost universally refused to swarm; and in some instances, after filling their hives, they have commenced laying up store on the outside. Such extraordinary conduct of these weather-wise and provident insects, it is thought, indicates a winter of unusual length and severity.

RESIGNATION. Hon. Thomas A. Davis, Mayor of Boston, has resigned on account of continued ill health. The City Council will fill the vacancy.

TO WRITERS. "Trouble among the Lawyers," "F. M. A.," "Native Americans," and other articles postponed.

The ashes of Daniel Boone and wife, which some time since were brought from Missouri, at the request of the town of Frankfort, (Ky.) have been lately re-interred in the new cemetery near that town. The funeral oration was delivered by the Hon. John J. Crittenden.

At an Episcopal Convention, holden at New York recently, an agreement it is said was effected with Bishop Onderdonk, the provision of which is, that that gentleman shall be suspended from the exercise of the duties of his office, but yet to be allowed the comfortable salary of twenty-five hundred dollars a year.

A self-regulating tide gauge has been invented in Canada, for the purpose of showing the corresponding heights of the tide by a clock. So valuable is this considered, that orders from the government have been given for many of them.

Thirty young men have been educated for the ministry from the church of Rev. Dr. Codman, at Dorchester. He preached the ordination sermon of all these young clergymen, except the last, which he was prevented from doing in consequence of his absence from the country.

An important geological discovery has been made in Vermont by the State Geologist, of beds of iron ore, several yards thick, and co-extensive with the solid rock along the base of the Green Mountains. It was supposed that there was not in that State any regular solid bed of ore, interstratified with rock.

Hon. Edward Everett has declined the public honors which were tendered to him by the committee of his friends who recently assembled in Boston.

Two persons at Springfield, (Mass.) have been arrested for a breach of the new Post Office law—having been letters carriers for the people between Springfield and West Springfield. The case is to be tried.

A monument of lead is to be erected by the miners of Galena, (Ill.) in honor of Caleb Cushing, for his services while in China, for the promotion of their interests.

Upon the same spot of ground in New York has stood a theatre, a church, a revolutionary prison, and stands now a post office, all rendered of consequence in the history of the city by peculiar events and circumstances.

In case of sudden cold or wet, if you have or can procure a raw onion or two, eat it by all means. Nothing will keep the cold more effectually from your stomach.

At a carpenter's shop, not far from Washington Street, Boston, says the Courier, they have a very superior watch dog. Two or three dogs which were formerly kept on the premises, have been poisoned, as is supposed, by some person whose object it was to fire the building. The animal to which reference is now made has been so well trained that he will not eat, unless fed by his master. He never touches any food which may happen to be in his path, and always growls or threatens to bite any stranger who attempts to feed him.

The brig Albert, owned principally in Beverly, (Mass.) commanded by Capt. Jacob Woodbury, has been sent to Philadelphia, at the instance of the United States Consul at Bahia, on the charge of being engaged in the slave trade between the Coast of Africa and Brazil. The charge against her is said to amount merely to her having brought as passengers, from Africa, the captain and crew of the Washington's Barke, alleged to have been sold for a slave.

A watch was stolen in the pit of the Opera in Paris—the loser complained in a loud voice, and said, "It is just nine, in a few minutes my watch will strike; the second is strong; and by that means we shall ascertain where it is." The thief, terrified at this, endeavored to escape, and by his agitation discovered himself.

A colored woman, at Frankfort, (Ky.) run a needle in the fleshy part of the palm, some three months ago. A magnet has been applied to the hand. A sensation of pain was produced, and three days after the needle made its appearance just under the skin, when it was easily extracted.

The Mormon Temple, it is said, is still in progress of erection. It is about one-fourth the size of Solomon's Temple, and can accommodate twelve thousand persons, being four thousand on each floor. Three hundred and fifty men are zealously at work upon the building, which it is supposed will be finished in a year and a half, probably at a cost of a half million of dollars.

In an article in Hunt's Merchant's Magazine on the subject of the growing consumption of tea and coffee, it is now estimated for the whole world, at eight hundred millions pounds!

We hold in high esteem, every aid to medicinal knowledge or power. If needful and energetic action can be produced and adopted to palliate and ultimately cure such dangerous diseases as those which attack the Chest and Lungs, it is certainly a priceless and inestimable benefit. Such is the effect of Mr. C. Brinckerhoff's Health Restorative. In the course of years that it has been used in his family and among his friends, it has saved every case, and effectually restored to health. 25

From the Norridgewood (Me.) Journal. We publish the following, as among the many evidences which we are daily receiving of the increasing popularity of Dr. Jayne's Expectant. We have no interest in "puffing" it—any further than we have a desire to promote the health and happiness of our fellow creatures, who are wasting away with those complaints, for which this medicine is an absolute remedy. And in calling the attention of the public to it, we are in the faithful discharge of our duty.

New Portland, Nov. 4, 1842. Mr. Pratt, Sir: I wish you to send me 3 bottles of Jayne's Expectant, and in this connection, I would say, that I deem it an invaluable medicine, and an article that no family should be without for a single day. I have used it for two years in my family, and have always found it a quick and efficient remedy for tightness of the lungs, produced by long protracted colds, which produce the short hacking cough, the premonitor of consumption, in which it so frequently terminates in this climate. If properly and seasonably administered, it will effectually break up the most violent colds, and thereby prevent the many violent fevers, frequently consequent upon them. I would most cheerfully recommend this medicine to the public in all cases of that nature, as invaluable.

The Selectmen of Quincy, hereby give notice that they will be in session, at their room in the New Town House, the last SATURDAY in each month until further notice, from two to five o'clock in the afternoon. All persons having business with the Town are requested to present it on said days.

BRYANT B. NEWCOMB, JOSEPH W. ROWENSON, LEVI G. FOLSOM.

For Coughs, Colds, Asthma, and Consumption.

The great and only remedy for Coughs, Colds, Asthma, and CONSUMPTION, is the HUNGARIAN BALM OF LIFE, discovered by the celebrated Dr. Buchan of London, England, and introduced into the United States under the immediate superintendence of the inventor.

The extraordinary success of this medicine, in the case of pulmonary diseases, warrants the American agent in soliciting for treatment the worst possible cases that can be found in the community—cases that seek relief in vain from any of the common remedies of the day, and have been given up by the most distinguished Physicians, as confirmed and incurable. The Hungarian Balm has cured and will cure, the most desperate of cases. It is no quack nostrum, but a standard English medicine, of known and established efficacy.

Every family in the United States should be supplied with Buchan's Hungarian Balm of Life, not only to counteract the consumptive tendencies of the climate, but to be used as a preventive medicine in all cases of Coughs, Colds, Spitting of Blood, pain in the side and chest, irritation and soreness of the Lungs, Bronchitis, difficulty of breathing, hectic fever, night sweats, emaciation and general debility, Asthma, Influenza, Hooping Cough and Croup.

Sold in large bottles, at $1 per bottle, with full directions for the restoration of Health. Pamphlets, containing a mass of English and American certificates, and other evidence, showing the unequalled merits of this Great English Remedy, may be obtained of the agents, gratuitously.

People passing through this village from the neighboring towns to visit the famous city, (where they are liable to be caught in traps equal to mock auctions in New York city,) would find it to their advantage to call and examine Mr. Russell's style of cutting. To those acquainted with the abilities of Mr. Russell as an artist, it is superfluous to say one word, but from all unacquainted we would solicit an early call to examine his new style of Palitot or Overcoat, designed for Fall or Winter wear. Feeling confident that he will give satisfaction we recommend him to the public.

Tailoring.

I WOULD respectfully intimate to my friends and the public, that I continue to occupy rooms in the Store of E. Packard. Feeling grateful for past favors, I would solicit a continuance of that patronage so liberally bestowed since I commenced business. Being regularly in receipt of the latest and most approved English, French and American styles, with the abilities of first rate workmen, (employing none else) enables me to produce a garment every way desirable in point of style and finish.

People are requested to call and examine for themselves, and be not cajoled by the rigmorole advertisements, for "by a quare and rule works many a fool." My theory of cutting being entirely different from that used by country tailors, aids me in giving a perfect fit to the most imperfect form.

All asked is a fair trial and no favors.

C. BRINCKERHOFF'S
HEALTH RESTORATIVE.

THE practical use of the Health Restorative being to relieve and cure those most hazardous and aggravating of all diseases, Consumption, Liver Complaint, severe Coughs and Colds, and Pains in the Side and Chest, it is considered both right and proper that a statement be made more particularly relating to its properties. In the first place, it is fortunately compounded of native plants herbs and roots, and has not sought, therefore, the adventitious aid of dangerous mineral preparations, which only palliate at the best instead of curing disease. The fact of the Restorative being purely vegetable, is corroborated by the testimony of the eminent Dr. Chilton of New York, who after a careful and minute examination of it, declares the truth of it, and so effectually stops cavil on that point. Further, the promptness of the action of this medicine is without doubt unparalleled; it shows such energetic action in eradicating disease and then leading the part, that the transition from inspired and enfeebled health to convalescence is astonishing and conclusive. The happiness of being the instrument of such unbounded benefit, is too great to permit this Restorative to circulate as heretofore within narrow circumscribed limits, and the Proprietor has made such arrangements with his General Agent, that the remedy can be reached by all. The continual accessions of certificates stating the most touching cases of disease happily cured, prevents the possibility of their being published to any extent, but yet they are left at the office of the General Agent for examination. The following certificate is from Dr. Chilton, the well known New York Chemist.

"I have analyzed a bottle of medicine called 'C.
Brinckerhoff's Health Restorative,' and find that it does not contain Mercury, or any other metallic preparation, nor opium in any of its forms. It is composed of vegetable matter entirely."

WOULD respectfully inform his customers and the public, that he has received several cases of Eng-

be found to be entirely new articles in this market, and will come very cheap.
In addition to the above, named, I have also received a complete assortment of Superfine Cloths, such as
JET BLACK, BLUE BLACK and GOLDEN BROWN'S;
A good assortment of BLUE, which will come remarkably cheap for Dress or Frock Coats, or Boys'
Jackets and Pants.

A COMPLETE ASSORTMENT OF
FRENCH DOESKINS AND CASSIMERES.
Among the assortment I have received may be seen, a lot of heavy TWEEDS, all wool, suitable for Coats which will come cheaper than can be bought in any store in Boston,—say fifty cents per yard or a Coat made up complete for $4.00.

VESTINGS,
Of every description; FIGURED SILK AND SATIN, remarkably cheap; a good variety of Cashmere and Valenciennes.
The liberal patronage I have received since I came to Quincy, has enabled me to open as choice a selection of Goods as ever was introduced into this market.
I return my customers and the public my sincere thanks for their liberal patronage, and I respectfully invite them to call and examine my present stock of Goods. I can make garments considerably cheaper, as well and of as good cloth as can be had in any Store in the city of Boston. The reason I can do these things are, in the first place I am prepared to cut and make a garment with any man that can be named there, in the next place, I can purchase my goods as cheap as any man can do, and I cut and superintend my own work. These are facts that are worth the consideration of those who wish to get their garments where they can get them cheapest and best, and to suit them in every respect or no sale.
I have adopted the one price system. I am fully convinced it is the most honest way of doing business, and my terms are Cash.

POETRY.

For the Quincy Patriot.

THE CAPTURED AFRICAN.

Proudly he roamed o'er Africa's soil,
Restrained not by the will of man;
His free-born soul knew not the toil
Of slavery's sin, cursed land.
He lived in innocence and peace,
Offending none, not even his God;
But ah! his joys are doomed to cease,
And he must feel the scourging rod.

Amid the stillness of the night,
When slumbers o'er him softly stole,
And dreams of pleasure and delight
Crept lightly upon his soul—
A shout was heard, a fearful shout,
Echoing through the midnight air—
Alarmed the sleeping man awoke,
But his strong heart was filled with fear.

A fiendish hand surrounds his cot,
And soon the mad'ning flames arise;
Horror and anguish fill his heart,
Whistling a holy God he cries.
They seize upon his noble frame,
And tear him from his youthful home—
They load him with a galling chain,
And mock his agonizing groans.

The moon doth hide her face with shame,
And darkness shrouds the awful deed;
Oh! to him who thus for gain
Doth make his fellow's heart to bleed.
Humanity! where hast thou flown?
Come and yield thy influence now
To break the captor's heart of stone,
And make him to thine altar bow.

Alas the captive's borne away,
And in a floating prison bound—
Despair with all his sad array,
Salutes his ear with ev'ry sound.
He calls upon the God of Heaven,
To send his wrath in vengeance down,
Upon the tyrants who have riven
The ties that bound him to his home.

His prayer is heard—the thunder roars,
And dismal clouds o'er spread the sky;
Bright meteors, flashing o'er the seas
Illumine the dark canopy.
Terror o'erwhelms the savage crew,
And ev'ry heart is filled with fear;
Awe-struck they see a dreadful doom,
Which soon will end their mad career.

The lightning darts athwart the sky,
And deafening thunder rolls above;
A wild tornado sweeps the sea,
And death rears on the mighty flood.
A shriek is heard—the ship goes down—
The wretched band for mercy cry;
But ah! they dared a holy God,
Who sends his judgments from on high!

They sink into an ocean grave,
The captors and the captured too;
No helping hand is near to save,
No one to bid a last adieu.
Proud Africa's son is now avenged—
He dies, but death is his sweet end,
For troublous sorrow now will cease,
And angels will his spirit greet.

A SONG OF THE SEA.

A bold, brave crew, and an ocean blue,
And a ship that loves the blast,
With a good wind playing merrily
In the tall and gallant mast;
Ha! ha! my boys,
These are the joys
Of the noble and the brave,
Who love a life
In the tempest's strife,
And a home on the mountain wave!

When the driving rain of the hurricane Puts the light of the light house out;
And the growing thunder sounds its gong;
On the whirlwind's battle-roul,
Ha! ha! do you think
That the valiant shrink?
No! no!—we are bold and brave!
And we love to fight
In the wild midnight,
With the storm on the mountain wave!

Breezes that die where the green woods sigh,
To the landman sweet may be,
But give to the brave the broad buck'd wave,
And the tempest's midnight glee!
Ha! ha! the blast,
And the rocking mast,
And the sea wind brisk and cold,
And the thunder's jar,
On the sea afar,
Are the things that suit the bold!

The timbers creak, the sea-birds shriek,
There's lightning in your blast!
Hard to the leeward! mariners,
For the storm is gathering fast!
Ha! ha! to-night,
Boys, we must fight;
But the winds which o'er us yell,
Shall never scare
The mariner,
In his winged citadel!

ANECDOTES.

A little boy, more thoughtful than boys generally are, on being tumbled into the mud by a comrade, was asked why he didn't serve his abuser in the same manner, when he replied,—"If I should, there would be two suits of clothes to clean."

A good old Quaker lady rebuked her son for his manner of speaking after this wise:—"Moses, these shouldst never say anything of any thing; these shouldst say 'Maryfying' influence."

An apothecary, down east, has written over his door, "All kinds of dying stuffs sold here."

The girls in Kennebunk paste their faces with white sugar, so they may be sweet when they are kissed.

The Great Remedy

Consumption, Asthma, Dyspeptic Consumption, Spitting of Blood, Bronchitis, Difficulty of Breathing, Hoarseness, Influenza, Croup, Colds, Pain in the Breast and Side, Dyspepsia, and various affections of the Stomach and Liver.

Folger's Olosanion, or All-Healing Balsam.

It is acknowledged that more persons die of Consumption in the United States over THIRTY THOUSAND PERSONS annually fall victims to this dreadful scourge. The cause of the evil is generally overlooked. A short dry Cough is the precursor—or a neglected Cold. These symptoms are deemed unimportant. Pain in the Side, Heaviness and night Sweats follow, and death ends the scene.

Would you find a REMEDY FOR THE EVIL?

Here it is. The experience of more than twenty years has proved its efficacy, and thousands are rejoicing in its effects.
Case of INCIPENT CONSUMPTION.—George W. Burnett, Esq. of Newark, N. J., had suffered under the effects of a severe cold more than a year, and in the month of August, when his Cough had reduced him so much that he feared he would be commencing using the Olosanion. He raised blood at this time, complained of pain in his side and chest, and was very much debilitated by night sweats. His appetite was gone, and altogether he appeared to be rapidly sinking. He was so much relieved by the use of this remedy that by the month of November he left for Pittsburg, Pa. with every prospect of being permanently cured.

Read the following case of CONSUMPTION.—The cure was truly a wonderful one and places the Olosanion or All-Healing Balsam in a high position of the list of remedies for eradicating that dreadful disease.

George W. Hays, residing in this city, (New York) was seized with a severe cold in the early part of the summer. His cough became very troublesome and he began to raise blood. He complained of a severe pain in the chest and his breathing became so short that he could not walk any distance without stopping for breath. His night sweats reduced him very low. He was under the care of several physicians in Brooklyn, who told him they could do no good, as his case was a settled and fixed Consumption. He removed to this city to die among his friends. He was by this time so weak that he could not walk without assistance. Although his friends had now given up all hope of his ever being any better, he commenced using the Olosanion or All-Healing Balsam, and in a few weeks was so far restored as to be able to resume his business.

Mr. T. Luban, residing at 52 Pine street, was severely afflicted with Asthma, in consequence of having taken a severe cold in the early part of last winter. In the early part of the night he could sleep tolerably well, but towards one o'clock in the morning his Asthma became so severe that he was obliged to get up and sit for the remainder of the night leaning forward on a chair. His cough was most distressing through the day. He had, during his sickness, tried almost every thing without relief. He never had a good night's rest in ten months, until he commenced taking the Olosanion or All-Healing Balsam, when he found immediate relief, and before using half a bottle of it was perfectly cured. He now sleeps as quietly as he ever did in his life.

Hundreds of cases could be given to prove the efficacy of the great remedy. And it possesses a property superior to all others, viz: it does not constipate the bowels. Reader, are you suffering under any of the above symptoms of disease? Try this remedy. It will allay the Pain in your side and chest—put to flight the COUGH which deprives you of sweet slumber and repose; if you have Asthma, be assured there is no medicine in the world that will cure you so speedily, and it will arrest all those disagreeable symptoms which strike such terror to the mind and give such dreadful forebodings of an untimely and speedy dissolution.

Sold at one dollar, per bottle, by REDDING & Co. State street, Boston; and by the following appointed agents:

Mrs. Hayden, Quincy; J. Babcock, Milton; M. D. Plummer, Milton; Eli Thayer, Weymouth; Wm. A. Torrey, do.; King & Nash, Abington; N. N. Dyer, do.; A. E. Dubois, Randolph; R. Gleason, Dorchester. August 16.

A MEDICINAL preparation is herein announced which has been long desired, and sought for, and which the public must at once see and acknowledge the advantage of. It is a purgative pill, COATED WITH SUGAR, so that it leaves no taste whatever of its internal ingredients. In fact the medicine is so entirely disguised, that if a person were to swallow the pills without being informed that they were medicine, they would be taken as a purgative effect, and that he had been taking medicine, for these pills are so skilfully prepared, that they do not grip the bowels; and thus the patient who takes them avoids two evils which attend all other purgative medicines, namely: nausea and pain. Medicine administered in all other sweet forms has the disadvantage of being mixed with the sugar, and hence produces a mingled flavor, which, to most persons, is more disagreeable than unadulterated bitterness. In these pills this is altogether avoided; the sugar and the medicine being entirely distinct from each other, so that the former must be thoroughly removed before the latter can manifest itself to the taste. It is universally known that nearly all diseases originate with impurity of blood. Pure blood is therefore essential to health. We must not, however, wait until the blood is impure, for then it takes time—and that time passed in ill health—is rectified it; but when the slightest derangement of the system is indicated by costiveness, or any other sign, it admonishes us that superfluities are gathering in the system, which should at once be got rid of; for their removal leaves the chyle (from which the blood is formed) in a healthy state, and the purity of blood must be the result. This fact, as stated, is universally known; but people have such an aversion to medicine, that unless the case is very bad, they put off the disease to the cure until an impaired constitution, or a fit of sickness, releases them from the folly of their conduct. Still they had some excuse; for heretofore, medicine in almost all its forms, was nearly as disgusting as it was beneficial. Now, however, the evil is most effectually removed; for Glickener's SUGAR COATED VEGETABLE PURGATIVE PILLS have no taste whatever of medicine—produce none of the nausea and griping attending on the operation of other medicines—while their speedy effect in removing all impurities from the system cannot be excelled by any other medicine which has ever been known.

It is unnecessary to say more here. If these pills are as described, the public will freely and gladly patronize them; and the proprietor merely asks a trial, which he is sure of receiving, to prove that he assumes no merit for them which they do not fully possess.

Glickener's Sugar-coated Vegetable Purgative Pills are prepared and sold wholesale and retail, and for exportation to the U. S. by J. B. Babcock, M. D., Plummer, Milton; Eli Thayer, William A. Torrey, W. Nash, A. Raymond, Weymouth; King & Nash, N. Dyer, Abington; R. Gleason, R. F. Tolman, Dorchester; R. P. Torrey, Randolph; Mrs. E. HAYDEN (rear of Stone Temple) and GEORGE H. LOCKE, Quincy. THE FRIGATE'S TENDER.

A TALE OF THE LAST WAR.

By J. H. Ingraham.

CHAPTER I.

It was early on a sunny morning during progress of the last war with Great Britain, a young naval officer, walking on the Bay at New York, had his attention drawn to a group of persons earnestly engaged in watching two vessels just visible far down the harbor.

"What is it, my friends?" he asked.

Frank, hearty tone, as he joined them.

"The tender, again, chasing in a schooner," answered an old tar, touching the point his hat as he noticed the anchor bottom of the officer's coat.

"Here is a spy glass, sir," said a man whose mate stood near, and at the same time respectfully handing it to him.

"Thank you, my man," answered the tenant, with a smile, as he took the instrument and placed it to his eye.

By its aid he could clearly distinguish the armed schooner, of about ninety tons, carrying sail in chase of a trading "fore-and-aft" that was making every exertion to escape, by towing and throwing water upon the sails.

"The chase is about a half a mile off, sir," said the master's mate; but the sailor said a shark in chase of a dolphin.

fore-and-aft don't stand a chance of getting in past the fort."

"The tender can sail, and I am the one ought to know it," said a tough, well-beaten looking man. "She was a pilot, and the fastest craft that ever danced over waves. Three weeks ago I and my crew out in her, when your English frigate suddenly made her appearance out of a fog bank, brought us to. But I took to my yawl, pulled for the land a league away, and escaped—for the fog was so thick the English could not get a glimpse of me. It is a schooner they have turned into a tender, and that's made so many captures the last of our small coasters."

"She carries forty men and a long thirty-two," observed a seaman in the group.

"And is commanded by a luff and a red-headed master's mate."

"It would be a blessing," observed a war-man, who had not yet spoken, "if the craft could be caught napping. It isn't a sloop to put her nose out of the harbor, yond the cape; while the frigate was alone, they could slip along the coast in water, and show her their heels. But everything that ventures out is brought that long gun of the tender's."

"That's a fact, Ben," responded another man. "She has taken or driven back in no less than twenty-six craft in the last weeks. I shall be glad, for one, when she gate lying off there gets her armament off for then I think we'll swallow up the English frigate outside, and pick our teeth with the der."

All these remarks were heard by the officer, who all the while continued to look through the spy glass at the tender at chase.

"There goes a gun," cried several spectators, as a flash and a jet of azure came from the tender's bows.

"That is bold enough," observed the officer, as if speaking his thoughts aloud.

impudent tender is almost up with the frigates to fire at the chase in the very face batteries."

"It is only to try and do her mischief," said the master's mate; for she finds that and-after will escape her—so she fires a cut away something."

THE FRIGATE'S TENDER.

A TALE OF THE LAST WAR.

By J. H. Ingraham.

CHAPTER I.

It was early on a sunny morning during the progress of the last war with Great Britain, that a young naval officer, walking on the Battery at New York, had his attention drawn to a group of persons earnestly engaged in watching two vessels just visible far down the harbor.

"What is it, my friends?" he asked, in a frank, hearty tone, as he joined them.

"The tender, again, chasing in a schooner, sir," answered an old tar, touching the point of his hat as he noticed the anchor button on the officer's coat.

"Here is a spy glass, sir," said a master's mate who stood near, and at the same time respectfully handing it to him.

"Thank you, my man," answered the lieutenant, with a smile, as he took the instrument and placed it to his eye.

By its aid he could clearly distinguish an armed schooner, of about ninety tons, crowded sail in chase of a trading "fore-and-aft," that was making every exertion to escape, both by towing and throwing water upon the sails.

"The chase is about a half a mile ahead, sir," said the master's mate; but the tender sailed like a shark in chase of a dolphin. The fore-and-aft don't stand a chance of getting in past the fort."

"The tender can sail, and I am the one that ought to know it," said a tough, weather-beaten looking man. "She was a pilot boat, and the fastest craft that ever danced over the waves. Three weeks ago I and my crew were out in her, when you English frigate suddenly made her appearance out of a fog bank and brought us to. But I took to my yawl and pulled for the land a league away, and escaped—for the fog was so thick the Englishman could not get a glimpse of me. It is my schooner they have turned into a tender, sir, and that's made so many captures the last week of our small coasters."

"She carries forty men and a long thirty-two pounder," observed a seaman in the group.

"And is commanded by a luff and a reeler," added the master's mate.

"It would be a blessing," observed a man-of-war's-man, who had not yet spoken, "if that craft could be caught napping. It isn't safe for a sloop to put her nose out of the harbor, beyond the cape; while the frigate was there alone, they could slip along the coast in light water, and show her heels. But now, everything that ventures out is brought to by that long gun of the tender's."

"That's a fact, Ben," responded another seaman. "She has taken or driven back into port no less than twenty-six craft in the last three weeks. I shall be glad, for one, when our frigate lying off there gets her armament aboard; for then I think we'll swallow up the English frigate outside, and pick our teeth with the tender."

All these remarks were heard by the young officer, who all the while continued to look through the spy glass at the tender and her chase.

"There goes a gun," cried several of the spectators, as a flash and a jet of azure smoke came from the tender's bows.

"That is bold enough," observed the young officer, as if speaking his thoughts aloud; "the impudent tender is almost up with the fort, and dares to fire at the chase in the very face of the batteries."

"It is only to try and do her mischief, sir," said the master's mate; for she finds the fore-and-aft will escape her—so she fires a gun to cut away something."

"You are right my man," responded the officer; "for she has put about and stands seaward again."

He continued to watch the retiring tender for some moments in silence.

"It's a pity we had'n't an armed cutter in port that would sail faster than she can, so that we might give her a chase out," said a lad approaching the group. His dress was that of a midshipman, and his air singularly free and fearless.

"Ah, Frank, are you there?" said the lieutenant. When did you get back from your father's?"

"Last night. I was in hopes to find the ship ready for sea, Mr. Percival; but I am told it will be three weeks before we can get away. I want to have a brush with John Bull's frigate, who hovers off and on the harbor with such bravado. When did you get in town, sir?"

"Yesterday morning. Have you been witnessing the pretty chase down the bay, Frank?"

"Yes. I would give a year's pay if I could have a hand in capturing that rogue."

"Come aside with me," said the officer, putting his arm in that of the midshipman. "Your words but express my own wishes. I have conceived a plan for capturing that tender."

"In what way, sir?" demanded the youth, with animation.

"I will show you. The tender's game appears to be the coasting vessels, from which she takes men to impress in the British navy, and also plunders the craft of such things as they can contain which are of any value. My plan is to charter an old sloop, the worst looking one that it is possible to find in port, yet a tolerable sailer, for she must work well and readily obey her helm. I will load her deck with hen-coops filled with poultry, pens crammed with pigs, and a few sheep, and a calf or two, by way of variety. You laugh, Frank; but the commander of the tender will find no laughing matter, if I succeed as I anticipate. I shall ship about thirty-five men, and conceal them in the hold, and taking command of my craft with one hand only visible on deck, I shall set sail out of the harbor. When I get outside, I think I shall be able to show John Bull a Yankee trick he will not be likely to forget very soon. But all will depend upon our good management of the affair. Now you see what I would be at, Frank! Will you join me?"

"Heart and hand, sir," responded Frank Talbot, with enthusiasm. "Will you allow me to be the hand on deck to help work the sloop?"

"Yes, if you can talk Weathersfield Yankee."

"Wall, I rather guess I ken, tho' I ain't been to Connecticut among 'em sins last grass."

The reply was pronounced in such inimitable Yankee dialect that the lieutenant burst into a hearty laugh.

"You will do, Frank! Now we want to proceed at once to action. I want you to go to the Anchor rendezvous in Pearl street and drum up about five and thirty men. Take only those that are daring and ready for any thing. Let none of them know your object, lest we should be betrayed by information being conveyed to the tender. You will find men enough in these times that will ask no questions. Meet me at twelve o'clock at the exchange Reading Rooms and report to me."

The midshipman then took his leave and hastened up the battery. The lieutenant returned to the group and taking aside the master's mate, whom he knew, laid briefly before him his project. The old-tar entered into it with all zeal. Together they went to the docks where, on account of the blockade, lay idle a large number of vessels of every description. They were not long in discovering such a craft as suited them; a Hudson sloop of seventy tons. She was immediately put in trim for sailing by the master's mate, and three or four men whom he employed; while the officer proceeded to buy up and send on board his live stock.

CHAPTER II.

The morning following these events, the Tender of the British frigate was standing off and on under easy sail, and close in with Sandy Hook. The wind was from the south-west and blowing about a five knot breeze. The sky was without a cloud, and only a gentle undulation lifted the surface of the ocean. The tender was a clipper built vessel, very long and narrow in the beam, and constructed wholly with an eye to her fast sailing qualities; and she gave proof of them by overhauling everything. She carried amidships a long thirty-two pounder. Her crew consisted of about forty men in the uniform of the British Navy. They were now principally assembled in the bows and on the windlass, talking together or watching the shore. At the officer of the deck, a bluff, full-faced young English "middy," was lounging over the quarter railing, smoking a segar.

The man at the helm had a sinewy of his post, for the vessel skipped along so easily that she seemed almost to steer herself.

"Sail ho!" cried the look out from the heel of the bowsprit.

"Where away?" quickly demanded the officer. "In shore, two points forward the beams."

"Aye, aye! I see!" answered the midshipman, levelling his glass at the sloop just stealing out of the harbor, closely hugging the shore. "It is another of the Yankee coasters. A sail in shore, Mr. Stanley!" said he, speaking through the sky-light.

The lieutenant, a stout, fleshy, port-wine visaged John Bull, came on deck and took sight at the stranger, which was about a league distant.

"It is a lumber sloop; but we will bring her to, if she dares to venture out; for we may get some fresh provisions and vegetables from her, if nothing more."

"Shall I put her on the other track, sir?"

"Not yet. Keep on as we are, till the sloop gets an offing. If we run for her now, she will take refuge in the harbor!"

The sloop stood out for half a mile, and then hauling her wind, beat down along the land. The tender delayed the chase until she had got too far from the entrance of the harbor to get back again, and then putting about ran for her so as to cut her off. The sloop seemed to take alarm, and putting about, began to make the best of her way towards the harbor she had left. Confident in the speed of his own vessel, the English lieutenant felt satisfied that the chase was already his, and laughed at the efforts of the sloop to get away.

At length they came near enough to see that her decks were covered with pigs and poultry.

"A rare haul we shall make this morning!" said the midshipman. "Enough chicken pie for the whole of the frigate's crew, to say nothing of turkeys and roast pig for the cabin!"

"What a regular slab-sided Yankee skipper she has at her helm! Man and boy, she has a stout crew!" said the lieutenant, laughing.

"They look frightened out of their senses, as they begin to think they are gone for it. Sloop ahoy!"

"What ye want?" came across the water, in the strongest nasal of Yankeeedom.

"I want you to heave to, brother Jonathan!"

"I'd rather not, if it's all the same to you. I'm in a mighty hurry! Frank!" added the disguised American officer, in an under tone.

"When I order you to let go the jib, you must draw it aft as hard as your strength will let you. I at the same time will put the helm hard up, so the sloop will pay rapidly off, and fall aboard of the tender; for I am determined to fall aboard of her. I shall curse your blunders and order you to let go; but don't mind me; keep pulling the jib-sheet hard to windward. Leave the rest to me. Now, my men," he said speaking through the companion-way, "take a good grasp of your pistols and cutlasses."

When I stamp my foot on the deck over your heads, throw off the hatches, leap on deck, and follow me."

"Heave to, or I will sink you! What are you palavering about?" shouted the Englishman.

The two vessels were now side by side steering on the same course, abeam of each other, the tender to leeward and about a hundred fathoms off.

"Wall, don't be too free with your powder, and I will. Aminidab, let go that ar jib sheet!"

"Yes I will," answered the young reeler; and with a hearty yell he began to draw it to windward. At the same moment the American officer put his helm hard, and the sloop rapidly paid off right towards the tender.

"Let go that jib sheet!" shouted the English officer.

"Yes, Aminidab, you 'arnel fool you, let it go, I say! Let it go! Don't you see we are coming right aboard the Capt'n's vessel?"

But "Aminidab" pulled the harder, and fairly took a turn with the sheet about a belaying pin.

The English officer was about to pour out upon him a volley of oaths, when, seeing that the sloop would certainly fall foul of him, he turned to give orders for the protection of his own vessel; but ere he could utter them, the sloop's bows struck her near the fore rigging, and swung round stern with stern. At the same instant, the American officer stamped up on the deck, and forty armed men made their appearance from the hatches, fore-castle and cabin, and leaped after Percival upon the tender's deck.

The Englishman taken by surprise, surrendered without scarcely striking a blow; and getting both vessels under sail, in the very sight of the frigate, the gallant young captor sailed with his prize back into the harbor, and safely anchored her off the battery, after an absence of six hours and twenty seven minutes.

This exploit is doubtless one of the boldest and most spirited affairs that came off during the war. The account given above is a faithful narrative of the transaction, and the chief circumstances will be recognized both by the brave officer in question, as well as by his friends.

THE GRAND QUESTION.

"Shall I be here always," what is to be my future and eternal destiny beyond the grave, are questions of momentous import to every individual. But it is a melancholy fact that among all who ask these questions, few press them on their own minds and hearts to any salutary result. The great men and the wise men in this world's estimation, know the solemn fact that they are too much engrossed with the honors and business of civil or political life to give earnest and timely heed to those grand questions of immortality, which equally concern them as the meanest of our race. The solemn disclosures of the next world will prove in many cases, the great men are not always wise men.

When an intellectual man finds himself on this earth, as soon as the faculties of reason operate, one of the first inquiries of his mind is, "Shall I be here always?" "Shall I be here forever?" And those writers who have been celebrated for their essays on the dignity of human reason, say that of all sentient beings, man only is competent of knowing that he is to die. His Maker has made man only able to come to the knowledge of the fact. Before he knows his origin and destiny, he knows that he is to die! Then comes that most urgent and solemn demand for light that ever entered the mind of man, which is set forth in that incomparable composition, the book of Job—"For there is hope of a tree, if it be cut down, that it will sprout again, and that the tender branch thereof will bud and bring forth boughs like a plant. But if a man die, shall he live again?"

And that question, nothing but God can solve. Religion does solve it, and teaches every man that the duties of this life have reference to the life which is to come—that moral conduct, founded on this great religious truth, is the end and the object of his destiny. And hence, since the introduction of Christianity, it has been the effort of the great and the good, to sanctify human knowledge; to bring it as it were to the baptismal font—to baptise letters with the sacred influence of Christian religion—to bring all the early and the late, to the same sacred source and sanctify them for the use and blessing of the human race.

TO THE COMMERCIAL COMMUNITY.

MR. EDITOR: At the town meeting recently held in Birmingham, England, to remonstrate against a proposed increase of the British Navy, Joseph Sturge, a gentleman long and deeply interested in commerce, made the following statement: "I know something about chartering and insuring ships, and I do not hesitate to say, that if the whole of the navy were scuttled to-morrow and sent to the bottom of the ocean, I could go to Lloyd's and insure ships and cargo without paying one shilling more premium, and I could charter vessels to any port of the globe without paying any more freight."

This bold and somewhat startling declaration, from such authority, has led me to see if it could be supported by the evidence of unerring statistics. I here present their testimony for the consideration of those of your readers who are engaged or interested in commercial pursuits.

The amount of tonnage owned by Great Britain, embracing every kind of vessel engaged in the Domestic and Foreign Trade is 3,047,178 tons.

The amount owned by the United States, is

2,158,602 tons.

The cost of American shipping is sixty dollars per ton; and an experienced ship-owner has estimated the value of our whole mercantile marine at forty dollars per ton, new and old. The cost of ship-building and its materials are much lower in Great Britain; but admitting that all the mercantile shipping which that nation has afloat, is worth forty dollars per ton, then the value of British tonnage would be $121,885,920

American do. 86,344,080

French, 389,619 tons 15,581,760

Value of the tonnage of the three nations, $223,814,760

As the interest of the capital invested in trade, ought not to be added into, but deducted from, the profits of that trade, in order to arrive at its precise net gain, we shall be admitting a very liberal profit to this amount of shipping, if we estimate it at fifteen per cent, after deducting the interest of the capital employed. And we submit this estimation of any ship-owner, as one sufficiently high, for such an amount of tonnage, even if there were not one uninsured vessel lost on the ocean during the year. Then the net annual profit of all the shipping owned by Great Britain, the United States and France, at fifteen per cent, is 33,572,214

Now, intelligent ship-merchants, will you not stick a pin at that fact? And, now, another at this? The appropriation of the British Government to their Navy, for the current year, is 33,620,200!

Now I appeal to your sober conviction, if these two facts are not of some significance to the commercial world! Think of it, for a moment! The profit of the whole mercantile marine of these three great nations, falls short of the annual expense of supporting the British Navy! And is this the protection which Commerce owes to Navies! Here are the three commercial nations expending the annually fifty-two millions of dollars on their combined navy, whose principal function is to protect commerce and navigation; while all their mercantile shipping can earn, above its cost, is but a little more than thirty-three millions per annum! Look at France: in 1837, she appropriated about $12,000,000, to her navy department, and she owned that year about 370,000 tons of shipping; which, at forty dollars per ton, was worth $14,800,000—a trifle more than the cost of its protection!

But let us bring this matter nearer home. We have about 1,000,000 tons of shipping engaged in the Foreign Trade: the profit of which, at the rate we have taken, is $6,000,000 per annum. To protect this interest is almost the only avowed object of our navy: and to render it adequate to the service, the government appropriated, for the current year, $6,360,789! Now is not such a mountain load of naval protection like millstones about the neck of Commerce: a grievous burden to her canvass wings? Nations which do not own a single vessel of war, are underbidding those whose bullying, blustering navies whiten the ocean. And I will close this article with the words of an extensive ship-owner in this country, and which are singularly coincident with the declaration of Joseph Sturge:

"If we had not a single ship, we could receive and send away everything we wished to buy and sell, by foreign vessels, which would do their own fighting; and, instead of charging our commerce with a farthing for naval protection, would carry all our freight at a cheaper rate than is now paid for the same service."

NATIVE AMERICANS.

As some of the friends of this new party have visited Quincy of late, for the purpose of organizing a new political party in this town, let all who wish to learn what the cloven foot of Native Americanism is, read the following sentiments uttered by Washington, Jefferson, Madison, Franklin and their compatriots.

LISTEN TO WASHINGTON. The father of his country recommended the passage, and approved by his official signature, of the first and second naturalization laws, which required respectively a residence of only two and five years, with the usual oaths. After the war of the Revolution was closed, he said of the Irish Volunteers, that they merited the warmest thanks of America for their patriotism, and that he hoped their countrymen, who had long struggled for liberty at home, would be hospitably received here. Listen to his language on the Nativist question.

"The bosom of America is open to receive, not only the opulent and respectable stranger, but the oppressed and persecuted of all nations and religions, whom we shall welcome to a participation in all our rights and privileges."

The voice of Washington will cheer us in the contest. We battle for the preservation of that policy which he recommended and approved—the admission of the oppressed of other lands to all the rights and privileges of American citizens.

HERE WHAT JEFFERSON SAYS. "Considering the ordinary chances of human life, a denial of citizenship under residence of fourteen years, (the Nativist now contend for twenty-one) is a denial to a great portion of those who ask it; and controls a policy pursued from their first settlement, by many of the States, and still believed to be of consequence to their prosperity. And shall we refuse the unhappy fugitives from distress that hospitality which savages of the wilderness extended to our fathers arriving in this land? Shall oppressed humanity find no asylum on this globe? The constitution, indeed, has wisely provided for admission to certain offices of important trust, a residence shall be required sufficient to develop character and design. But might not the character, and capabilities of a citizen be safely communicated to every one manifesting a bona fide purpose of casting his life and fortunes permanently with us?"

All the probation of Mr. Jefferson thought necessary, was such as would show the character and design of the immigrant—that he had determined to reside permanently in this land. He was opposed openly and unequivocally to the extension of the term even to four years—seven less than the Natives contend for. He and Washington stood together in opposition to Nativism.

Mr. Madison has left his opinions also on record. In the Convention which formed the Constitution he said: "He wished to invite foreigners of merit and Republican principles among us. America was indebted to emigrants for her settlement and prosperity. That part of America which has encouraged them most, had advanced most rapidly in population, agriculture and the arts."

Dr. Franklin has also condemned Nativism in the following language:

"The people in Europe are friendly to this country. We found in the course of the Revolution that many strangers served us faithfully, and that many natives took part against their country. When foreigners, after looking about for some other country in which they can obtain more happiness, give a preference to ours, it is a proof of attachment which ought to excite our confidence and affections."

FANNY ESSLER IN RICHMOND.

MR. EDITOR: By inserting the following extract, you will confer a favor on a SUBSCRIBER.

According to the accounts from Richmond, the people of that city have outdone all the fools in Boston, New York, Philadelphia, and Baltimore, in their reception of Fanny Essler. The Star gives the following description of her appearance:

"She floated about like a fairy, but voluptuous-looking spirit, and cut her toes hither and thither, and swayed her body to and fro in a way which was a caution to all inflammable young gentlemen, gray headed or not. The lovely creatures who graced the scene, looked on enchanted, and made all bright with their smiles; the vast crowd of men shouted and applauded with their whole might, and the beautiful dancing woman, giving them an extra flirt or two, which set them off in a perfect agony of delight, made her bow—the curtain dropped, the dear Fanny wring-your-neck-off upon the shoulder, said "dere, dere, is to one one thousand dollars almost,—now let us go." But the audience said no, and they shouted and screamed, and thumped for her to come out and—

Oleosanion, or All-Healing Balm.

It is estimated that one-third of the population of the United States are afflicted with the above-named diseases. The cause of the evil is generally cold. A short dry Cough is the precursor—or cold. These symptoms are deemed unimportant in the Side, Hectic and night Sweats and death ends the scene.

you find a REMEDY FOR THE EVIL? The experience of more than twenty years has proved its efficacy, and thousands are its grateful beneficiaries.

Dr. J. H. Ingraham, of New York, N. Y., had suffered from the effects of a severe cold for more than a year in the month of August, when his Cough seized him so much that he feared he would die, and he used the Oleosanion.

He raised blood, complained of pain in his side and chest, very much debilitated by night sweats. He was gone, and altogether he appeared to be sinking. He was so much relieved by the use of the Oleosanion, that by the month of November he was in Pittsburgh, Pa. with every prospect of being fully cured.

The following case of CONSUMPTION—was truly a wonderful one and places the Oleosanion, or All-Healing Balm, at the head of all remedies for eradicating that dreadful disease.

W. Hays, residing in this city, (New York) was afflicted with a severe cold in the early part of the year. His Cough became very troublesome and he began to raise blood. He complained of a severe pain in the chest and his breathing became so short that he could not walk without stopping. His night sweats reduced him very low, and under the care of several physicians in Brooklyn he told him they could do no good, as his disease was settled and fixed Consumption. He returned to this city to die among his friends. He was so weak that he could not walk without stopping. Although his friends had given up of him, he ever being a better, he commenced the use of the Oleosanion, or All-Healing Balm, and in a few weeks was so far restored as to be able to resume his business.

P. Lohan, residing at 52 Pine street, was severely afflicted with Asthma, in consequence of having a severe cold in the early part of last winter. Early part of the night he could sleep tolerably, but towards one o'clock in the morning, he became so severe, that he was obliged to get out of bed for the remainder of the night, leaning forward in a chair. His Cough was most distressing the day. He had, during his sickness, tried every thing without relief. He never had a good night's rest, until he commenced the use of the Oleosanion, or All-Healing Balm, when he had immediate relief, and before using half a bottle it was perfectly well, and now sleeps as quietly as ever did in his life.

Hundreds of cases could be given to prove the efficacy of the great remedy. And it possesses a property not to others, viz: it does not constipate the bowels. Reader, are you suffering under any of the symptoms of disease? Try this remedy—afflict the Patient in your side and chest—put the COUGH which deprives you of sweet slumbers; if you have Asthma, be assured this medicine in the world that will cure you so, and it will arrest all those disagreeable mucus which strike such terror to the mind and the dreadful forebodings of an untimely and dissolution.

CLICKENER'S
SUGAR COATED
VEGETABLE PILLS

Medicinal preparation is herein announced which has been found to be the most efficacious and safe, and which the public must acknowledge the advantages of. It is a purgative pill, and with SU-GAR, so that it leaves no taste whatever of its ingredients. In fact the medicine is so entirely different from a person were to swallow the pills without feeling what they were, he would believe them to be simply pure sugar, and he could be afterwards, unless by its great effect, aware that he had been taking medicine, for he is so skillfully prepared, that they do not grip the bowels, and thus the patient who takes them avoids two evils, and all other purgative medicines, namely: nausea and pain in the bowels. In all other sweet forms has the nature of being mixed with the sugar, and hence produces a flavor, which, to most persons, is more disagreeable than the medicine. In these pills this is altogether removed, the sugar and the medicine being entirely distinct from each other, so that the former must be thoroughly removed before the medicine can be taken. It is a remedy known to all diseases originating with impurity of blood. Pure blood is essential to health. We must not, however, be misled by the name, for then it takes time—and that in all health—to rectify it; but when the slightest defect of the system is indicated by constiveness, or any other morbidities, as that superfluities are gathering in the system, should at once be got rid of; for their removal leaves the system in a healthy state, and blood must be the result. This fact, as stated, is unknown to most people, who have an aversion to medicine, and the one is urgent, they prefer the disease to the cure, and incur constitution, or a fit of sickness, and then they are cured. Still they had some excuse; for medicine in almost all its forms, was nearly as disagreeable as it was beneficial. Now, however, it is most agreeable, for CLICKENER'S SUGAR COATED VEGETABLE PURGATIVE PILLS have no taste whatever of medicine, none of the nausea and griping, and none of the other evils of medicine, while their speedy effect in removing impurities from the system cannot be excelled by any other medicine that has ever been discovered.

It is necessary to say more here. If these pills are as described, the public will freely and gladly patronize them; and the memory asks a trial, which he is sure of receiving, to see if he agrees or no merit for them which they do not fully merit.

Dr. J. H. Ingraham, of New York, N. Y., had suffered from the effects of a severe cold for more than a year in the month of August, when his Cough seized him so much that he feared he would die, and he used the Oleosanion.

parts to the cold biting wind, without fire, alone sat a poor woman, holding to her chilled bosom her sick and dying babe, while upon a rude pallet of straw lay two shivering little creatures, her children too. Her eye was heavy with watching, her cheek sunken with hunger and suffering, her heart filled with the very gall and bitterness of life. Still how truly, oh! how truly answered that heart to the pang of a mother's love, as she gazed into the innocent face of her dying babe; how fast flowed the tears from eyes that had known little but sorrow and weeping, through many weary days; how deep and fervent was the prayer which came up from the very fountains of privation and grief. There was no heart near to sympathize, no kind hand to aid,—no soft word to soothe; the physician's healing art; charity's angel arm, came not to soften the dying moments of her babe; and as life flickered and waned in its fair urn, and the sobs of the mother sounded in that solitary room, as in the agony of her grief she exclaimed,—“A few pence had saved to me, my sweet babe,—as the sleepers on the pallet murmured in their uneasy slumber, “Mother, dear mother, give me some bread.”—as the keen wind came thro’ the crevices, and she clasped the dying child to her bosom; at that moment, a dancing woman, a stranger, with her wealth of thousands, and her ingots of gold and silver, made her last graceful bow, and took the princely sum which was hers, for a few moments pleasant labor.

As the spectators gave this last shout, the babe's innocent spirit winged its flight to Heaven, the mother gazed in despair upon all that remained to her of the little prattler whom she had so dearly loved.

TROUBLE AMONG THE LAWYERS.

Some time last winter we understood that Naan L. White, Esq. of Braintree, was fined twenty-five dollars, on the complaint of Fisher A. Kingsbury, Esq., Postmaster, for defrauding the Post Office revenue by sending pamphlets to sundry individuals with writing on the margins. At the last term of the Court of Common Pleas at Dedham, Fisher A. Kingsbury, Esq. was mulcted in the sum of twenty dollars and costs for knocking down the above named Naan L. White, Esq. We commend to their especial consideration the following well remembered lines—

Let dogs delight to bark and bite,
For 'tis their nature too;
Let bears and lions growl and fight,
For God has made them so;
But children you should never let
Your angry passions rise;
Your little hands were never made
To scratch each other's eyes—out.

In the County of Essex, at the last term of the Court, Ebenezer French, Esq. was arraigned to take his trial for an alleged assault and battery with intent to commit a rape upon Jane P. Johnson. The trial excited much interest, as the character of the defendant might have been deeply affected by the result. Upon a full hearing of the case, the defendant was acquitted in a most triumphant manner. The charge is said to have been premeditated malicious.

Of a somewhat singular character was a suit against J. M. Gourgass, Jr., Esq. of Quincy, in favor of Jotham Salisbury of Weymouth for an alleged neglect of duty in not defending an action which was commenced against said Salisbury a year or more ago. The circumstances were something as follows: In September, 1844, an action of trover was commenced against Salisbury to recover the value of certain articles of furniture which Salisbury had in his possession and which were alleged to be the property of the plaintiff. It appeared from the evidence that Mr. Salisbury called at Mr. Gourgass' Office in Quincy about the first of September, 1844, for the purpose of employing Mr. G. to contest the suit. After some conversation, Mr. Gourgass informed Mr. Salisbury that the action would not probably come to trial at the September term, as it could not be reached owing to the number of actions on the Court docket, but if it was reached Mr. Gourgass agreed to notify Mr. Salisbury.

The action at the September term was continued. Mr. Salisbury did not supply Mr. Gourgass with any money to summon witnesses nor with the names of any witnesses to testify in the case, and gave him no instructions in the defence. It was alleged and indirectly proved by the admission of Mr. Salisbury that he was to call at Mr. G's office previous to the December term, but after the first interview Mr. Gourgass never saw Mr. Salisbury till after the termination of the suit, and the action was disposed of on the eleventh day of December term, when Salisbury was defaulted. There were two grounds of defence to the action against Mr. Gourgass for neglect. The first was that he had not been instructed in a defence, the evidence of which is given above, and the second was that to the original action against Salisbury, in which the neglect is alleged, there was no valid defence. By a singular decision in the English Reports, it is made obligatory on the part of the defendant, Mr. Gourgass, to show that such was the case, a decision which is manifestly wrong, as it is generally impossible that the defendant could have the means so to do; whereas on the other hand, it seems to be sound doctrine that the plaintiff should show that there was a good defence as all the means of information were in possession of the plaintiff Salisbury, but the Court adopted the English decision, that Mr. Gourgass was bound to show that there was no defence to the original action, which position was successfully sustained. The case has excited much interest among members of the bar as a verdict against Mr. Gourgass would have made it necessary for every lawyer, when an individual called upon him to defend an action or to consult him on any subject, to summon witnesses to hear all the conversation which passes between counsel and client—a course of proceeding which would make public many of the private and most intimate relations of life. The Court instructed the Jury to render a verdict on both the points above alluded to; and they immediately upon retiring stood eleven to one that Mr. Gourgass was not only not guilty of any neglect, but that Mr. Salisbury in the original action had no valid defence. The other Jurymen, Mr. Tirrell of Weymouth, after some consultation agreed with his fellows in the last point, that Mr. Salisbury had no defence but nevertheless thought that Mr. Gourgass was guilty of neglect in not defending the action, and a general verdict of not guilty was returned.

It seems that the position in which Mr. Tirrell is placed is a singular one to say the least. His verdict was to this effect that Mr. Salisbury had no defence to the suit against him, yet Mr. Gourgass was guilty of neglect in not defending an action to which there was no defence. Mr. Gourgass is well known as an attentive and accurate counselor.

THE DISTRICT SCHOOL READER. We are pleased to see this last of Mr. Swan's Series of Readers. As his previous publications have appeared, we have taken occasion to express our warm approval, and we are happy to say that, in our opinion, this volume fulfills the promise of its predecessors. It appears to be precisely what is wanted for the highest classes in our district schools.

Mr. Swan has long sustained the character of an able, efficient Teacher, and in the composition of his series of school books his powerful mind has been aided by years of practical experience. It is reasonable to suppose that a man who has long been a teacher better understands the wants of children than a new theorist, and if his genius is equal to the task, that he can better supply those wants. Mr. Swan has shown that he has ability equal to the best which has ever been exerted in this department of literature, and we cannot doubt that a speedy and general adoption of his works, in the schools of New England at least, will not only give him an ample reward for his labor, but induce him to persevere in his efforts for the benefit of the rising generation.

The Editor of one of the Boston papers thinks there is only one defect in the “Reader”—“it has not a sufficient number of humorous pieces.”—There is “no disputing about taste”—we think it amply provided with such, and we have no doubt that a majority of those who examine it will agree with us in opinion. But if not, this is a very slight defect, which may be easily remedied in a new edition, and the editor alluded to awards the highest praise in admitting it to be so nearly perfect.

UNITARIANS AGAINST SLAVERY. One hundred and seventy Unitarian Ministers have protested against the Institution of American Slavery. Most of them reside in New England. The protest appears to have been sanctioned by the denomination, generally. The conclusion is in these words: “And we on our part, do hereby pledge ourselves, before God and our brethren, never to be weary of laboring in the cause of human rights till Slavery be abolished, and every Slave made free.”

MARYLAND ELECTION. Complete returns have been received by which it appears that the whigs have a majority in both branches of the Legislature. Of the six members of Congress, two are whigs and four democrats, being a whig loss of four members.

APPOINTMENT. The Governor and Council of this State have commissioned C. W. Moore, (the Native American candidate for the office of Lieutenant Governor,) as a Justice of the Peace.

DEMOCRATIC COUNTY NOMINATIONS. At the convention of the democrats, at Dedham, on Tuesday last, Hon. Artemas Brown of Medway, Edgar K. Whitaker, Esq., of Needham, and Col. Jesse Pierce of Stoughton, were unanimously nominated as candidates for the Senate of this State from Norfolk County.

CHEERING INTELLIGENCE. It is now stated that Cassius M. Clay will recommence the publication of “The True American,” at the city of Lexington (Ky.) in one or two weeks. It is to be printed at Cincinnati, (Ohio.)

LIBERTY PARTY CANDIDATES. Willis Fisher of Franklin, Martin Torrey of Foxboro', and John Gulliver of Roxbury, have again been nominated candidates for the Senate, by the Liberty Party of Norfolk County.

THANKSGIVING. The Governor of this Commonwealth, with the advice and consent of the Executive Council, has appointed Thursday, the twentieth day of November next, as a day of Thanksgiving.

ASSAULT. Two Irishmen, who were employed on the Old Colony Railroad at Braintree, quarrelled with each other last Wednesday evening, which resulted in one of them being stabbed in the face with a large knife. He was arrested, examined before a magistrate, and for want of bail committed to Dedham jail to await his trial.

FIRE. The house of Mr. Robert Mullen, on Willard Street, in the process of erection, was set on fire last Wednesday forenoon through the carelessness of a young boy who it is supposed lighted a match and applied it to the shavings, as there were no other persons in the building. Before the fire was arrested, the building was ruined.

ODD FELLOWS' DEDICATION. The Hall over E. Bent & Son's Store in this town, which has been recently fitted up in a superior manner for the use of Mount Wollaston Lodge, I. O. of O. F., was appropriately dedicated to the purposes of the order last Tuesday evening. The hall presents a very beautiful appearance, and reflects much credit to the taste and labors of the committee. It was crowded on the evening of dedication, and the assembly seemed much interested in the exercises. After an impressive prayer from Rev. Bro. S. A. Davis, the following Ode was sung:—

From East to West, o'er land and sea,
Where brothers meet and friends agree,
Let incense rise from hearts sincere,
The dearest offering gathered here.

Let notes of praise united tell
Of thoughts most kind where brothers dwell;
Though clouds may dim our darkened way
Some kindly hand shall be our stay.

Our trust reposed in Him alone
Who ne'er will contrite hearts disown,
Our faith shall mark that Holy Light
Which beams our dearest joys unite.

At this period an Address was delivered by Rev. Bro. Albert Case of Worcester, one of the officers of the United States Grand Lodge, I. O. of O. F., which for elegance of diction and eloquence of oratory gained for the author the deserved compliment of a brilliant writer and an excellent speaker. He was listened to with great attention. The following dedicatory Ode was then sung:—

Air—“Scots who have with Wallace bled.”
Welcome, brothers, strangers, all,
Welcome aged ones and youth,
While we dedicate this Hall
To the cause of truth!

Father, thou who art above,
Ever will we trust in Thee;
And may thy unchanging love
Our protection be!

Let us faithful be and true,
Dwellers in a world perverse,
And in all our journey through,
Bless—but never curse!

May these walls ne'er echo give
To contention, raging high;
But as brothers let us live,
And as brothers die!

To no sects are we confined,
Such as boast in outward form;
But the friendless here shall find Shelter from the storm!

Bowing to no useless creeds,
Trusting in the God above,
May we sower wide the seeds
Of Friendship, Truth and Love!

Pledged to country and to God,
Opposition yet shall cease;
And earth so long by sorrow trod,
Shall be the Home of peace!

Brothers! when we meet no more
In these seats, to Friendship given,
May we all, life's labors o'er,
Meet again in Heaven!

FIREMAN'S ENTERTAINMENT. On invitation of the Tiger Engine Company, the members of the Granite, with their engine and apparatus, united with them last Monday afternoon and passed the time in working their respective “tubs” with each other until the evening, when they repaired to the house of the Tigers and partook of a sumptuous collation, provided by Capt. Frederic Hardwick, Jr. after which hilarity and social enjoyment closed the pleasant and friendly meeting of the two companies.

THE CHENEY FAMILY. A new family of singers are about to make their appearance in New York. It is thought by competent musical judges that they will altogether surpass the Hutchinson family. The family consists of nine brothers and sisters, but four of them, however, make their appearance, one sister and three brothers. The family name is Cheney.

WORKS OF MRS. OSGOOD. Clark & Austin of New York, are about publishing in an elegant volume, the poetical works of Mrs. Osgood, the accomplished lady of the celebrated portrait painter of that name.

PUBLIC HOUSE. The United States Hotel, at the head of the Worcester Railroad Depot, has been greatly enlarged during the past year; and has acquired a reputation second to no similar establishment in the United States. Messrs. Clark & Holman are perfectly au fait to the business, and have acquired golden opinions from travellers from every section of the Union.

GUERNATORIAL CANDIDATE. Ex Mayor Harper, the celebrated publisher, is talked of as the Native American candidate for Governor in New York. He is a gentleman of great practical knowledge, and of the most unbending integrity of character.

NEW ROUTE TO NEW YORK. It is now stated that the railroad to connect the Fall River Road with the Old Colony Railroad at Braintree, passing through the towns of Middleboro', the Bridgewater and Randolph will be forthwith put under contract. It will open a direct communication with New Bedford, Fall River, Taunton and New York.

MELANCHOLY AFFAIR. Mr. George Long, of this town, whose death is mentioned under the proper place, lost his life by skimming an ox which had died. He had a small puncture on one of his hands, and it is supposed during the operation accidentally vaccinated himself with some of the poisonous matter, as the arm soon began to swell and the whole system seemed infected. He lingered less than a week in the most violent pain.

MAYORALTY OF NEW YORK. General George P. Morris, will, it is thought, be nominated as the democratic candidate for the mayoralty of New York at the coming spring election, in the event of the present worthy incumbent of that office declining a re-election. Gen. Morris is very popular in the military department of the party, and his fame as the American song writer will establish a generous support from a large class of persons irrespective of all party considerations.

LIBERTY PARTY STATE CANDIDATES. Samuel E. Sewall of Boston, has been re-nominated by the Liberty Party of this State as their candidate for Governor at the ensuing election. Dr. John M. Brewster of Pittsfield, has been substituted in place of Elihu Burritt of Worcester—the “learned blacksmith”—who declined the nomination, for the office of Lieutenant Governor.

UNPLEASANT SITUATION. Two persons who had gone upon the outer ledges of Colasset, on Monday morning last, lost their boat in consequence of the strong northeast wind. Several ineffectual attempts were made to rescue them. About sunset the life boat went off, and took them safely to the shore.

AN HONEST MAN. The Boston Mercantile Journal states that on Saturday last, a gentleman lost a one hundred dollar bill while passing from the State Bank to the Merchants' Bank, in that city, but it fortunately fell into the hands of an honest man, having been picked up on the steps of the Merchants' Bank by Mr. Nathan H. White, [of the firm of T. & N. H. White of this town, boot and shoe manufacturers,] who by making enquiries at the State Bank, was enabled to discover and return it to the lawful owner.

From the Norridgehook (Me.) Journal.
We publish the following, as among the many evidences which we are constantly receiving of the increasing popularity of Dr. Jayne's Expectorant. I would have no interest in “conspiring” it—any further than we have a desire to promote the health and happiness of our fellow creatures, who are wasting away with those complaints, for which this medicine is an absolute remedy. And in calling the attention of the public to it, we feel that we are in the faithful discharge of our duty.

New Portland, Nov. 4, 1842.
Mr. Pratt, Sir: I wish you to send me 3 bottles of Jayne's Expectorant, and in this connection, I would say, that I deem it an invaluable medicine, and an article that no family should be without for a single day. I have used it for two years in my family, and have always found it a quick and efficient remedy for tightness of the lungs, produced by long protracted colds, which produce the short hacking cough, the precursor of consumption, in which it so frequently terminates in this climate. If properly and seasonably administered, it will effectually break up the most violent colds, and thereby prevent the many violent fevers, so frequently consequent upon them. I would most cheerfully recommend this medicine to the public in all cases of that nature, as invaluable.

GREAT ENGLISH REMEDY
For Coughs, Colds, Asthma, and Consumption.

The great and only remedy for Coughs, Colds, Asthma, and CONSUMPTION, is the HUNGARIAN BALM OF LIFE, discovered by the celebrated Dr. Buchan of London, England, and introduced into the United States under the immediate supervision of the inventor.

The extraordinary success of this medicine, in the case of pulmonary diseases, warrants the American agent in soliciting for treatment the worst possible cases that can be found in the community—cases that seek relief in vain from any of the common remedies of the day, and have been given up by the most distinguished Physicians, as confirmed and incurable. The Hungarian Balm has cured and will cure, the most desperate cases. It is no quack nostrum, but a standard English medicine, of known and established efficacy.

Every family in the United States should be supplied with Buchan's Hungarian Balm of Life, not only to counteract the consumptive tendencies of the climate, but to be used as a preventive medicine in all cases of Colds, Coughs, Spitting of Blood, pain in the side and chest, irritation and soreness of the Lungs, Bronchitis, difficulty of breathing, hectic fever, night sweats, emaciation and general debility, Asthma, Influenza, Hooping Cough and Croup.

It is sold in large bottles, at $1 per bottle, with full directions for the restoration of Health.

Pamphlets, containing a mass of English and American certificates, and other evidence, showing the unequalled merits of this Great English Remedy, may be obtained of the agents, gratuitously.

DEVALCATION. It has been discovered that a book-keeper in the private banking house of Halford, Bancker & Co., New York, has embezzled funds to a large amount, perhaps nearly eighty thousand dollars. It was done by keeping up a regular system of fraudulent and false entries for years. Gambling led to the crime.

One of the standing regulations of a certain New York Theatre, informs the public that “no improper characters will be admitted unless accompanied by gentlemen.”

A butcher was lately strangled by a young calf which he was carrying on his shoulders to the slaughter house, in London. The animal caught his throat in its teeth, he fell, and having hold of the animal's feet with both hands, he was prevented from extricating himself.

Hon. Alexander H. Everett, Commissioner to China, has been compelled to return on account of continued ill health, and has arrived in New York.

It is worthy of our earnest appeal, to our readers to study their individual interest, and persevere Mr. C. Brinckerhoff's advertisement—it speaks of his Restorative as a specific. It cannot be denied that it has effected the greatest and most satisfactory results. As a last resort, it will even then in the low stages, raise the patient, extirpate the disease, and strengthen and restore the system. 26

N. B. People passing through this village from the neighboring towns to visit the famous city, (where they are liable to be caught in traps equal to mock auctions in New York city) would find it to their advantage to call and examine Mr. Russell's style of cut-ting. To those acquainted with the abilities of Mr. Russell as an artist, it is superfluous to say one word, but from all unacquainted we would solicit an early call to examine his new style of Pattern or Overcoat, designed for Fall or Winter wear. Feeling confident that he will give satisfaction we recommend him to the public.

Tailoring.
I WOULD respectfully intimate to my friends and the public, that I continue to occupy rooms in the Store of E. Packard. Feeling grateful for past favors, I would solicit a continuance of that patronage so liberally bestowed since I commenced business. Being regularly in receipt of the latest and most approved English, French and American styles, with the abilities of first rate workmen, (employing none else) enables me to produce a garment every way desirable in point of style and finish.

People are requested to call and examine for themselves, and not be misled by the numerous advertise-ments, for "by square and rule works many a fool." My theory of cutting being entirely different from that used by country tailors, aids me in giving a perfect fit to the most imperfect form.
All asked is a fair trial and no favors.

C. BRINCKERHOFF'S
HEALTH RESTORATIVE.
THE practical use of the Health Restorative being to relieve and cure those most hazardous and ag-onizing of all diseases, Consumption, Liver Complaint, severe Coughs and Colics, and Pains in the Side and Chest, it is considered both right and proper that a statement be made more particularly relating to its properties. In the first place, it is fortunately com-mended of native plants herbs and roots, and has not, therefore, the poisonous and dangerous min-eral preparations, which only palliate at the best instead of curing disease. The fact of the Resto-rative being purely vegetable, is corroborated by the testimony of the eminent Dr. Chilton of New York, who after a careful and minute examination of it, de-clares the truth of it, and so effectually stops cavil on that point. Further, the promptness of the action of this medicine is without doubt unparalleled; it shows such energetic action in eradicating disease and then healing the part, that the transition from impaired and enfeebled health to convalescence is astonishing and conclusive. The happiness of being the instrument of such unbounded benefit, is too great to permit this Restorative to circulate as heretofore within narrow circumscribed limits, and the Proprietor has made such arrangements with his General Agent that the remedy can be reached by all. The continual access-ions of certificates stating the most touching cases of disease, happily cured, prevents the possibility of their being published to any extent, but yet they are left at the office of the General Agent for examination. The following certificate is from Dr. Chilton, the well known New York Chemist.

"I have analyzed a bottle of medicine called 'C. Brinckerhoff's Health Restorative' and find that it does not contain Mercury, or any other metallic prepa-ration, nor opium in any of its forms. It is composed of vegetable matter entirely."

POETRY.

For the Quincy Patriot.

ON THE DEATH OF A YOUNG LADY.

She is dead—she is dead—no longer on earth
Will she join in the song of gladness and mirth;
Her spirit has flown to the realms of delight,
Where pleasures eternal have banished the night.

She has gone to her home above the blue skies,
Where beings immortal their happiness prize;
The crown of a seraph now rests on her brow,
And the hosts of high Heaven do welcome her now.

She sings with the angels loud anthems of praise,
As Jehovah, in love, his beauty displays;
The chorus re-echoes through heaven's high dome,
And glory and splendor, surround the white throne.

She is gone—the earth is no longer her home—
On Canaan's fair shores she ever will roam;
No trouble or sorrow will enter her heart,
But angels to her of their joy will impart.

REMEMBRANCE OF EARLY DAYS.

There's a peaceful spot in a quiet vale,
Where the blackbird sings his song,
And the tureloup lark in the morning gale
Goes carolling along,
With a note so soft, and sweet, and clear,
That it seems to come from another sphere.

That happy home, with its birds and flowers,
And the stream that murmurs by,
And the tree, where in summer's sultry hours
It was luxury to lie,
Was the Eden of my early years,
And memory thinks of it with tears.

O that childhood is a happy time;
I have never known a joy
Such as when at morning I would climb,
A young light-hearted boy,
Up the rugged side of that steep old hill
Where in fancy I am wandering still!

But the flowers may bloom, and the birds may sing
And I shall see them—never!
For Fate comes mournfully whispering
That we're parted now forever,
Though there I'd leave my latest sigh,
Though there, in death, I'd wish to lie.

What is this Heaven, of which so much
Is dreamed, and said, and sung?
O, if its pleasures should prove but such
As we all have known when young,
And old haunts and friends we there shall see,
What a realm of bliss indeed 'twill be.

SPEAK BOLDLY.

Be thou like the first apostles;
Be thou like heroic Paul;
If a free thought seeks expression,
Speak boldly! speak it all!
Face thine enemies, accusers;
Scorn the prison, rack, or rod!
If thou hast a truth to utter,
Speak! and leave the rest to God.

ANECDOTES.

About a hundred years ago, a minister on Cape Cod having heard that some of his parishioners were in the habit of making him the subject of their mirth at a grog-shop, he one Sabbath preached a discourse from the text, "And I was the song of the drunkard." His remarks were of a very moving character, so much so that many of his hearers left the house in the midst of the sermon. The next Sabbath he delivered one more pointed than the first, from the text, "And they being convicted out of their own consciences, went out one by one." On this occasion the guilty ones resigned themselves to the lash of the pastor with as good grace as possible.

It is the practice to give a morning and evening gun at the military station at West Point, the reports of which are heard at some distance. A gentleman on the Point recently took into his service a woman son of the Emerald Isle, who was startled by the report of the evening gun and anxiously enquired the cause of the explosion. When told that it was the sundown gun, exclaimed, "Och, bless me, and does the sun make such a devil of a thunder as that on going down, in this country?"

A Yankee school master in Mississippi received the following letter from his mother "down east": "Dear son—come home. A rolling stone gathers no moss. Your affectionate mother I want. To which he replied—"Dear Mother—I went. Come here. A setting hen never gets fat."

"Well, Uncle Joe, you've got your girl married off, have you?" "Yes!" "Really, Providence smiled upon you?" "Smiled! no, bless you, she snickered right out!"

The Great Remedy

Consumption, Asthma, Dyspeptic Consumption, Spitting of Blood, Bronchitis, Difficulty of Breathing, Hoarseness, Influenza, Croup, Colds, Pain in the Breast and Side, Dyspepsia, and various affections of the Stomach and Liver.

Folger's Olosanion, or All-Healing Balm.

It is acknowledged that more persons die of Consumption than of any other disease. It is estimated that in the United States over THIRTY THOUSAND PERSONS annually fall victims to this dreadful scourge. The cause of the evil is generally overlooked. A short dry Cough is the precursor—or a neglected cold. These symptoms are deemed unimportant. Pain in the Side, Hectic and night Sweats follow, and death ends the scene.

Would you find a REMEDY FOR THE EVIL? Here it is. The experience of more than twenty years has proved its efficacy, and thousands are rejoicing in its effects.

Case of INCIPENT CONSUMPTION—George W. Burnett, Esq. of Newark, N. J., had suffered under the effects of a severe cold for more than a year, and in the month of August, when his Cough had reduced him so much that he feared he would die, at this time, complained of pain in his side and chest, and was very much debilitated by night sweats. His appetite was gone, and altogether he appeared to be rapidly sinking. He was so much relieved by the use of this remedy that by the month of November he left for Pittsburg, Pa. with every prospect of being permanently cured.

The following case of CONSUMPTION—The case was truly a wonderful one, and places the Olosanion, or All-Healing Balm, at the head of the list of remedies for eradicating that dreadful disease.

George W. Hays, residing in this city, (New York) was seized with a severe cold in the early part of the summer. His cough became very troublesome and he began to raise blood. He complained of a severe pain in the chest and his breathing became so short that he could not walk any distance without stopping for breath. His night sweats were so profuse that he was unable to sleep. He was under the care of several physicians in Brooklyn, who told him they could do no good, as his disease was settled and fixed Consumption. He removed to this city to die among his friends. He was by this time so weak that he could not walk without assistance. Although his friends had now given up all hope of his ever being any better, he commenced using the Olosanion, or All-Healing Balm, and in a few weeks was so far restored as to be able to resume his business.

Mr. T. Lakin, residing at 52 Pine street, was severely afflicted with Asthma, in consequence of having taken a severe cold in the early part of last winter. In the early part of the night he could sleep tolerably well, but towards one o'clock in the morning his asthma became so violent that he was obliged to get up and sit for the remainder of the night leaning forward on a chair. His cough was most distressing through the day. He had, during his sickness, tried almost every thing without relief. He never had a better night's sleep than he had since he commenced using the Olosanion, or All-Healing Balm, when he found immediate relief, and before using half a bottle of it was perfectly well, and now sleeps as quietly as he ever did in his life.

Hundreds of cases could be given to prove the efficacy of the great remedy. And it possesses a property superior to all others, viz: it does not constipate the bowels. Reader, are you suffering under any of the above symptoms of disease? Try this remedy—It will alter the Pulse, reduce the Heat and check the flight of the COUGH which deprives you of sleep, and restores you to health. It will arrest all those disagreeable symptoms which strike such terror to the mind and give such dreadful forebodings of an untimely and speedy dissolution.

Sold at one dollar, per bottle, by REDDING & Co. State street, Boston; and by the following appointed agents:

Mrs. Hayden, Quincy; J. Babcock, Milton; M. D. Plummer, Milton; Eli Thayer, Weymouth; Wm. A. Torrey, do; King & Nash, Abington; N. N. Dyer, do; A. E. Dubois, Randolph; R. Gleason, Dorchester.

CERTIFICATES. From W. Abercrombie of Quincy, Merchant Trader.

To Mr. Joseph J. Clark, Agent of Dr. Fernand's Medicine.

Sir—I have been afflicted at different times, for more than four years, with Spitting of Blood, Inflammation of the Lungs, and Disease of the Liver, causing great debility in my system, and evidently fast approaching me the worst of all human diseases to which mortals are heir to—Consumption. I have in vain tried many medicines which were recommended, but from all of them I obtained no the least relief. About eighteen months ago, I was induced to try Dr. Fernand's Vegetable Indian Arcanum, by the use of which medicine I have been restored to good health, and have not raised any blood since the use of the first bottle of this excellent preparation.

WYMAN ABERCROMBIE. Quincy, April 3d, 1843.

From Ibrahim Bartlett, Cashier of the Quincy Stone Bank.

To Mr. Joseph J. Clark.

DEAR SIR—I am gratified to learn that you are about to publish a place for the sale of Dr. Fernand's Vegetable Indian Arcanum.

I do most cheerfully certify that I am well acquainted with Mr. Wyman Abercrombie, and believe that his general health as he has stated, has been on the decline—that he has had frequent returns of raising blood, to such degree, as to cause his friends to be greatly alarmed. For the year past I have noticed convincing evidence that his health has been restored, and I have it from his own lips that he attributes his recovery, entirely to the use of Dr. Fernand's Medicine.

I feel it my duty to say a word or two in favor of this valuable medicine. I have for more than twenty years been afflicted with a complaint which at times is very distressing, great flatulency, with a cold heaviness and tightness of the chest, extreme headache, dimness of sight, palpitation of the heart, etc.

I am free to say, that since I have used this preparation which has cured my friend, I feel greatly relieved, and have strong hopes, after following the directions, of being restored to health. I think very highly of this medicine, and am confident that it will prove efficacious in the cure of many diseases, if once resorted to.

Yours, truly, IBRAHIM BARTLETT. Quincy, May 3d, 1843.

MISCELLANY.

THE DEATH OF WIND-FLO. Three hundred years ago—so I hear—told not long since, from the mouth of a native of a white man, but born of the blood of whom Logan and Tecumseh sprang—hundred years ago, there lived on the now forming an eastern county of the powerful of the American States, a powerful tribe, governed by a brave and wise chief. This chieftain was called by a name which in our language signifies Unrelenting. His deeds of courage and sublimity were renowned through out small portions of the northern continent. There were only dwellers in his lodge—himself and his wife; for twenty moons had filled and since his wife, following four of her offspring was placed in the burial ground.

As the Unrelenting sat alone one evening, his rude hut, one of his people came to him that a traveller from a distant tribe entered the village and desired food and rest. Such a petition was never slighted by the man; and the messenger was sent back an invitation for the stranger to abide in the lodge of the chief himself. Among the people no duties were considered more important than arranging the household comforts. Those duties were never performed the host's own hand, his son having returned from the hunt on which he had been with a few young companions at early dawn. In a little while the wayfarer was led to dwelling by him who had given the first of his arrival.

You are welcome my brother, said the Unrelenting.

The person to whom this kind salutation addressed was an athletic Indian, apparently of middle age, and habited in the scanty of his species. He had the war tuft on his head, under which flashed a pair of blue eyes. His rejoinder was friendly and brief.

"The chief's tent is lonesome—his are away?" continued the stranger, in a pause, casting a glance of inquiry around him.

"My brother says true that it is lonely the other answered. "Twelve seasons the Unrelenting saw five children in the bow of the wigwam, and their mother was to him. He was strong like a cord of fibres. Then the breath of Manita stole the fibres one by one asunder. He looked a pleasant eye on my sons and daughters wished them for himself."

The Unrelenting turned as he spoke pointed to an object just inside the open tent.

A moment or two before, the figure of a dead glided noiselessly in and taken his back of the chief. Hardly twelve years had the age of the new comer. He was a child! His limbs, never distorted by ligatures of civilized life, were graceful, ash, and symmetrical and springy as the young stag's. It was the last and liveliest chieftain's sons—the soft-lipped, nimble Foot.

With the youth's assistance, the preparations for their frugal meal were soon completed. After finishing it, as the stranger appeared weary, a heap of skins were arranged him in one corner of the lodge, and himself down to sleep.

It was a lovely summer's evening, moon shone and the stars twinkled, and the thousand voices of a forest night, sounded every direction. The chief and his son, reclined at the opening of the tent, enjoyed cool breeze which blew freely upon them, and the piece of deerhide that served as a door, sometimes flung it down to darken the apartment, then raising it up again, as if to let in the bright moon.

Wind-Foot spoke of his hunt that day had met with no success, and, in a boy's

A MEDICINAL preparation is herein announced which has been long desired, and sought for, and which the public must at once be made acquainted with the advantage of. It is a purgative pill, COATED WITH SUGAR, so that it leaves no taste, and is entirely free from any of its internal ingredients. In fact the medicine is so entirely disguised, that if a person were to swallow the pills without being informed what they were, he would believe them to be lumps of pure sugar, nor could he afterwards, unless by its great purgative effect, suspect that he had been taking medicine, for these pills are so skilfully prepared, that they do not grip the bowels; and thus the patient who takes them avoids two evils which attend all other purgative medicines, namely: nausea and pain. Medicine administered in all other sweet forms has the disadvantage of being mixed with the sugar, and hence produces a mingled flavor, which, to most persons, is more disagreeable than unadulterated bitterness. In these pills this is altogether avoided; the sugar and the medicine being entirely distinct from each other, so that the former produces such an aversion to medicine, the latter can manifest itself to the taste. It is universally known that nearly all diseases originate with impurity of blood. Pure blood is therefore essential to health. We must not, however, wait until the blood is impure, for then it takes time and that time passed in ill health—so that we must prevent the impurity of the system by indicating by constiveness, or any other sign, it admonishes us that superfluities are gathering in the system, which should at once be got rid of; for their removal is the chyle (from which the blood is formed) in a healthy state, and purity of blood must be the result. This fact, as stated, is universally known; but people have such an aversion to medicine, that unless the case is urgent, they pre-er the disease to the cure, for an impaired constitution, or a fit of sickness, renders them for the rest of their conduct. Still they had some excuse; for, heretofore, medicine in almost all its forms, was nearly as disagreeable as it was beneficial. But now, thanks to the discovery of the operation of other medicine—while their speedy effect in removing all impurities from the system cannot be excelled by any other medicine which has ever been discovered.

It is unnecessary to say more here. If these pills are as described, the public will freely and gladly patronize them; and the proprietor merely asks a trial, which he is sure of receiving, to prove that he assumes no merit for them which they do not fully possess.

Clickener's Sugar-coated Vegetable Purgative Pills are prepared and sold, wholesale and retail, and for exportation, by C. V. CLICKENER & Co., Chemists, at wholesale and retail drug warehouse, No. 79 and 81 Barclay street, New York. Price 3 cents per box, with full directions, and sold by the following list of Agents:

LETTER FROM BOSTON.

Boston, Oct. 15th, 1845.

Prosperity of Boston—Brief notice of the Democratic candidates for Governor and Lieutenant Governor of Massachusetts.

The fall business of the city has set in most briskly; immense sales of merchandise are effected daily by our Boston merchants, to be transported, as it were, all over the world. Well may the "times" be set down, for all branches of business, as prosperous. It is rare that we hear of a failure here. In the business hours of the day, our streets seem continually crowded with people and vehicles; and judging by appearances, the rage for pulling down and putting up edifices continues unabated. There was much good sense in the inquiry of the countryman, strolling through our streets last summer and witnessing piles of bricks and lumber here, and granite there, in view of many of the streets of the city, "when will Boston (says he) ever be finished?" Probably it will not be until in point of wealth and population it outstrips every other city of the Union.

The State election is near at hand, and judging from appearances it will pass off with very little excitement. Four "Richmonds" for the office of Governor are in the field, and who will remain to be seen. The Legislature will be called upon to decide that question.

Hon. Isaac Davis, the democratic candidate for Governor, is now in the meridian of life, being forty-seven years of age. He is a native of Northboro', Worcester County, in this State, and is the son of Mr. Phineas Davis, a respectable farmer and tanner of that town. Mr. Davis was reared to the business of a tanner and carrier until he was eighteen years old, when meeting with an accident by which he was disabled, he became a student and was fitted for college. He entered Brown University in 1817, and graduated in 1822. Mr. Davis, like many other students devoted himself during his college vacations to keeping school, and thus almost entirely defrayed the expenses of his collegiate course. He studied law and was admitted to the Bar in 1825—just twenty years since. By his uniform integrity, and unwearied application to the business of his profession, he soon obtained an extensive and lucrative practice. The records of the Courts of Worcester County, show the rich and speedy results of his business habits. Within two years from his admission to the practice of law, the business of Isaac Davis was as large and profitable as that of any other gentleman at the Worcester Bar, and has so continued to the present time. Mr. Davis has ever stood deservedly high with the community around him. In the cause of education, of agriculture, and of all those charitable and religious associations which are the glory of our age, Mr. Davis has acted and is still acting a conspicuous part. As a politician, Mr. Davis is of the Jeffersonian school of democracy. He avowed those principles at the early age of eighteen years, and has never departed from them. His talents and acquirements are of a high order, and eminently fit him for the office of Governor of the old Bay State. His name has been repeatedly before the public as a candidate for offices of honor, and in 1843, he was elected a State Senator from Worcester County. As a member of that branch of the Legislature he soon distinguished himself. The people could not find a public servant more worthy of their confidence than the Hon. Isaac Davis.

George Savary, the democratic nominee for Lieutenant Governor, is a highly respectable citizen of Bradford, in Essex County, and is by occupation a boot and shoe manufacturer. He was one of the earliest supporters of General Jackson, and was in 1843, a State Senator.

Such are the democratic candidates for Governor and Lieutenant Governor, coming as they are fresh from the ranks of the people, who can doubt their fidelity or ability. Yours, "NORTH END."

The special Agent sent from Ohio, to demand of the Governor of Virginia the persons indicted for kidnapping, has returned to Ohio. The Governor of Virginia could not act on the requisition without the advice of the Council of State, who were not in session.

William Slade, (which) has been re-chosen Governor of Vermont, in convention of the Legislature, by one hundred and thirty-two votes to eighty-nine for other candidates. The whig candidates for Lieutenant Governor and Treasurer, received one hundred and thirty-six each.

A brick building, three stories high, one hundred and fifty-four feet long, is now going up at Thompsonville, (Ct.) for the purpose of accommodating newly invented Knitting Machinery, by which each girl can knit sixty yards a day.

It is reported that the Judge who presided at the anti-rent trials, has received an anonymous letter mailed at Boston, stating that a number of persons have sworn to "put the patroun out of the way," and "to have the blood of the Judge, when he is not thinking of it!" He is reproached in unmeasured terms for using the expression during the trial of Boughton "why did you not shoot the seconded, sir?"

There is no manner or more despicable feeling in the human breast than that which makes man or woman ashamed of honest labor. The poor street cleaner, in all the filth of useful though foul labor, is worthier of respect than the proud and indolent spendthrift who lives upon his inheritance, or by means whose honesty is questionable.

The United States has been put to the expense of three millions in its preparation to meet in mortal strife our neighbors of Mexico.

The Hon. Franklin Pierce, who has been appointed by the Governor of New Hampshire, to fill the vacant Senatorship of that State, declines the appointment.

The number of Temperance Societies in the United States is estimated at ten thousand, with four millions of members.

QUINCY PATRIOT.

SATURDAY, OCT. 18, 1845.

John A. Green, Editor.

To "G. P. G." We received at a late hour Thursday evening, a communication of seven closely written pages of manuscript, in reply to "O," of last week, on "Native Americanism," with a very urgent request to have it inserted in the Patriot this week. Now, in the first place, we must enter our protest against such long-winded affairs, as they crowd out other matter of equal importance and are seldom read with any degree of interest; "short and to the point" should be the motto of every writer for a weekly newspaper. Secondly, we do not employ half a dozen composers consequently cannot give two columns to any writer so late in the week as Thursday, by leaving out other matter already prepared; as by that time we have our 'first side' and the principal part of the inside form ready for press, it would cause us a great deal of extra labor and trouble. We shall endeavor to find room for our friend's letter next week, when 'O' must expect to find himself 'used up.'

DANCING SCHOOL. As will be observed by our advertising columns, a school is soon to be opened in this town, for instruction in Dancing. The teacher has had considerable experience, possesses a knowledge equal to the most proficient of his profession, and cannot fail to give satisfaction to his patrons. He should be encouraged by all who love this kind of exercise and recreation.

HATS, MUFFS, FURS, ETC. Shute, at his rooms, No. 173 Washington Street, Boston, [see his advertisement.] has received his fall supply of hats, muffs, furs, etc. The most tasty can be suited and the economical secure a great bargain from his large stock of fashionable and well made hats and caps. His muffs and furs are superior articles and bought expressly for his trade. An excellent chance is here offered to buy good articles at fair prices from a well selected variety.

DEMOCRATIC TOWN COMMITTEE. The following named gentlemen were selected for the Democratic Town Committee for the Town of Quincy, at a meeting held in the Town Hall, on the 4th inst., for the ensuing year:

William S. Morton, William Torrey, Levi G. Folsom, John Parker, John A. Green, Eli T. Gile, Obed Allen, James M. Beckford, William B. Dugan, Jonathan Jameson, James Lovell, John A. Billings, John C. Edwards, John V. Clark, Charles P. Tirrell, Shadrach Wade, Jonathan Baxter, Thomas White, Ebenezer Bent, Jr., Thomas Lucas, Joseph W. Robertson, Charles Curtis, Wyman Abnerombie, John A. Simpson, Jonas Hallstram, Jr., Hervey H. Park, Samuel Rawson, Thompson Baxter, James M. Hayden, Nathan H. White, William Wood, Joel Clements.

BOOKS AT AUCTION. Messrs. Otis, Broders & Co., in connection with their general bookselling business have evening sales at auction at their rooms, 120 Washington Street, Boston, every evening. Those wishing to replenish their libraries or to provide reading for the coming long evenings will find this a good opportunity; every book sold is warranted perfect and new, and from their very extensive stock, books in every department of literature can be procured at much less than the usual bookstore prices. Quick sales, small profits, and a cash business is their rule.

THE MERCHANT'S MAGAZINE AND COMMERCIAL REVIEW comes out with its customary promptitude among the monthlies, and having so repeatedly given our general opinion of the publication, and its claims being too well known to need any further call of the public to their attention, we shall content ourselves with a brief enumeration of the articles:

Commerce before the Christian Era;
The Government and the Currency, by Henry Middleton of South Carolina;
The Commerce and Progress of Chili;
Statistics of Trade and Manufactures in Belgium;
The Mining System of Chili;
The Champagne Districts of France;
Ocean Steam Navigation;
Progress of English Railways, by J. E. Bloomfield.

The subjects speak for themselves. The article by Mr. Middleton is devoted mainly to Banks and exhibits a thorough investigation and knowledge of the subjects by the author. In the article upon the Trade and Manufactures of Belgium we were struck with the statistical matter which must have called into requisition a large amount of persevering industry. Many of the historical facts, like those in the article upon "Commerce before the Christian Era" are interesting indeed. A curious fact struck us which will be found in the article upon Champagne wines. The Mercantile Law Department and the monthly Review of the Agricultural, Commercial, Industrial and Manufacturing affairs of the North, South, East and West of our own as well in a measure of other countries, we leave to those who are sensible enough to procure and examine for themselves at the fountain head. We see some interesting facts and statistics relative to the New York and Erie Railroad, which subject is so necessary to be understood by all. Get the number and examine it for yourselves, and you will all be well paid the trifling cost and amount of time employed upon it.

FIRE IN DORCHESTER. Last Wednesday morning, about four o'clock, the house of Dr. Darius Brewer, a short distance from the Dorchester and Milton Bank, was discovered to be on fire, but by the vigilance of the inmates it was extinguished without doing much damage. The origin of the fire is supposed to have been from some defect in stove pipe.

THE CHORAL. This is a collection of Church Music, adapted to the worship of all denominations, by B. F. Baker, director of music at Rev. Dr. Gannett's Church, and L. B. Woodbury, director of Music at Essex Street Church, Boston, pp. 320—Price $7 per dozen Boston, Otis, Broders & Co., 120 Washington Street.

"Mr. Editor—Allow me, through your paper, to congratulate the lovers of sacred music, (and their name is Legion,) upon the appearance of 'The Choral,' lately issued by Otis, Broders & Co. The compilers, Messrs. Baker and Woodbury, are favorably known to the musical world; and this part of the community will, I am sure, feel still more indebted to them, for their recent efforts to restore some of the noble tunes to their merited but long lost places. The venerable names of China, Coronation, Truro, Lenox, Majesty, and many others from its pages, met me like the faces of old friends; and their swelling tones pealed forth, as I had the pleasure of hearing them a few evenings since by some of their enthusiastic admirers, did my heart good, and revived treasured and hallowed associations. Some of the listeners, who made no pretension to a scientific knowledge of music, caught the inspiration of this 'concord of sweet sounds,' and voices swelled out those old familiar notes, which had been silent many a year.

"Among the many recollections of Psalmody which are forced upon public attention, it seems to me that this has some peculiar claims to favor. Besides the standard of old tunes to which we have alluded, there are many established favorites from later composers. The title page states that it is adapted to the worship of all denominations of Christians. As far as I can judge, this is true; for there are anthems and select pieces, suitable for almost every variety of religious occasions. There are compositions for missionary, temperance, and benevolent anniversaries, some of which were written expressly for this work. I hope the work will be appreciated by a discerning public as it deserves."

VERMONT ASYLUM FOR THE INSANE. By the ninth annual report, which is just published, this Institution, located in Brattleboro', appears to be in a prosperous condition. The buildings have been enlarged this season by the increase of about eighty additional rooms, affording greater accommodations and improving the means of classification. Three hundred and sixty-two patients have enjoyed its advantages the past year, ninety-nine have been discharged, and two hundred and sixty-three now remain. Of those discharged, fifty-nine have recovered. The terms are fixed at two dollars per week for the first six months, and one dollar and fifty cents per week afterwards. Patients from other States are received on the same terms as those from Vermont.

DECLINATION AND CONVENTION. Hon. Henry Williams declines another nomination for member of Congress from the ninth District in this State. A Convention has been called to select a candidate and among the number of persons mentioned is the name of Hon. Samuel A. Turner of South Scituate. This gentleman has been a member of both branches of the State Legislature, discharged with satisfaction many municipal offices which his townsmen have conferred upon him, is a descendant of one of the old and respectable families of the Old Colony, deeply attached to the best interests and prosperity of the Pilgrim soil, eminently qualified to represent the District by talents, experience in public affairs, and untiring devotion to democratic principles, and his nomination would doubtless secure a full and united vote and result in an election. A better selection we think could not be made.

CHOICE OF OFFICERS. The tenth annual meeting of the Weymouth Anti-Slavery Society was held on the 3d instant, and the following officers chosen:

President, Mrs. Hannah Pierce.
Vice President, Mrs. Mary H. Cook.
Corresponding Secretary, Miss Anne Warren Weston.
Recording Secretary, Miss Mary Weston.
Treasurer, Miss Lucretia A. Cowing.
Counselors, Mrs. Elizabeth Richards, Mrs. Marcia Hunt and Miss Sarah Reed.

GEORGIA ELECTIONS. It is believed by the returns thus far received that the whig candidate for Governor has been re-elected. The Senate will probably be democratic, and the House whig, with a whig majority on joint ballot.

SENTENCE OF ANTI-RENTERS. At the recent Court of Oyer and Terminer in Delaware County, (N. Y.) John Van Steenberg and Edward O'Connor have been sentenced to be executed on the 29th of November; four others were sentenced to the State Prison for life, and several more to various terms of imprisonment.

WISCONSIN ELECTION. Morgan L. Martin, (dem) has been elected Delegate to Congress from Wisconsin Territory, by a majority of about one thousand votes.

THE CHRISTIAN CITIZEN, a valuable and highly interesting paper, under the editorial management of Elihu Burritt, the learned blacksmith, and published at Worcester, (Mass.) is to be enlarged and improved.

THE TRUE AMERICAN. This paper, edited by Cassius M. Clay, has made its appearance. The first number since the outrage upon his printing office at Lexington, contains "an appeal (of eleven columns and a half) to Kentucky and the world," under his signature.

PICKPOCKETS. John Sullivan of this town, as appears by an advertisement in a late Boston paper, had his pocket book cut from his pocket while attending the late Liberty Convention at Tremont Temple in that city.

John Wright of the Tontine Restorator, Wilson Lane, Boston, has purchased the two splendid brick buildings on the corner of Tremont and Boylston streets, which he intends converting into a first rate hotel. The location is one of the most desirable in the city.

H. M. Paine of Oxford, (Mass.) who is now in Washington, (D. C.) was fired at by some one with an air gun, on the 6th inst., but not killed. The bullet went through his hat, above his head. This was the fifth attempt upon his life.

The Boston Post states that the Hollis street Church, in Boston, has made a present to the Rev. John Pierpont of five thousand dollars, being a part of the fund of the church. The society has entered an injunction against the proceedings, and the result will have to be determined in a court of law.

While we are healthy and strong, enjoying life free from pain, how little do we think of those who are around us, (and that we see daily) ready to grasp at anything that would heal an effected lung or liver, little thinking that we ourselves may be thus situated in a very brief space of time. GREAT ENGLISH REMEDY

For Coughs, Colds, Asthma, and Consumption.

The great and only remedy for Coughs, Colds, Asthma, and CONSUMPTION, is the HUNGARIAN BALM OF LIFE, discovered by the celebrated Dr. Buchanan of London, England, and introduced into the United States under the immediate superintendence of the inventor.

The extraordinary success of this medicine, in the case of pulmonary diseases, warrants the American agent in soliciting for treatment the worst possible cases that can be found in the community—cases that seek relief in vain from any of the common remedies of the day, and have been given up by the most distinguished Physicians, as confirmed and incurable. The Hungarian Balm has cured and will cure, the most desperate of cases. It is no quick nostrum, but a standard English medicine, of known and established efficacy.

Every family in the United States should be supplied with Buchanan's Hungarian Balm of Life, not only to counteract the consumptive tendencies of the climate, but to be used as a preventive medicine in all cases of Coughs, Spitting of Blood, pain in the side and chest, irritation and soreness of the Lungs, Bronchitis, difficulty of breathing, hectic fever, night sweats, emaciation and general debility, Asthma, Influenza, Hooping Cough and Croup.

It is sold in large bottles, at $1 per bottle, with full directions for the restoration of the system, and in smaller bottles, containing a mass of English and American certificates, and other evidence, showing the unequalled merits of this Great English Remedy, may be obtained of the agents, gratuitously.

POETRY.

For the Quincy Patriot.
WOMEN.

CONSOLATORY TO BISHOP ORRDERDONK.

I like the pretty little souls
And want deny I do;
I like them singly or in shoals
And pray, sir, do not you?

Who e'er was known to run away
When wit and beauty woo'd?
I read of one who did some day,
But shouldn't think he could.

His name was Joseph, it took place
Some thousand years ago;
The only one of all his race
That ever acted so.

And that was quite a strange event,
I'd have you understand;
But he was on an errand sent
With other work in hand.

Therefore you may conclude in fact
That when a woman woos,
The men, from Adam down, will act
Quite as the women choose.

E'en those who now have censured thee
For kissing one or two,
But let them have a chance, you'll see
That very thing they'll do.

We might, perhaps, in Bishops hope
To find the passions tame;
But saint and sinner, priest and pope,
Are flesh and blood the same.

WYOMOUTH.

[By request.]

FORGET NOT.

And am I then remembered still,
Remembered too by thee?
Or am I quite forgot by one Whom I no more shall see?

Oh! say not so, for that would add
Fresh anguish to my lot;
I dare not hope to be recalled,
Yet would not be forgot.

Had they who parted us but known
How hearts like ours can feel,
They would have spared us both a pang
Beyond their power to heal.

I know not if thy heart retains Its wonted warmth or not;
Though I'm forbidden to think of thee,
Thou'll never be forgot.

May'st thou enjoy that peace of mind
Which I can never know;
If that's denied my prayer shall be
That I may share thy woe.

If we e'er meet in after years,
Thou'll find that I am changed;
My eyes grow dim, my cheeks grow pale,
But not my love estranged.

From memory's page the hand of death
Alone thy name shall blot;
Forget, forsake me, if thou wilt,
Thou'll never be forgot.

THE SEASON.

Summer's gone and over!
Fogs are falling down;
And with russet tinges,
Autumn's doing brown.

Boughs are daily ruffled
By the gusty thieves,
And the Book of Nature
Getteth short of leaves.

Round the tops of houses,
Swallows as they flit,
Give like early tenants,
Notices to quit.

Skies, of fickle temper,
Weep by turns and laugh—
Night and Day together,
Taking half and half.

So September endeth—
Cold and most perverse—
But the months that follow,
Sure will pinch us worse!

ANECDOTES.

'Cousin William,' said a merry, mischievous young girl, 'what do you think I heard a pretty young lady say of you?' 'I don't know—something good I hope.' 'Who was it, Coz?' 'Shan't tell you but it's the truth—a very pretty girl said something about you.' 'Well, tell me what it was.' 'I shan't; unless you will give me that Annual that I wanted.' 'Well, agreed—you shall have it now tell me?' 'Well, now—don't blush so—she said you were the ugliest looking man she ever laid her eyes on; and off ran the little wretch with a merry laugh that made the house ring again.'

Three young men were tried in New York State for shooting and mortally wounding a dog, and the written verdict of the twelve good men and true, was in the following words: 'All three guilty; plaintiff's damages assessed at sixpence; and each of the defendants to have another shot at the dog!'

An unfortunate landlord, going the round to collect his rents, sent his servant forward to prepare his tenants for his visit. On reaching the house and finding his servant taking a survey, and apparently endeavoring to gain admittance—'What's the matter?' said he; 'is the door bolted?' 'No, master,' was the reply; 'but the lodger is!'

A noble Lord asked a clergyman once, at the bottom of his table—'Why the goose, if there was one, was always placed next the parson?' 'Really,' said he, 'I can give you no reason for it; but your question is so odd, I shall never see a goose again without thinking of your lordship.'

'Do you entertain my proposition?' said one who had been arguing very absurdly. 'By no means,' said the person addressed, 'but your proposition contains me.'

DR. FERNANDS'
Vegetable Indian Arcanum,
FOR THE CURE OF

Consumption and Liver Complaint, Inflammation of the Lungs and Spitting of Blood, Scrofula, Erysipelas,
Salt Rheum, Rheumatism, Gout, Obsolete Cutaneous
Eruptions, Pimples or Pustules on the Face, Female Weakness, Jaundice, Piles, Impudence in Life, Enlargement and Pain in the Bones, and Diseases arising from an injudicious use of Mercury. The complement is greatly improved by this medicine.

THIS is a preparation which Dr. Fernands, who is an Indian of the Cherokee nation, has used with great success in the above complaints, practicing as he has for many years as an Indian doctor among several tribes. Dr. Fernands, who prepares this medicine, does not contend that it will cure all the diseases which the human system is liable to experience, but feels safe in assuring the public that when it has been taken according to his directions, it has never failed, in any of the complaints above mentioned, of effecting a speedy and permanent cure. This medicine is entirely of a vegetable nature, being a compound of roots and herbs collected by Dr. Fernands himself; consequently it is a preparation which may be taken by those of the most delicate constitutions, or even a small child, without the least fear as to its results upon the system. One bottle will convince the incredulous invalid that the world has been said in its favor than its virtues safely warrant. Many respectable physicians have used, and even prescribed, this valuable medicine.

To prevent imposition, each bottle of directions accompanying the medicine will be signed by J. K. Fernands, in his own hand writing, and also by his only authorized Agent for the New England States.

J. K. FERNANDS, Indian Physician,
JOS. J. CLARK, Agent for New England States.

CERTIFICATES.

From W. Abercrombie of Quincy, Merchant Trader.

To Mr. Joseph J. Clark, Agent of Dr. Fernands' Medicine:

SIR:—I have been afflicted at different times, for more than four years, with Spitting of Blood, Inflammation of the Lungs, and Disease of the Liver, causing general debility in my system, and evidently fast entailing upon me the worst of all human diseases to which mortals are heir. I have tried many medicines, but from all of them I obtained not the least relief.
About eighteen months ago, I was induced to try Dr.
Fernands' Vegetable Indian Arcanum, by the use of which medicine I have been restored to good health, and have not raised any blood since the use of the first bottle of this excellent preparation.

WYMAN ABERCROMBIE.

Quincy, April 3d, 1843.

From Ibrahim Bartlett, Cashier of the Quincy Stone Bank.

To Mr. Joseph J. Clark:

DEAR SIR:—I am gratified to learn that you are about to establish a place for the sale of Dr. Fernands'
Vegetable Indian Arcanum.
I do most cheerfully certify that I am well acquainted with Mr. Wyman Abercrombie, and believe that his general health as he has stated, has been on the decline; that he has had frequent turns of raising blood, to such a degree as to cause his friends to be greatly alarmed. For the year past I have noticed convincing evidence that his health has been restored, and I have from his own lips that he attributes his recovery, entirely to the use of Dr. Fernands' Medicine.

I feel it my duty to say a word or two in favor of this valuable medicine. I have for more than twenty years been afflicted with a complaint which at times is very distressing, great fatigues, with a cold heaviness and pain in the chest, extreme headache, dimness of sight, palpitation of the heart, etc.

I am free to say, that since I have used this preparation which has cured my friend, I feel greatly relieved, and have strong hopes, after following the directions, of being restored to health. I think very highly of the medicine, and am confident that it will prove efficacious in the cure of many diseases, if once resorted to.

Yours, truly,
IBRAHIM BARTLETT.

The Great Remedy

Consumption, Asthma, Dyspeptic Consumption, Spit-

the Breast and Side, Dyspepsia, and various affections of the Stomach and

Folger's Olosanion, or All-Healing Balsam.

It is acknowledged that more persons die of Consumption than of any other disease. It is estimated that in the United States over THIRTY THOU-SAND PERSONS annually fall victims to this deadly scourge. The cause of the evil is generally overlooked. A short dry Cough is the precursor—or neglected cold. These symptoms are deemed unimportant. Pain in the Side, Hectic and night Sweats follow, and death ensues the scene.

Would you find a REMEDY FOR THE EVIL?
Here it is. The experience of more than twenty years has proved its efficacy, and thousands are rejoicing in its effects.

Case of INCURABLE CONSUMPTION.—George
W. Burnett, Esq. of Newark, N. J., had suffered under the effects of a severe cold for more than a year, and in the month of August, when his Cough had reduced him so much that he feared he would die,
at this time, complained of pain in his side and chest, and was very much debilitated by night sweats. His appetite was gone, and altogether he appeared to be rapidly sinking. He was so much relieved by the use of this remedy that by the month of November he left for Pittsburgh, Pa. with every prospect of being permanently cured.

Read the following case of CONSUMPTION.—
The cure was truly a wonderful one, and places the 'Olosanion or All-Healing Balsam,' at the head of the list of remedies for eradicating that dreadful disease:

George W. Hays, residing in this city, (New York) summers with a severe cold in the early part of the summer. His cough became very troublesome and he began to raise blood. He complained of a severe pain in the chest and his breathing became so short that he could not walk any distance without stopping for breath. His night sweats reduced him very low.
He was under the care of several physicians in Bur-lyn, who told him they could do no good, as his disease was settled and fixed Consumption. He removed to this city to die among his friends. He was by this time so weak that he could not walk without assistance. Although his friends had now given up all hope of his ever being any better, he commenced using the 'Olosanion, or All-Healing Balsam,' and in a few weeks was so far restored as to be able to resume his business.

Mr. T. Laban, residing at 52 Pine street, was severely afflicted with Asthma, in consequence of having taken a severe cold in the early part of last winter.
In the early part of the night he could sleep tolerably well, but towards one o'clock in the morning his Asthma became so severe that he was obliged to get up and sit for the remainder of the night leaning forward on a chair. He could not sleep, most distressing through the day. He had during his sickness, tried almost every thing without relief. He never had a good night's rest in ten months, until he commenced taking the Olosanion or All-Healing Balsam, when he found immediate relief, and before using half a bottle of it was perfectly well, and now sleeps as quietly as he ever did in his life.

LIBERTY PARTY RESOLVES.

MR. GREEN.—Please insert the following Preamble and Resolutions adopted at the County Convention of the Liberty party for Norfolk County and oblige, Yours, etc.,

Whereas, we are willing to allow to all men what we claim for ourselves, sincerity in professed political principles;

And whereas, the Whig party in Massachusetts, though professing, and doubtless honestly, to be opposed to slavery and slavery influences, yet do not profess to consider their abolition of so much consequence as continuing in force the present tariff, or dividing the proceeds of sales of public lands among the several States, nor can act as a party or as individuals efficiently against slavery while they recognise slaveholders as good Whigs and look to them for support in securing their paramount objects—

And whereas, the Democratic party in this State, though doubtless as honest as the Whigs in their professed regard for equal rights to all men, or at least all white men, yet by their recent acts have shown that they regard no protective tariff, no distribution, the union of the party, though obtained by succumbing entirely to the dictation of the South, as of more consequence than supporting the rights of all men—

And whereas, the Abolitionists, though differing in opinion about tariffs, or public lands, agree in considering the rights of all men, regardless of complexion as paramount to all other political objects; therefore

Resolved—That until either the Whig or Democratic party openly and in good faith embrace on their banner, "Equal Rights for All," we will continue our organization as a political party on our platform of no union with slaveholders or their supporters, and by deed as well as word maintain our principles.

Resolved—That we continue to cherish unabated confidence in the integrity and efficiency of the Liberty party, and that with all due respect to the candidates of the other parties, we will use all honorable means to promote the election of Samuel E. Sewall of Roxbury, for Governor, and John M. Brewster of Pittsfield, for Lieutenant Governor of this Commonwealth, and Willis Fisher of Franklin, Martin Torrey of Foxboro', and John Gulliver of Roxbury, for Senators for Norfolk County for the ensuing political year, and we cordially invite all who embrace our principles to give efficiency to them, by uniting with us at the polls.

OLD COLONY RAILROAD. The rails are laid from Plymouth to Abington, and the first freight ever carried over the road was sent on Monday week by R. Hobart of the latter place, being four tons of bar iron, to be rolled into plates by Messrs. N. Russell & Co., of Plymouth, and freight has been taken back from their works to Abington and Hanson.

The freight train on the Old Colony Railroad was thrown off the track, on Friday evening of last week, about a mile from Plymouth, in consequence of running over a blind horse which had fallen on the track. The engine tender was damaged considerably.

RECENT ELECTIONS. Georgia, beyond a doubt, has gone for the whigs. The whig candidate for Governor has been re-elected by a majority not far from fifteen hundred votes. The House will be whig, but in the Senate there will be a democratic majority of one.

The election for members of the Ohio Legislature has taken place, and from the returns already received there is scarcely a doubt that the whigs have been successful in retaining a majority in both branches.

Pennsylvania has gone for the democrats—the Legislature in both branches will contain democratic majorities.

The democratic candidate for Congress in Florida has doubtless been chosen.

FIRE IN WEYMOUTH. A barn was destroyed by fire in Weymouth, last Saturday evening, about seven o'clock belonging to Caleb Stetson of Boston. The fire is supposed to have been caused by some children at play who had kindled small fires near the barn. An alarm was raised in this town, and the engines, Tiger and Vulture, went to the scene of the conflagration.

SIGNS OF WINTER. Snow fell on Monday night last, in Albany, (N. Y.) to the depth of an inch. It passed away rapidly, under the influence of a warm atmosphere, the next morning. Snow to a considerable depth now covers the Catskill Mountains.

FLOOR. The last accounts from New York, state that flour has declined twenty-five cents per barrel, and the market dull. The exporters would ship freely at five dollars twenty-five cents, but holders do not yield the price to this point, consequently there has yet been no transactions of magnitude.

POTATOES. A late letter from Halifax, (N. S.) says that potatoes are selling there for fifty cents a barrel—but that they are pouring in from all quarters, and prices must fall. The crop in Nova Scotia is large.

BOSTON DAILY WHIG. Several numbers of this paper have been received. It is published by Messrs. Merrill, Cobb, Wildes & Co., and edited by R. J. Attwill, Esq. In appearance it is worthy of all praise, and the editorial department gives evidence of the ability and assiduity characteristic of our old friend. Success attend him and the enterprise.

The changeableness of our climate renders it important that we pay a strict regard to health, and yet how few there are who pay that attention to it so essential to our very existence. When a settled cough is evident, are we not anxious for some soothing remedy pleasing to the taste. The Health Restorative produces this effect, without leaving any nauseous taste. We recommend it to all. 28.

Cancer, Scrofula and Goitre.

Ample experience has proved that no combination of medicine has ever been so effective in removing the above diseases, as JAYNE'S LIFE PRESERVATIVE. It has effected cures that have been truly astonishing, not only of Cancer and other diseases of that class, but has removed the most stubborn diseases of the Skin, Swellings, Dyspepsia, etc., etc. This medicine enters into the circulation, and eradicates diseases wherever located. It purifies the blood and other fluids of the body, removes obstruction in the pores of the skin, and produces enlargements of the glands or bones. It increases the appetite, removes headache and drowsiness, and invigorates the whole system, and imparts animation to the diseased and debilitated constitution. There is nothing superior to it in the whole materia medica. It is perfectly safe and extremely pleasant, and has nothing of the disgusting nausea accompanying the idea of swallowing medicine.

GREAT ENGLISH REMEDY

For Coughs, Colds, Asthma, and Consumption. The great and only remedy for Coughs, Colds, Asthma, and CONSUMPTION, is the HUNGARIAN BALSAM OF LIFE, discovered by the celebrated Dr. Buchan of London, England, and introduced into the United States under the immediate superintendence of the inventor.

The extraordinary success of this medicine, in the case of pulmonary diseases, warrants the American agent in soliciting for treatment the worst possible cases that can be found in the community—cases that seek relief in vain from any of the common remedies of the day, and have been given up by the most distinguished Physicians, as confirmed and incurable. The Hungarian Balsam has cured and will cure, the most desperate of cases. It is no quack nostrum, but a standard English medicine, of known and established efficacy.

Every family in the United States should be supplied with Buchan's Hungarian Balsam of Life, not only to counteract the consumptive tendencies of the climate, but to be used as a preventive medicine in all cases of Colds, Coughs, Spitting of Blood, pain in the side and chest, irritation and soreness of the Lungs, Bronchitis, difficulty of breathing, hectic fever, night sweats, emaciation and general debility, Asthma, Influenza, Hooping Cough and Croup.

Sold in large bottles, at $1 per bottle, with full directions for the restoration of Health. Pamphlets, containing a mass of English and American certificates, and other evidence, showing the unequalled merits of this Great English Remedy, may be obtained of the agents, gratuitously.

C. BRINCKERHOFF'S

THE vegetable kingdom is provided by the Creator with herbs of different properties and adapted when properly administered, to every condition of disease. It will not be contended but that it requires invention and well directed skill to prepare these various medicaments so that their remedial powers will be well drawn out and the better applied; that is, apparent a necessity to require support. The Proprietor of the Health Restorative, in the number of years since he first commenced its preparation from the great family recipe, has devoted a great portion of his time to the study of the medical effect and strength of each herb used in the compound. This study has been the result of more perfectly convincing him of the prior curative power of the Health Restorative, as a remedy perfectly adapted to the cure of Consumption, Liver Complaint, Asthma, Coughs, and all the troubles in the Side and Chest—for these diseases it is particularly recommended, with a certainty of success and satisfaction which can be felt in its free and open use. Those who have been healed by its means. Notion of pecuniary recompense away the proprietors, trusts he is influenced solely by the great pleasure in ministering to the relief of suffering humanity, who has devoted great expense to the future of the remedy, and deals out so largely in the quantity given that the income barely suffices to cover the immense outlay. Let those who are seeking a Balm, Gilead, use the Health Restorative. The following certificate is from Dr. Chilton, the well known New York chemist.

"I have analyzed a bottle of medicine called 'Brinckerhoff's Health Restorative,' and find that it is not contain Mercury, or any other metallic preparation, nor opium in any of its forms. It is composed of vegetable matter entirely."

MUSIC.

"A power that bids the soul's white wings Spread gloriously forth,"—Miller.
Sadness and tears and wild alarm,
The clarion's echo wakeneth—
But the bugle's note at even-tide,
Day's busy walk forsaketh—
With gentle voice, the silver flute
Absent and dear friends halloweth—
Though oft forgotten painful themes,
On memory's page it planteth.

The heavy fall of martial drum
Where glittering armour gleameth,
No soothing chord awakes there—
Where conflict's banner streameth;
But at the hour when sweet bells chime
And care with daylight fadeeth,
Our hearts would ne'er dispel the calm,
Which round them sunset shadeth.

And when around the bed of death
Ye press the brow that burneth,
There's music in the latest sigh—
No more the spirit mourneth;
And harmony more sacred swells
When infant lips adareth,
And song of faith and holy hope,
In fervent worship soareth.

When sorrow recks not music's charm,
When sympathy forgetteth,
We turn to nature's soothing shell,
Nor song nor smile regretteth;
But cherish e'er the fairest note,
Creation's organ fameth—
And find a shrine in wood or glen
When she devotion claimeth.

LEAVES.

AN AUTUMN LYRIC.

Oh! how they fade—they fall—they die!
They die—and no one grieves—
Nature's fair fragile family,
The family of leaves.
Where are they now, the fresh, the sweet,
That beautified the infant year?
These shrill whispers rustling at my feet
Shrill whisper, Hark!

Already blasted—no more soon
Are these—the festering multitude—
The bud of April, leaf of June,
The glories of the wood?
That wreathed the green aisle with their mass,
And, flickering in the golden ray,
Paved with mosaic rich its grass?
Alas! even they!

Can these be they whose myriads made
Landscapes of golden hue,
The massive grandeur of whose shade
Relieved Heaven's glare of blue?
No more where foliage thickest spread
The wood bird sings its carol sweet;
The fallen leaves "rustle to the tread"
Of careless feet!

This field of vegetable death,
Dead summer's relics vain,
Conceals a ghastlier field beneath—
The family of Man!
Pierce with thought's eye the valley eld—
Lo! multitudinous as the leaves
Lie the lost images of God,
And no one grieves.

The mighty ones of earth, who changed
Its aspect once, as did These leaves the landscape's when high ranged
They all beneath them hid;
Humbly they lie, and lowly rot,
Though graven, gilded marbles hide,
Like those of sadder, humble lot
Who nameless died!

Yet such the grandeur of our globe!
The imperial purple's own
Is but concealed corruption's robe,
And canopy, and throne!
And even thy beamy brow, throned one!
Are but as these—now fluttering on
Th' oak's topmost branches in the sun,
Now fallen—fallen—gone!

MODERN FINE LADY.

False rumps, false teeth, false hair, false faces,
Alas! poor man! how false thy case is;
Instead of woman, lovely woman's charms,
To clasp cork—gum—cool—varnish—in thy arms.

ANECDOTES.

A clergyman recently preached a sermon which one of his auditors commended.
"Yes," said a gentleman to whom it was mentioned, "it was a good sermon, but he stole it."
This was told the preacher. He resented it, and called on the gentleman to retract what he had said. "I am not," replied the aggressor, "very apt to retract my words, but in this instance I will. I said you had stolen the sermon, I find I was wrong, for on returning home, and referring to the book whence I thought it was taken, I found it was there."

A debating society 'down east,' one evening undertook to discuss the question, "whether intemperance or slavery is productive of the most evil in the United States." A worthy deacon, contending against the former, proposed to show its effect on its victims "in eternity." "Stop, stop," cried the chairman, "that's out of the United States."

An old bruiser was heard, the other day, advising a youngster to get married, "because," said he, "then, my boy, you'll have somebody to pull off your boots for you, when you go home drunk."

"Father, I heard you say in the railroad car yesterday, that you are in favor of low fares!"
"I am."
"I thought so, for I saw you kissing our short servant girl this morning."

The Great Remedy

Consumption, Asthma, Dyspeptic Consumption, Spitting of Blood, Bronchitis, Difficulty of Breathing, Hoarseness, Influenza, Croup, Colds, Pain in the Breast, and Side, Dyspepsia, and various affections of the Stomach and Liver.

Folger's Oleanosian, or All-Healing Balm.

It is acknowledged that more persons die of Consumption than of any other disease. It is estimated that in the United States over THIRTY THOUSAND PERSONS annually fall victims to this dreadful scourge. The cause of the evil is generally overlooked. A short dry Cough is the precursor of a neglected cold. These symptoms are deemed unimportant. Pain in the Side, Hectic and night Sweats follow, and death ends the scene.

Would you find a REMEDY FOR THE EVIL? Here it is. The experience of more than twenty years has proved its efficacy, and thousands are rejoicing in its effects.

Case of INCIPENT CONSUMPTION.—George W. Burnett, Esq. of Newark, N. J., had suffered under the effects of a severe cold for several years, and in the month of August, when his Cough had reduced him so much that he feared he would die, he commenced using the Oleanosian. He raised blood at this time, complained of pain in his side and chest, and was very much debilitated by night sweats. His appetite was gone, and altogether he appeared to be rapidly sinking. He was so much relieved by the use of this remedy that by the month of November he left for Pittsburg, Pa. with every prospect of being permanently cured.

Read the following case of CONSUMPTION.—The cure was truly a wonderful one and places the Oleanosian or All-Healing Balm at the head of the list of remedies for eradicating that dreadful disease.

George W. Hays, residing in this city (New York) was seized with a severe cold in the early part of the summer. His cough became very troublesome and he began to raise blood. He complained of a severe pain in the chest and his breathing became so short that he could not walk any distance without stopping for breath. His night sweats reduced him very low. He was under the care of several physicians in Brooklyn, who told him they could do no good, as his disease was settled and fixed Consumption. He removed to this city to die among his friends. He was by this time so weak that he could not walk without assistance. Although his friends had now given up all hope of his ever being any better, he commenced using the Oleanosian, or All-Healing Balm, and in a few weeks was so far restored as to be able to resume his business.

Mr. T. Labin, residing at 52 Pine street, was severely afflicted with Asthma, in consequence of having taken a severe cold in the early part of last winter. In the early part of the night he could sleep tolerably well, but towards one o'clock in the morning his Asthma became so severe that he was obliged to get up and sit for the remainder of the night leaning forward on a chair. His cough was most distressing through the day. He had, during his sickness, tried almost every thing without relief. He never had a good night's rest in ten months. Until he commenced taking the Oleanosian or All-Healing Balm, he found no relief. He found immediate relief, and before using half a bottle of it was perfectly well, and now sleeps as quietly as he ever did in his life.

Hundreds of cases could be given to prove the efficacy of the great remedy. And it possesses a property superior to all others, viz: it does not constipate the bowels. Reader, are you suffering under any of the above symptoms of disease? Try this remedy—it will allay the Pain in your side and chest—put to flight the COUGH which deprives you of sweet sleep—her and repose; if you have Asthma, be assured there is no medicine in the world that will cure you so speedily, and it will arrest all those disagreeable symptoms which strike such terror to the mind and give such dreadful forebodings of an untimely and speedy dissolution.

To Mr. Joseph J. Clark, Agent of Dr. Fernand's Medicine.

Sir—I have been afflicted at different times, for more than four years, with Spitting of Blood, Inflammation of the Lungs, and Disease of the Liver, causing general debility in my system, and evidently fastening upon me the worst of all human diseases to which mortals are heir to—Consumption. I have in vain tried many medicines which were recommended, but from all of them I obtained not the least relief. About eighteen months ago, I was induced to try Dr. Fernand's Vegetable Indian Arcanum, by the use of which medicine I have been restored to good health and have not raised any blood since the use of the first bottle of this excellent preparation.

MISCELLANY.

FASHION.

Fashion rules the world, and a most tyrannical mistress she is—compelling people to submit to the most inconvenient things imaginable for fashion's sake.

She pinches our feet with tight shoes, or chokes us with a tight neckhandkerchief, or squeezes the breath out of our body by tight lacing; she makes people sit up by night when they ought to be in bed, and keeps them in bed when they ought to be up and doing. She makes it vulgar to wait on one's self and genteel to live idle and useless.

She makes people visit when they would rather stay at home, eat when they are not hungry, and drink when they are not thirsty. She invades our pleasure, and interrupts our business.

She compels the people to dress gaily, whether upon their own property or that of others, whether agreeable to the word of God or the dictates of pride.

She ruins health and produces sickness—destroys life and occasions premature death. She makes foolish parents, invalids of children, and servants of us all.

She is a tormentor of conscience, despoiler of morality, an enemy to religion, and no one can be her companion and enjoy either.

She is a despot of the highest grade, full of intrigue and cunning, and yet her husbands, wives, fathers, mothers, sons, daughters, and servants, black and white, voluntarily have become her servants and slaves, and vie with one another, to see who shall be the most obsequious.

GOODNESS. Let the misanthrope grumble as he will, there is many a sunny spot to cheer the path of life. An incident, trifling in itself, but charmingly illustrative of benevolence and virtue, passed under our window recently, says the Philadelphia United States Gazette.

A little girl was crying along the pavement, overburdened by two baskets of chips.

"What is the matter child?" said a lovely young lady, in kindest accents.

"They are so heavy," replied the girl, sitting down the load.

"Tell me where you live, and let me carry one for you."

"Well, my little friend, do you take one basket home, and I will stay here and guard the other, till you return for it."

With a bright smile away trudged the tiny porter(ess), and there stood the benevolent lady, the daughter of one whose name is an honor to the city; whose high sense of duty, and whose unyielding integrity, the Chancellorship of the Exchequer could not move, "for modern degeneracy had not reached him." The child found her treasure safe, and that charming lady (God bless her!) stepped lightly on her way, her heart swelling with emotions that the wisest and the best might envy. She did a simple deed, "and blushed to find it fame."

WOMAN. To the honor, to the eternal honor of the sex, be it said, that in the path of duty, no sacrifice is with them too high or too dear. Nothing is with them impossible, but to shrink from what love, honor, innocence, religion requires.

The voice of pleasure or power may pass by unheeded, but the voice of affliction never. The chamber of the sick, the pillow of the dying, the vigils of the dead, the altars of religion, never fail to excite the sympathies of woman. Timid though she be, and so delicate that the winds of heaven may not too roughly visit her, yet she fears no danger, and dreads no consequences. Then she displays that undaunted spirit which neither courts difficulties nor evades them; that resignation which utters neither murmurs nor regret, and the patience in suffering, which seems victorious even over death itself.—Judge Story.

PICKING UP A PIN. Standing in the porch of a noted hotel, say a New York paper, we observed a gentleman pick up a pin and carefully place it on his collar. "That's the way to do it, my boy," said a man from the western part of the State, who has risen by his own energy from poverty to an income of forty-thousand a year; "if your eyes are always as sharp you will rival me in wealth before your hair is gray."

BE AS EASY AS YOU CAN. Whatever you have to do—happen what may—never fight, foam or chafe; but endeavor to preserve a temperate calmness of mind, which may be largely secured by habit, and which contributes not only to your success, but likewise is essential to your general comfort. There is a happy medium between phlegmatic and lazy indifference, and self destroying irritability—and it is a medium, combining at once energy and calmness, at which every one who has anything to do in this world, should aim. Why, what a fever will a man put himself into to-day about that which he will laugh at to-morrow; and yet—so little wisdom do we learn by experience—you may on the following morn, hear the same individual once more in one of his Sir Anthony Absolute's frenzies. His life is a succession of passionate surges and of mental earthquakes. He frets himself, as it were, into fiddle strings, but makes no music. He dies indeed, before he reaches smooth waters and unclouded skies—a victim to his temper. He was a good fellow—yes a philosopher—who always took a pinch of snuff between flushing his bird and firing at it. He was never flurried; though if we were a "bird" we would rather be shot at by any other gunner than by him. There's nothing like coolness—it never breaks things in its impatience. Coolness—did you ever see it tumble up stairs, or do itself a mischief? Study to be cool—ay, even if the house be on fire, or the horse ran away. Dangers retreat when coolly they are confronted.

THE HUSBANDMAN IN WINTER. The winter is a season of leisure. How short the day for performing labor! How long the evening and night for rest! How convenient the evening for reading, for study, for religious and moral improvement. Several hours may be devoted by the husbandman to instructing his family, gaining information, examining the state of his affairs, laying his plans for future business, occasionally holding intercourse with friends and neighbors, and the like. He may meditate on the works of God, his providence, his government of the world, especially on the wonders of the passing season. The power and majesty of God are suggested by the howling wind, the mighty cold, the impossible snows, the strong fetters of ice. The wisdom and goodness of God are seen in the arrangement of the seasons, in the provision made for the support and comfort of this dreary season by the production of the preceding, in the comfort of our dwellings, in the various methods of mitigating the severity of the season. This work forces itself on our reflection. We are invited many circumstances to meditation. What vast improvement may be made, if our minds are half as active as our bodies are when we venture from our shelter.

NAPOLEON'S RUSSIAN CAMPAIGN. Among the papers left by a French General lately in the United States, and who was formerly attached to the army of Bonaparte, which passed the Niemen for Russia, was found a list of that grand army, which, in a few short months perished by the climate and the shock of arms.

"Poles, 60,000; Saxons, 30,000; Austrians, 20,000; Bavarians, 30,000; Prussians, 22,000; Westphalians, 50,000; Wurtembergers, 13,000; Badeners, 8,000; Danes, 4,000; Gosh and Weimer, 2,000; Wurzburg and Franconia, 5,000; Mecklenburg, Nassau and small Princes, 5,000; Italians and Neapolitans, 20,000; Spanish and Portuguese, 4,000; Swiss, 10,000 and French, 250,000.

Including 60,000 cavalry, besides 40,000 horses, artillery and train consisting of 1,200 pieces of cannon." Total, 493,050, which with the servants, women, valetiers, and other followers of the army, making a grand total of 526,000 persons. The largest army ever concentrated at any period of history. The number of Russians destroyed in this campaign exceeding 200,000. Thus over 700,000 perished to gratify one man.

TEMPERANCE. This word implies a knowledge of, and compliance with, all the laws of our physical system. There is scarcely any branch of knowledge more important to mankind than a knowledge of the structure and nature of our own being. Nor is there scarcely any subject upon which men are so generally ignorant. It seems not at all to be known by mankind in general, or even suspected, that every thing about their bodies is regulated by laws, as certain as the laws of gravitation; and that a perfect knowledge of and conformity to these laws, would render permanent health as certain as the regular motion of the planets. The world is full of disease and premature death, and men speak of these things as mysterious providence of God, without ever so much as dreaming that they are the natural and certain results of the most outrageous and reckless violations of the human constitution.

MECHANICS. If there is any situation truly enviable, it is that of an industrious mechanic, who by his own unaided exertions has established a respectable place in society; who commencing in poverty, by his skill and perseverance overcomes every obstacle, vanquishes every prejudice, and builds up for himself a reputation whose value is enhanced to others. And let it be remembered that this situation is attainable by all who have health and practical knowledge of their business; industry and virtuous ambition are seldom exerted in vain.

for
Asthma, Dyspeptic Consumption, Spitting, Bronchitis, Difficulty of Breathing, Hoarseness, Influenza, Croup, Colds, Pain in Breast and Side, Dyspepsia, and various affections of the Stomach and Lungs.

OSUNIAN, or All-Healing Balm.—This is a truly wonderful cure of Consumption, and of every other disease. It is estimated that the United States over THIRTY THOUSAND annually fall victims to this scourge. The cause of the evil is generally "cough dry." Cough is the precursor—or herald—of more than twenty deadly diseases. These symptoms are deemed unimportant in the Side, Hemic and night Sweats, and death ends the scene.

How find a REMEDY FOR THE EVIL?—The experience of more than twenty years has proved the efficacy, and thousands are restored to health by its use.

INCIDENTAL CONSUMPTION.—George H. Esq. of Newark, N. J., had suffered for a year and a half from a severe attack of the month of August, when his cough and his chest so much that he feared he would die, and he used the Osunian.

He used the Osunian. He raised blood, and complained of pain in his side and chest, very much debilitated by night sweats. His chest, and altogether he appeared to be dying. He was so much relieved by the use of the remedy that by the month of November he was cured.

The following case of CONSUMPTION—was truly a wonderful one and places the Osunian, or All-Healing Balm, at the head of remedies for eradicating that dreadful disease.

W. Hays, residing in this city, (New York) with a severe cold in the early part of the year, his cough became very troublesome and he raised blood. He complained of a severe chest and his breathing became so short that he could not walk without stopping. His night sweats reduced him very low, and the cure of several physicians in Brooklyn did him no good, as his disease was settled and fixed Consumption. He resorted to the Osunian, and he was cured.

Although his friends had now given up of his ever being any better, he commenced the Osunian, or All-Healing Balm, and he was cured. He was so much relieved by the use of the remedy that by the month of November he was cured.

ENGLAND'S EXPENSES IN CANADA. The regular annual expenses of Canada to Great Britain, is not now far from three million of dollars. The rebellion of 1838 cost her fifteen millions of dollars. The public improvements, in making canals and roads, since the patriot rebellions, is over eight millions of dollars. The total amount of money remitted to these provinces, since 1838, is not much short of forty two millions of dollars. This however has gone back to her to pay for British goods.

"I MARK ONLY THE HOURS THAT SHINE." The above, if we rightly remember, is the inscription upon a sundial in Italy. It inculcates a beautiful lesson which too many are prone to disregard. It would teach us to remember the bright days of life, and not to forget the blessings God is giving us. Life, it is true, is not all bright and beautiful. But still it has its lights as well as its shades, and it is neither wise nor grateful to dwell too much upon the darker portions of the picture. He who looks upon the bright side of life, and makes the best of every thing, will, we think, other things being equal, be a better and happier man, than those who, as Franklin says, "are always looking at the ugly leg," and find occasion for complaint and censure in almost every thing they meet with.

QUINCY PATRIOT.

SATURDAY, NOV. 1, 1845.

John A. Green, Editor.

FIRE IN WEYMOUTH. A barn belonging to Mr. Asa Hunt, on the old road to South Weymouth and a short distance from Wales' Hotel, was burnt last Tuesday evening, together with about ten tons of hay, a horse, etc.

On Wednesday morning, a barn in North Weymouth, belonging to Mr. Henry Cleverly, was destroyed by fire with its contents of eight tons of hay, light wagon, sleigh, harnesses, etc. Loss estimated at five hundred dollars and there was no insurance. Through the exertions of Mr. Elisha Pratt, about three hundred dollars have been contributed by the citizens of Weymouth in aid of Mr. Cleverly.

A school-house, nearly finished, at South Weymouth, was destroyed last Wednesday evening.

These fires were all occasioned by the incendiary, and the most vigilant efforts should be taken to ferret out and bring to punishment all offenders. The engines in this town attended most of the fires in Weymouth and Braintree, and were doubtless the means of arresting the progress of the flames.

Just as we were going to press, we learn that the alarm an hour previous was occasioned by the burning of a barn near Weymouth Landing, in which were many tons of hay. Report says that the incendiary was caught.

INSTITUTION FOR LEARNING. As will be noticed in our advertising columns, a school is to be opened in this town for a thorough preparation of all who may intend to enter a counting-room or any college in the Union. Rev. Dr. Clark, rector of Christ Church in this place, assumes the duties as Principal of this seminary of learning, and his experience together with his gentlemanly deportment and high moral excellence adds a character to the institution that should secure for it a liberal encouragement. With reference to Mr. Joseph Dow, the instructor, we have the strongest assurance from the testimonials he produces (with some of the writers of which we are acquainted) that his experience, proficiency in all the branches proposed to be taught, high moral character, devotedness to business, place him in the front rank of those engaged in the work he proposes to commence in this town. If talents, industry and character are appreciated, this effort of Rev. Dr. Clark and Mr. Dow must be crowned with success.

LARGE COD. Harvey Field, Esq. of this town, while on a recent excursion of gunning and piscatory pleasure at Cohasset, caught a cod-fish which weighed fifty-two pounds and measured over four feet and six inches in length. Friend Field seems to be successful in whatever he undertakes, and we hope he may realize all he anticipates.

We understand that Mr. John O'Leary purchased this fish and made a chowder of the same, from which himself and family together with sixteen invited couples partook of one of the most delicious dishes that the epicure might envy.

FIRE IN BRAINTREE. Last Sunday evening, a barn in Braintree, near Maj. Seton's store, belonging to the estate of the late Elisha White, was destroyed by fire, with its contents of nearly twenty tons of hay, a wagon and harness and other articles. Seventy-five dollars was insured on the building, but Mr. Harvey White, who chiefly owned its contents, had no insurance. It was unquestionably the work of incendiary.

IMPORTANT DECISION. The New York Express publishes an important decision of the Court of Chancery in that State. Until very recently it has been supposed that our mechanics and manufacturers had a right to adopt the names and marks of manufacturers of foreign countries. It will be seen that not only they have no right to use the names or marks, or imitate them, but they will be liable for so doing for the profits of sale, and also for all damages which may accrue for the manufacture of an inferior article.

OLD COLONY RAILROAD. The cars, it is said, will commence running regularly on Monday, Nov. 10th. Stock sold in Boston on Tuesday last, at four and a half per cent. advance—a rise from late sales.

THE TWENTY-NINTH CONGRESS. The election for members of Congress have now been held in every State where there can be any doubt of the result. The consequence is, that the character of the next Congress can be determined with almost perfect exactness. The New York Journal of Commerce gives a statement of the details, the result of which is as follows:

The full Senate will comprise twenty-four whigs and thirty democrats.

The House of Representatives will stand: democrats one hundred and thirty-eight, whigs seventy-eight, natives six.

GREAT YIELD. Mr. Nathaniel Ford of North Weymouth, has raised, the present season, one hundred and eighty-nine pounds of Pumpkins from one seed. The fruit was uncommonly fine, and would be quite acceptable in the form of pies.

CENSUS OF BOSTON. The work of taking the census, by order of the City Council, is now nearly completed. The population will not vary much in round numbers from one hundred and fifteen thousand.

BREACH OF PROMISE CASE. In the Court of Common Pleas, at Boston, in the case of Jane Milly of that city, vs. Charles H. Savin of Shrewsbury, for breach of marriage promise, the jury returned a verdict, giving three hundred dollars damages to the plaintiff.

FLORIDA ELECTION. It appears by the latest accounts that Edward C. Cabell (whig) has been elected Representative to Congress from this new State by a majority of some two hundred votes over W. H. Brockenbrough, his democratic competitor.

NINTH DISTRICT. Peter H. Pierce, Esq., of Middleboro', has been nominated as the democratic candidate for Representative to Congress from the Ninth District in this State; Hon. Henry Williams having withdrawn from the canvass.

FIRE IN DORCHESTER. Last Wednesday evening, about half past six o'clock, a wooden building in Humphrey street was entirely consumed by fire. It was owned by Mr. Jacob Bird, and occupied by Mr. Sewell T. Jenkins, carpenter. The shop was insured at the State Mutual office in Boston. The fire was the work of an incendiary.

HOMOEOPATHY. The Lincoln (Me.) Telegraph says, "it is this nicety of discrimination that constitutes the difficulty in the practice of homoeopathic medicine." Is there any thing in life without its difficulties? Why, then, brother, trouble yourself with notions? Are you too, like the chap connected with Sally Carter, who,

When he found her soul had fled,
He wrung his hands and cried?

HORRID MURDER. Early last Monday morning, the inmates of a house of doubtful repute, in Boston, were aroused by the noise of some one in distress. It was soon ascertained that the house had been set on fire in several places and that a young woman had been murdered by having her throat horribly cut from ear to ear. Mrs. Maria A. Bickford of Maine, the murdered person, was about twenty-two years of age, married, but left her husband and had not lived with him several years. Albert J. Tirrell of Weymouth, a young married man, had lived with her in guilty intercourse and was supposed to have lodged that night in the same house. Tirrell has as yet escaped detection, although a reward of one thousand dollars has been offered by the city Council of Boston for his arrest. The coroner's inquest rendered a verdict against him of wilful murder.

SUMMARY OF INTELLIGENCE.

Original and Selected.

Some notion of the railway mania in England may be gathered from the fact that sixteen columns of a Liverpool Albion, received by the last steamer, are devoted almost entirely to Railway notices.

The last accounts from England state, that the Queen is in a "delicate situation."

It is stated from good authority that Nootka, or Vancouver Island, is to be the final destination and home of the Mormon people. This island is about three hundred miles long, and from seventy-five to one hundred in width, separated from the main land by a long narrow strait. The boundary line between the American and British possessions in the north-west, will probably pass across the Island.

In Mexico, the custom is, when a duel has been fought, to erect a cross on the spot, and every one that passes by throws a stone at the cross. Some ingenious Yankees have taken advantage of this custom to clear stony land, by erecting crosses where no duel has been fought!

The Roman Catholic Church has built and consecrated over thirty new churches in the United States within the year. The number of missionaries received from abroad during the same period is estimated at one hundred and twelve.

A seamstress in Leicester, (Eng.) recently counted over twenty thousand stitches in a single plain shirt which she made. She probably got sixpence for making it.

A swarm of bees built a hive in the chimney of a house in St. Louis, (Mi.) Honey has extended to the depth of twenty feet. The tenants of the house do not use the chimney, and consequently get honey whenever they require it.

The Catholic Cathedral at Montreal contains thirteen hundred and sixty-three pews, and will seat fifteen thousand persons; the tower is two hundred and fifteen feet high, and the ascent to the top of it by two hundred and eighty-five steps.

The negro girl, Emily, slave to C. M. Clay, indicted for attempting to poison his child, has been acquitted, for want of sufficient evidence to convict.

A Vermont merchant lately came to Boston to sell his full supply of butter—NINETY TONS! Pretty well, for a single trader, in a small town among the mountains.

John Randolph's will, emancipating his slaves begins thus: "In the name of God, amen. I hereby guarantee to all my slaves their liberty, heartily regretting that I have ever been the owner of one."

Since 1784, New Haven has had fifteen Mayors. Roger Sherman was the first, and remained in office from 1784 to 1793.

Fears have been entertained until lately that Lake Erie was falling so much as to become below the level of the canal at Buffalo. This lake is five hundred and sixty-five feet, Lake Ontario two hundred and thirty-one feet, and Lake Superior six hundred and forty-three feet below tide water.

A poor dustman, belonging to a coal-yard in London, lately received a legacy of fifty thousand dollars. He gave all his fellow dustmen of the yard, a new suit of clothes, pair of boots, and joint of meat. He has taken a large mansion, and contemplates giving a splendid dinner to all the dustmen in London.

Three murders have been committed in Boston within six months; the perpetrators have not been detected, and not a cent of reward for their apprehension has been offered by either the State or city authorities; yet a boy for selling a newspaper or Sunday, or a bookseller for opening his store for a few minutes, is immediately pounced upon.

All the Planets, save Mercury, are now above the horizon at seven o'clock in the evening, and four of them are seen with the naked eye, not to be mistaken. Jupiter in the east, Mars in the south east, Saturn a few degrees west and nearer the zenith, and Venus in the south west. Herschell is at a point between Jupiter and Mars, but not distinguishable.

DIED.

In this town, 25th inst., Mrs. Louisa M., wife of Mr. Rufus L. Moses, aged 21 years, 1 month, 18 days.

The faded leaves were strewn around,
Sad symptoms of the dying year;
The young wife, in her grave-clothes bound,
Was placed upon the bier.

Two years were hardly yet complete,
Since she before the pastor w'd
That she would be a true help-mate,
Who now was in her shroud.

The solemn bell her age has tolled,—
A warning to the young and gay!
And to the tomb all still and cold
The mourners take their way.

The bearers set the coffin down
Within the sacred burial-place,
And through the open lid, the sun
Shines in upon that face.

And weeping eyes now look their last,
And friends repeat the fond adieu;
The spirit unto God has passed,
And earth to earth is due.

We offer'd then a prayer to God,
Through him who died our souls to save,
That we might bear his chastening rod,
And triumph o'er the grave.

Thanks to the truth of Holy Writ,
The eye of faith beheld, that day,
The Resurrection Angel sit
Beside that sleeping clay.

On the 27th inst., Sarah L., daughter of Mr. Nathaniel S. and Mrs. Lois Spear, aged 21 months.

My child lay dead—her gentle eyelids closed,
Like one who on a bed of down reposed:
No alter'd feature could my fancy trace,
For 'e'en in death, she showed a beauteous grace.

There was the form I'd press'd 'unto my heart
Still left to me—God took the better part:
And, whilst the mortal clay to earth was given,
Her pure young spirit soared to live in heaven!

In Dorchester, 26th inst., Mrs. Priscilla, widow of the late Capt. Caleb Hopkins, aged 78; 27th, Miss Sarah Elizabeth, daughter of Mr. Ebenezer Sumner, aged 16.

Cancer, Scrofula and Goitre.
Ample experience has proved that no combination of medicine has ever been so effectual in removing the above diseases, as JAYNE'S LIFE PRESERVATIVE. It has effected cures that have been truly astonishing, not only of Cancer and other diseases of the skin, but has removed the most stubborn diseases of the Skin, Swellings, Dyspepsia, etc., etc. This medicine enters into the circulation, and eradicates diseases wherever located. It purifies the blood and other fluids of the body, removes obstruction in the pores of the skin, and produces enlargements of the glands or bowels. It increases the appetite, removes headache and drowsiness, and invigorates the whole system, and imparts animation to the diseased and debilitated constitution. There is nothing superior to it in the whole materia medica. It is perfectly safe and extremely pleasant, and has nothing of the disgusting nausea accompanying the idea of swallowing medicine.

GREAT ENGLISH REMEDY
For Coughs, Colds, Asthma, and Consumption.

The great and only remedy for Coughs, Coughs, Asthma, and CONSUMPTION, is the HUNGARIAN BALSAM OF LIFE, discovered by the celebrated Dr. Buchan of London, England, and introduced into the United States under the immediate superintendence of the inventor.

The extraordinary success of this medicine, in the case of pulmonary diseases, warrants the American agent in soliciting for treatment the worst possible cases that can be found in the community—cases that elude relief in vain from any of the common remedies of the day, and have been given up by the most distinguished Physicians, as confirmed and incurable.

The Hungarian Balm has cured and will cure, the most desperate cases. It is no quack nostrum, but a standard English medicine, of known and established efficacy.

Every family in the United States should be supplied with Buchan's Hungarian Balm of Life, not only to counteract the consumptive tendencies of the climate, but to be used as a preventive medicine in all cases of Colds, Coughs, Spitting of Blood, pain in the side and chest, irritation and soreness of the Lungs, Bronchitis, difficulty of breathing, hectic fever, night sweats, emaciation and general debility, Asthma, Influenza, Hooping Cough and Cramp.

We therefore earnestly invite all who are in pursuit of such Clothing, to call and test the truth of our statements.

HEALTH RESTORATIVE.

POETRY.

STREAM OF DEATH.

There is a stream whose narrow tide,
The known and unknown worlds divide,
Where all must go.
Its waveless waters, dark and deep,
Mid sullen silence downward sweep,
With motionless flow.

I saw where, at that dreary flood,
A smiling, prattling infant stood,
Whose hour was come;
Untaught of ill it reached the tide,
Then sunk to cradled rest, and died,
Like going home.

Followed with languid eye anon,
A youth dressed, and pale and wan;
And there alone
He gazed upon the leaden stream,
And feared to plunge—I heard a scream,
And he was gone.

And then a form in manhood's strength,
Came tumbling on, till there at length
He saw life's bound;
He shrunk and raised his bitter prayer,
Too late—his shriek of wild despair
The waters drowned.

Next stood upon that surgeless shore
A being bowed with many a score
Of toilsome years;
Earth bound and sad, he left the bank,
Back turned his dimming eyes and sank—
Ah! full of tears.

How bitter must thy waters be,
O Death!—How hard a thing, ah me!
It is to die!
I mused—when to that stream again,
Another child of mortal man,
With smiles drew nigh.

'Tis the last pang, he calmly said;
To me, O Death! thou hast no dread—
Savior, I come!
Spread but thine arms on yonder shore,
I see—ye waters bear me o'er—
There is my home.

HOME AND FRIENDS.

Oh, there's a power to make each hour
As sweet as heaven designed it;
Nor need we roam to bring it home,
Though few there be that find it!
We seek too high for things close by,
And lose what nature found us;
For life hath here no charms so dear
As Home and Friends around us!

We oft destroy the present joy
For future hopes—and praise them;
Whilst flowers as sweet bloom on our feet,
If we'd but stoop to raise them!
For things afar still sweeter are
When youth's bright spell hath bound us;
But soon we're taught that earth hath naught
Like Home and Friends around us!

The friends that speed in time of need,
When Hope's last thread is shaken,
To show us still, that come what will,
We are not quite forsaken;
Though all were night—if but the light
From Friendship's altar crown'd us,
'T would prove the bliss of earth was this—
Our Home and Friends around us!

THE MECHANIC.

I am nature's own nobleman, happy and free,
A peer of the realm will might give me,
For the land of the eagle has given me birth,
And my sons are all freemen that meet round my hearth.

Your cities now rising in beauty and might,
Whose palace-like towers are fair to the sight,
My hands helped to build them, my strength lent its aid
And by the sweat of my brow your proud cities are laid.

The ship that sweeps proudly o'er the far spreading sea,
Has been numbered and fashioned by the labor of me;
And the pure massive marble that strikes on the view,
Is chiselled and formed by the artisan too.

The smith, as he hums o'er the anvil a glee,
He toils not for honors, nor power, nor he;
He dreads not lost office, he seeks none to gain—
And the smith is a king in his own proud domain.

The bravest of men from mechanics have sprung,
And the sweetest of lays mechanics have sung;
And the proudest of hearts mechanics should wear,
When conscious of right in their bosoms they bear.

ANECDOTES.

"An' Cuff, will ye be affter tipping us a little bit of a song this cold mornin'?" exclaimed a son of the Emerald Isle to a brother of the same race, a co-laborer in the division and subdivision of wood.

"Golly, massa, I can't sing!"

"Can't sing? An' what's yer leg stuck in the middle of yer fut for, like a bird's if ye can't sing?"

"Husband, do you believe in special judgments of Providence upon individuals in this life?"

"Yes, my dear."

"Do you, indeed? Did one of the judgments ever happen to you?"

"Yes, my love."

"When was it, husband?"

"When I married you, my dear."

The following dialogue passed between a prisoner and a London magistrate.

"How do you live?"

"Pretty well, sir; generally a little beef and pudding at dinner."

"I mean, sir, how do you get your bread?"

"I beg your worship's pardon; sometimes at the baker's and sometimes at the chandler's shop."

"You may be as witty as you please, sir, but I mean simply to ask you how do you do?"

"Tolerably well, I thank you; I hope your worship is well also."

Hunterian Dispensary.
NO. 4 1/2 SUBBURY STREET, Boston.
Highly Important to Invalids.
SALUTARY CAUTION TO THOSE SEEKING MEDICAL AID.

THE HUNTERIAN DISPENSARY, established for the suppression of Quackery, and for the sale of genuine Medicines, offer their assistance and counsel to the sick and afflicted, knowing from experience and unequivocal knowledge that hundreds annually find a premature grave from the malpractices of unlettered and unlicensed practitioners. The records of our Hospitals are a sad proof of the above. Dishonest and the speculation of Quacks, which continually make the most sacred science subservient to their purposes, have availed themselves of every expedient, like every other road to deception, but if there be men who are depraved and reckless, there are some too whose actions are guided by the interest of their patients alone, and whom no imputation can affect.
The limits of an advertisement can hardly do justice to our subject, for it is an important one. When Gentlemen treat of the diseases of the sexual system, before entering upon the subject he apologizes for the indecency of his subject, as if a Medical man could be reproached for soothing suffering humanity; as well might it be said to Menageries, that there were indecencies in anatomy, therefore we ought not to fear that we should, in our turn, be accused of immorality in thus placing before the public this appeal in behalf of the invalid. The late Sir Ashley Cooper, Bart., Surgeon to his late Majesty, observed, "If one of these miserable cases could be depicted from the pulpit as an illustration of the evil effects of a vicious and intemperate course of life, it would, I think, strike the mind with more terror than all the preaching in the world." The irritable state of the patient leads to the destruction of life, and in this way, annually, great numbers perish, and undoubtedly the list is greatly augmented from the maltreatment and the employment of injurious medicines.

The long experience, together with the infallible remedies to be had at the Dispensary, it is hoped will afford some protection to the invalid, and make him sensible of the benefits to be derived from an educated and experienced Physician, rather than the precautions and dangerous doings of Quacks and inexperienced Physicians.
It is not necessary here to enumerate all the diseases to which particular attention is directed, suffice it to say that all the ills flesh is heir to.
Persons in town or country can consult the attending Physician either by personal or written communication, small fee. Medicines can be sent to any part of the world, securely packed and carefully protected from observation.
All letters and communications are returned by mail

Physicians in the country can have the advantages of this Institution for their patients, for the usual fee—
Persons desirous of consultation, see no person but the Physician. Fee for full course of medicine, $5. Medicines from 50 cents to $2 per box or bottle.
N. B.—All letters must be directed thus—"HUNTERIAN DISPENSARY, Boston, Mass.," where they will be faithfully and carefully attended to.
This Dispensary has no connection with any other office in this country, and all medicines purporting to come from this Dispensary and sold elsewhere, is a base fraud and deception.

the most celebrated French Physicians, and are warranted to be the most efficacious medicine in use.

The Great Remedy

FOR

Folger's Olosonian, or All-Healing Balsam.

IT is acknowledged that more persons die of Consumption than of any other disease. It is estimated that in the United States over THIRTY THOU-SAND PERSONS annually fall victims to this dreadful scourge. The cause of the evil is generally overlooked. A short dry Cough is the precursor—a neglected cold. These symptoms are deemed unimportant. Pain in the Side, Hectic and night Sweats follow, and death ends the scene.

Would you find a REMEDY FOR THE EVIL?
Here it is. The experience of more than twenty years has proved its efficacy, and thousands are rejoicing in its effects.

Case of INCIPENT CONSUMPTION.—George
W. Burnett Esq. of Newark, N. J., had suffered under the effects of a severe cold for more than a year, and in the month of August, when his Cough
had reduced him so much that he feared he would die, he commenced using the Olosonian. He raised blood
at this time, complained of pain in his side and chest, and was very much debilitated by night sweats. His appetite was gone, and altogether he appeared to be rapidly sinking. He was so much relieved by the use of this remedy that by the month of November
he left for Pittsburg, Pa. with every prospect of being permanently cured.

Read the following case of CONSUMPTION.—
The cure was truly a wonderful one and places the "Olosonian or All-Healing Balsam," at the head of the list of remedies for eradicating that dreadful disease.

George W. Hays, residing in this city, (New York) was seized with a severe cold in the early part of the summer. His cough became very troublesome and he began to raise blood. He complained of a severe pain in the chest and his breathing became so short
that he could not walk any distance without stopping
for breath. His night sweats reduced him very low.
He was under the care of several physicians in Brooklyn, who told him they could do no good, as his disease was settled and fixed Consumption. He removed to this city to die among his friends. He was
by this time so weak that he could not walk without assistance. Although his friends had now given up
all hope of his ever being any better, he commenced using the "Olosonian, or All-Healing Balsam," and in a few weeks was so far restored as to be able to resume his business.

Mr. T. Laban, residing at 52 Pine street, was severely afflicted with Asthma, in consequence of having taken a severe cold in the early part of last winter.
In the early part of the night he could sleep tolerably well, but towards the morning the asthma became so severe that he was obliged to get up and sit for the remainder of the night leaning forward on a chair. His cough was most distressing through the day. He had, during the sickness, tried almost every thing without relief. He never had a good night's rest in ten months, until he commenced taking the Olosonian or All-Healing Balsam, when he found immediate relief, and before using half a bottle it was perfectly well, and now sleeps as quietly as he ever did in his life.

Hundreds of cases could be given to prove the efficacy of the great remedy. And it possesses a property superior to all others, viz: it does not constipate the bowels. Reader, are you suffering under any of the above symptoms of disease? Try this remedy.
It will allay the Pain in your side and chest—put to flight the COUGH which deprives you of sweet sleep and repose; if you have Asthma, be assured there is no medicine in the world that will cure you so speedily, and it will arrest all those disagreeable symptoms which strike such terror to the mind, and give such dreadful forebodings of an untimely and speedy dissolution.

SUGAR COATED
VEGETABLE PILLS

A MEDICINAL preparation is herein announced which has been long desired, and sought for, and which the public must at once see and acknowledge to be a great benefit. It is a purgative of its internal ingredients. In fact the medicine is so entirely disguised, that a person would not be likely to suspect that it was intended for such a purpose. It is so pleasant, that it is informed that they were, he would believe them to be simply laxatives of pure sugar, nor could he afterwards, unless by his great purgative effect, suspect that he had been taking medicine, for these pills are so skillfully prepared, that they do not grip the bowels; and thus the patient who takes them avoids two evils which attend all other purgative medicines, namely: nausea and pain. Medicine administered in all other sweet forms has the disadvantage of being mixed with the sugar, and hence produces
a mingled flavor, which, to most persons, is more disagreeable than unadulterated bitterness. In these pills this is altogether avoided, and the medicine being entirely distinct from each other, so that the former must be thoroughly removed before the latter can manifest itself to the taste. It is universally known that if a person wishes to keep his system in health, and his blood is therefore essential to health. We must not, however, wait until the blood is impure, for then it takes time—and that time passed in ill health—before we can get rid of it. When the arrangement of the system is indicated by costiveness, or any other sign, it admonishes us that superfluities are gathering in the system, which should at once be got rid of; for their removal the chyle (from which the blood is formed) in a healthy state, and purity of blood must be the result. The fact, as stated, is understandably known; but people have such an aversion to medicine, that unless the case is urgent, they prefer the disease to the cure, until an impaired constitution, and a diseased system, render them for the folly of their conduct. Still they had some excuse; for heretofore, medicine in almost all its forms, was nearly as disagreeable as it is beneficial. Now, however, the SUGAR COATED VEGETABLE PURGATIVE PILLS have no taste whatever of medicine—produce none of the nausea and griping attendant on the operation of other medicine—while their speedy effect in removing all impurities from the system cannot be excelled by any remedial medicine which has ever been discovered.

It is unnecessary to say more here. If these pills are as described, the public will find them a great patronage; and the proprietor merely asks a trial, which he is sure of receiving, to prove that he assumes no merit for them which they do not fully deserve.

MISCELLANY.

THE FATED RIVAL.

"This afternoon will seal my felicity shall be the happiest man alive!" ejaculated Edmund, on the morning of the day on which he was to lead his Anna to the hymeneal altar.

It was no marvel that Edmund exulted in the near approach of the hour which was consummate the nuptials of two of the most voted lovers the world ever witnessed. Anna was possessed of every quality, moral and personal, which could be supposed to minister to the bliss of him who was fortune to be her husband. But, independently of Anna's abstract fascinations, there were circumstances which must of themselves have preceded in the breast of Edmund a peculiar attachment to her. Five suitors had importunately

MISCELLANY.

THE FATED RIVAL.

"This afternoon will seal my felicity; I shall be the happiest man alive!" ejaculated Edmund, on the morning of the day on which he was to lead his Anna to the hymeneal altar.

It was no marvel that Edmund exulted in the near approach of the hour which was to consummate the nuptials of two of the most devoted lovers the world ever witnessed; for Anna was possessed of every quality, mental and personal, which could be supposed to administer to the bliss of him who was fortunate to be her husband. But, independently of Anna's abstract fascinations, there were circumstances which must of themselves have produced in the breast of Edmund a peculiar attachment to her. Five suitors had importunately solicited her hand in marriage during her courtship with him, and among them was Melwyn, a neighboring nobleman, high in the esteem of his sovereign. But Edmund, though inferior in station to each of his four rivals, was unhesitatingly and decidedly preferred to them all.

And he regarded Anna. His entire existence was bound up in hers, and the world, and life itself, when weighed in the balance with her, were found ineffectually wanting.

The nuptial morn of the youthful lovers was one of the most congenial and pleasant which ever burst on the world since its creation. It was in the month of April. The superficies of the earth was beautifully carpeted with new born grass—the grass—the garden, the orchard, the hedge, the plantation, the forest, all smiled in their new coverings. The sun poured forth his beams with more than wonted profusion, tingling the entire creation with an exquisitely yellow radiance; innumerable choristers of every species of the singing tribe, imparted, by the melody of their warblings, additional charms to that bright morn. Nature herself, in fine, seemed on this occasion to be jubilant at the approaching nuptial of a pair who were so worthy of each other.

The vassals of Emersons, Anna's father, exulted without measure at the circumstances of their chieftain's only daughter being about to be united to the youth of her choice; and as all were that evening to participate in the ample festivities of the baronial hall, they attired themselves in the best costume of their clan, and prepared to celebrate the joyous event with all becoming respect for their chieftain, and the young bride and bridegroom.

The afternoon arrived, and at the hour of five, the beautiful bride approached the hymeneal altar accompanied by her maids of honor, and the wives and daughters of the more respectable of her father's vassals. Edmunds was present at the appointed hour, luxuriating in waking dreams of the matchless bliss which was about to be sealed from henceforth to him. The venerable Abbot of Kinloss, a man who was verging on seventy years of age, and whose countenance eloquently discoursed of his unaffected piety, stationed himself beside the interesting couple, and before proceeding to go through the matrimonial ceremony, he uttered with a mingled air of mildness and solemnity the usual behest of "join hands." The lovers stretched out their respective hands to each other; Anna's was white as the unsunned snow and her beautiful countenance was suffused with a deep blush indicative of her modesty—a blush which imparted new fascinations to that unrivalled face. The reverend Abbot now commenced the marriage ritual. With uplifted hands, and a visage beaming with benignity, he was addressing his orisons to the Being in whose services the greater portion of his life had been spent, imploring His special benediction on the youthful pair now standing at the altar, when an arrow from some invisible bow in fixed itself in his heart. That instant he dropped on the floor, at the feet of the party who surrounded him. All present were horrified at the strange circumstance, and gazed on each other in mute amazement, simultaneously listening at the same time, as if by instinct, in the hope they would hear such sounds in some part of the large hall as would lead them to the discovery of the foe; but the first thing that broke the death-like momentary silence that prevailed was the expiring groan of Heaven's aged servant. The bride fainted at the appalling scene; and while the bridegroom was in the act of raising her up, Melwyn, attended by a host of myrmidons, suddenly appeared at the portals of the hall, their flaming eyes speaking the deeds of blood on which they were intent.

"See to the protection of Anna!" cried Edmund, and he clenched his dagger in his hand. He turned to revenge himself on his deadly foe, but he could not so far master his feelings for his bride, as to quit her to engage in combat with Melwyn. Apprised of the presence of the unhallowed intruders, the clansmen of Edmund's virtual father-in-law rushed to the aid of their chieftain, his daughter and her bridegroom. The hall was now crowded with foes, arranged under two great divisions—each willing and prepared to shed the last drop of his blood in the quarrel of their respective chieftains.

The conflict now commenced with the utmost fierceness on each side;—the clashing of the instruments of death might have been heard far and wide, till at length, overpowered by superior numbers, the clansmen of Edmund were almost all strewn on the floor of the hall, either already in the embrace of death, or momentarily expecting to be so, from the number and severity of their wounds. Edmund and Emerson defended Anna with a more than mortal bravery; but Melwyn and his leading vassals at last surrounded them, wrenching their daggers from them, and consequently rendered her further protection beyond the compass of human courage and power.

"Spare the two miscreants,"—referring to Emerson and Edmund—"Spare the two miscreants, that mortification may be their portion!" cried Melwyn, addressing himself to his surviving clansmen, as he seized the affrighted Anna in his arms, and proceeded with her to the door. A steed was there in waiting, which he mounted, and, placing Anna before him, he galloped off with his prize to his own castle, only four miles distant, followed by his vassals.

"Thou art now in safe custody, young bride," said he to Anna, as one of his servants shut the ponderous iron gate which fronted his walled castle.

On reaching his mansion, Melwyn led Anna into the most splendid apartment in it, and having placed before her the most delicious refreshments the house could afford, he pressed her to partake of it, but she refused.

"Is not thy foolish obstinacy yet overcome, lady?" said he to her, in a half sneering tone. "Which, think you," continued the haughty chieftain—"are a dungeon and chains or being made the lady of Melwyn Castle, most to be preferred?"

Anna was silent.

"Nay, young maid, hast not thou the use of that member so characteristic of thy sex?" said Melwyn, sarcastically.

Anna, who had but partially recovered from her swoon, when wrested from the arms of Edmund, and who had taken it for granted that both he and her father had been the victims of Melwyn's limitless fury, implored the chieftain in accents which were repeatedly interrupted by the irrepressible grief which swelled her gentle bosom, and which vented itself in an ocean of tears, to terminate her life that instant, as an act of tender mercy.

"A few hours of a solitary dungeon will perhaps bring thee to thy senses, and cure thee of thy regards for Edmund; if not, I shall then wed thee per force!" said Melwyn, and so saying, he dragged the agonized Anna to a gloomy cell, in which he was wont to incarcerate the persons of those of his vassals who had incurred his displeasure.

The enraged chieftain then despatched a special messenger for a priest to unite him and Anna together in marriage; but being some distance from home, several hours elapsed before his services could be obtained.

Emerson and Edmund, who, though worsted in the conflict between them and Melwyn's party, had been permitted to enjoy their liberty unmolested after the latter had decamped with Anna, began to muse on the calamity which had befallen them, and to think whether or not it was within the range of possibility to do anything for the recovery of the person of the bride.

Edmund was intimately acquainted with the localities of Melwyn's castle and its vicinity, and knew that after sunset there was one part of its walls defended only by one person, which to adventurous spirits it would be perhaps practicable to scale, and if they could succeed in this, and slay the sentinel, they might undiscovered enter the castle itself, and yet rescue Anna from the haughty chieftain.

The project wore a sufficiently desperate aspect, but Edmund—yes, and Emerson too, though comparatively advanced in years, were both in that reckless state of mind which fitted them to undertake any enterprise within the confines of practicability.

Calling to their assistance, and acquainting them with their project, the more spirited of those of Emerson's vassals who had survived the recent conflict, the bridegroom and the bride's father accordingly armed themselves at every point, and hastened towards the neighborhood of Melwyn's walled castle.

The sun had buried himself below the western horizon two hours, before they left Emerson's hall on their adventurous purpose. The night was exceedingly dark; hours had to elapse before the moon would show her visage, and not one of the countless lesser luminaries, which at other times beset and sparkle in the firmament, was visible to the eye; all were enshrouded from mortal gaze, by one apparently vast cloud. Edmund, Edmund and their party, amounting in all to twelve, arrived at the part of the wall they were to attempt to scale, and one of the tallest and stoutest of their number placed himself in the position best adapted for enabling the others to avail themselves of the assistance of his shoulders, in endeavoring to scale it.

Edmund, with sword in hand, was the first to make the attempt, and on reaching the summit, was astonished to find there was no sentinel there. Impressed with the idea, from the different voices he heard on the outside—and not being able from the pitchy darkness of the night to correct his error—that there was a vast number of regularly organized besiegers, the sentinel, instead of standing to his post, ran to the castle, for the purpose of giving the alarm. The remaining ten instantly followed Edmund, but the eleventh, not having any one to assist him to scale the wall, was necessitated to remain outside. Edmund's party were at the castle almost contemporaneously with the sentinel, and that the most important part of it before him.

The brilliant illumination visible in one of the most spacious apartments led them immediately to it. Edmund unceremoniously burst open the door, rushed in, and was followed by Emerson and others. There was exhibited to his astonished gaze, the spectacle of Anna in her bridal robes, pouring forth the agonies of her heart in deep heaving, rapidly succeeded sobs and torrents of tears, and being supported by one of Melwyn's sisters. The lord of the castle held her snow white hand in his—around was a numerous party—and the priest who had arrived but a few minutes before had just pronounced the first sentence of the matrimonial service.

"Villain!" exclaimed Edmund, with his eyes directed to Melwyn, and flashing at the same time with boundless indignation; and as he uttered the epithet, he rushed towards his hated foe, and ere the latter had time to use a weapon in his own defence, he sheathed his sword in his bosom.

Melwyn fell prostrate upon the floor, but such was the jealousy and deadly animosity he bore towards Edmund, that though he survived but two minutes thereafter, he partially rose up, seized his dagger, and aimed it at the breast of Anna, exclaiming at the same time, under the impression that the thrust was successful—

"Nor shalt thou, scoundrel, enjoy her either;" but Edmund had already seized her in his arms, and the thrust which was made at her proved mortal to Melwyn's own brother, who in the confusion of the moment, occupied the place on which Anna had stood but a moment before.

Entering the castle of Melwyn thus unexpectedly, and finding its inmates anticipating scenes of festivity rather than of mortal conflict, Edmund and his party found no difficulty—not even resistance—in carrying off Anna in triumph. The only obstacle was the massy iron gate fronting the castle, but a sufficiency of it was instantaneously demolished to admit of their exit. They reached home in an hour or two thereafter, and spent the remainder of their days in peace and happiness.

THE DEAD. How little do we think of the dead! Their bodies lay entombed in all our towns, villages and neighborhoods. The lands they cultivated, the houses they built, the works of their hands are always before our eyes. We travel the same roads, walk the same paths, sit at the same firesides, sleep in the same rooms, ride in the same carriage and dine at the same table, and yet seldom remember that those that once occupied these places, are now gone forever.

Strange that the living should so soon forget the dead when the world is full of the mementos of their lives. Strange that the fleeting cares of life should so soon rush in and fill the breast to the exclusion of those once so near. To-day man stands and weeps over the grave of his departed friend. To-morrow he passes that grave with cold indifference. To-day his heart is wrung with all the bitterness of anguish for the loss of one he so much loved. To-morrow the image of that friend is effaced from his heart, and almost forgotten. What a commentary upon man! It is indeed a mortifying thought, a fearful truth, a sad idea.

GERMANY. This country is made up of thirty-six different governments, comprising one Empire, five Kingdoms, twenty-six Duchies and four Free Cities. They are all independent of each other, but they have a Diet which sits constantly at Frankfort on the Maine, except during two months in summer, and acts as a general police. There are twenty-four German Universities, in which there are about eighteen thousand students. There are a good many systems of education in different parts of Germany. That of Prussia was established in 1519.

EDITING A NEWSPAPER. This is no easy task. Many persons estimate the ability of a newspaper and the industry and talent of its editor, by the quantity and variety of editorial matter it contains. Nothing can be more fallacious. It is comparatively an easy task for a practised writer to pour out weekly columns of words upon any and all subjects; his ideas may flow freely and his command of language may enable him to string them together like a bunch of onions, and yet his paper may be a meagre, poor concern. But a judicious well-informed editor, who exercises his avocation with a full conviction and conscientiousness of the responsible duty he has to perform, will conduct his paper with the same care and assiduity that a lawyer bestows on a suit, or a humane physician on a patient. Indeed, the writing part of editing a newspaper is but a small portion of the work. The industry, even, is not shown here. The care, the taste, the time employed in selecting, are far more important; for the fact of a good editor is shown more by his selections, his judicious compilation of the matter that is to fill his sheet than any thing else; certainly more than by long windy editorials. The tone, temper, manner, spirit, manliness, courtesy, propriety, consistency, comprehensiveness as well as conscientiousness, should be among the criterions by which to judge of a newspaper. To preserve all these as they should be preserved is enough to occupy the attention of any man. But if any one is still incredulous—why, we can't help it, that's all!—Boston Daily Sun.

"Exercise, to be of service, must be enjoyed, and to be enjoyed, must have some aim no matter what, so that it be innocent, which will occupy our thoughts pleasantly. There is a most pernicious false public opinion among us, which looks upon athletic amusements as undignified for intellectual men, and almost wicked for clergymen. People would be shocked to see grave, black-coated personages engaged, like school-boys, in a game of ball, or contending with each other in pitching quoits; yet an occasional, even frequent exercise of some such sort would save many a promising young man from an early tomb, and prolong the usefulness of many prematurely old. 'All work end no play' is as poor a maxim for the adult as the child; it makes the one dull as it does the other; for we are the 'children of a larger growth.' Our thoughts become too abstract, unnatural, and often gloomy. The brain takes the tone of the stomach. Some starve it, thereby to obviate the necessity of exercise, and grow light-headed or visionary; others overload it, and grow confused, melancholic or ill-tempered. It has been observed that wars involving lasting mischief to great nations have arisen from a ministerial despatch having been written during a fit of indigestion. Dryden's favorite inspiration, when wishing to do better than usual, was a strong saline draught; and a very eminent English statesman resorted to a similar mode of clearing his head. It is more than probable that hurtful theories are often promulgated in books, whose authors labor under similar difficulties without taking means to remove them, which pleasant outdoor exercise might do. If so, to abstain from it is a sin against ourselves and the world.

Here is the secret, says the Doctor, of that sound, clear-headed vigor for which Scotch intellect is so notable.

SINGULAR DEATH. A novel case of death from a leech, is mentioned in an English paper as occurring at Guy's Hospital. A young man serving in the capacity of a groom was engaged in dressing a horse, when the animal severely kicked him on the right arm. Medical assistance was procured, and leeches were ordered, four of which were applied to the wound. In a short time three only of them could be seen, but it was supposed that the fourth had fallen off, and had got away. The deceased was the following day conveyed to the hospital. The wound and arm soon began to swell in a most unaccountable manner, when the house-surgeon observed there was a slight discharge of matter coming from the orifice. He deemed it prudent, in consequence, to open the arm, when, to his surprise, he found the missing leech enclosed in the flesh, and quite dead. The leech must have crawled into the orifice of a very small wound in the arm, and it could not be seen. After the leech had been extracted from the arm, deceased went on very well for a week when symptoms of inflammation of the veins ensued, which terminated with death. It is the opinion of the medical attendant that he has died from the effects of the wound having been poisoned by the long presence of the leech within it.

ANTI-SLAVERY MEETING. No political or religious union with Slaveholders. The Norfolk County Anti Slavery Society, will hold its quarterly meeting in Lyceum Hall, Dorchester, on THURSDAY, Nov. 13th,—day and evening. Plain refreshments will be provided at the Hall for those who will attend from the neighboring towns. All persons are welcome to its broad platform. Having embraced the truth they have nothing to fear from free discussion. In this society, as "in Christ Jesus, there is neither male nor female." All have the same privilege. Its aim is not the establishment of any political party, but to spread light and truth; to correct the religious sentiment of the country. Wendell Phillips, William Lloyd Garrison, Edmund Quincy, and probably Charles Lenox Remond, Parker Pillsbury and other able advocates of the cause will be present. Come and hear. "Prove all things, hold fast that which is good."

MEETING IN WEYMOUTH. The citizens of Weymouth and Braintree aroused!! A spirited meeting was held by the inhabitants of the village of Weymouth and Braintree, at Mr. Asa B. Wales' Hotel, on Monday evening, Oct. 27th, in consequence of the calamitous occurrence of fire, produced, as they seriously apprehend, by the incendiary torch on the preceding evening; and measures were adopted to procure forthwith an Engine for said place, and the following vote was unanimously passed:

Voted—That the thanks of this meeting be tendered to the several Fire Companies of Quincy and that also of North Weymouth, for their prompt and efficient assistance in putting a stop to the devouring element on the evening preceding and on other occasions; also, informing them, that we are about procuring an Engine ourselves, and that although we should deeply regret the occasion, yet should one occur, we hope soon to be in readiness to return similar favors to them.

ANCIENT CONSUMPTION—George Esq. of Newark, N. J., had suffered the effects of a severe cold for more than a year in the month of August, when his Cough became very troublesome and he was so weak that he could not walk without the aid of the Ososman. He raised blood, complained of pain in his side and chest, and much debilitated by night sweats. His wife, who was also afflicted, applied the Ososman, and he was so much relieved by the remedy that by the month of November he was cured.

ADDITION TO THE VOTING LIST.

The following names have been added to the voting list. They were omitted on the original list for the reason that owing to the death of Mr. H. C. ENGINE MOVEMENTS.

The following challenge has been sent by the Granite Engine Company, No. 3, to the Vulture Engine Company, No. 4, both of this town, for a trial of the powers of their respective engines.

QUINCY, Nov. 5, 1845.

MR. HATDEN, SIR:

Considerable has already been said, and is still coming to us, in a boasting manner, from your (the Vulture) Engine Company, No. 4, and its particular friends, in regard to the Vulture and Granite Engines playing, at a fire in Weymouth, 26th Oct. last, at which time you claim great credit for washing the Granite. We acknowledge that the Granite did run over—thus far give you credit; but what were our disadvantages? We will see. In the first place, the Granite was playing through more hose than the Vulture, and a pipe besides, and secondly, the Granite had but fifteen or twenty men on the breaks, the Vulture had a full Company including volunteers from two other Companies. This is the equality for which you wish to be so loudly applauded. Had you been satisfied with receiving all honor due you from the citizens of Quincy and vicinity, who knew the circumstances, without proclaiming it abroad so long and so loud yourselves, the subject would have rested here without further words from us; but as it is, to stop all contention as to the ability of the two Engines and have the matter fairly and impartially decided, it was voted, at a meeting of the Granite Engine Company, Nov. 3d, to send the Vulture Engine Company, No. 4, the following challenge:

To meet us at the Stone Temple, in Quincy, on Wednesday, Nov. 12th, at half past one o'clock, P. M., to play as follows: First, to play through four hundred feet of hose, tub and tub, for the space of five minutes. Secondly, to play through two hundred and fifty feet of hose, the same length of time, tub and tub. And finally, to play through fifty feet of hose, on height and distance, with small pipe. Each Engine shall make use of the same cylinders and brakes that were used at the before mentioned fire without alterations. Each shall also use their own small pipe. That there may be no misunderstanding as regards the number of men, you will please decide on one of the following different ways: each to have an equal number of twenty men, thirty-five men, fifty men, sixty-five men, or as many as you choose without mention of numbers.

We shall expect an answer on or before Saturday evening, 8th inst., without fail.

Per order of the Company.

C. L. BADGER, Clerk.

QUINCY PATRIOT.

SATURDAY, NOV. 8, 1845.

John A. Green, Editor.

SERIOUS ACCIDENT. We regret to learn, that Mr. Alpheus M. Huestis, an industrious citizen of this town, now engaged at work in Fitchburg, in this State, was yesterday very seriously injured at that place by the falling of a stone arch upon which he was to work, breaking his limbs and otherwise injuring him in a serious manner.

NEW YORK ELECTION. The City has gone for the democrats entire by a large plurality. The State Legislature will be democratic by an increased majority.

OSTER REFECTORY. In addition to other alterations and improvements about the Hancock House, in this town, an Oyster Room has been opened with much taste in the arrangement and conducted in "good style," to use the common phrase. Oysters of the best kind are here served up in various ways to suit the most fastidious taste, and their delicious qualities cannot be better tested than by a trial, which we invite the lovers of this luxury in this town to enjoy without further delay.

UNGENUINELY PROCEEDINGS. Cambridge University has been, it is said, the scene of a recent row, occasioned by the dismissal of a member of the Senior class, who would not expose his companions in a frolic. The dismissed student, as the story goes, was borne off in an open barouche, with four white horses, and attended by four outsiders who were members of his class.

REVOLUTIONARY HERO GONE. General Gideon Foster died at Danvers on Saturday last, at the advanced age of ninety-six years and eight months. He commanded a company of minutemen from Danvers at the battle of Lexington, and was also at the battle of Bunker Hill. The funeral ceremonies were appropriate, and worthy of the man, and the sixth regiment of high infantry attended on the occasion.

ANOTHER MURDER. Samuel Worcester of Lancaster, has been committed to jail in Worcester, for the murder of his wife while in a state of intoxication, she dying of wounds and bruises received from him, and exposure, lying upon the bare ground a part of a night.

This is the fourth capital offence committed in Worcester County within a year, and the third since the recent execution there.

FLORIDA. It is now understood that the democratic candidate for Congress, in Florida, is chosen by from eighty to one hundred and twenty majority.

TENNESSEE. Hon. Hopkins L. Turney, (dem.) formerly of the House of Representatives, has finally been chosen United States Senator from Tennessee, in place of Hon. E. H. Foster, (whig.)

SUDDEN DEATH. Leopold Herwig, the distinguished violinist, died suddenly in Boston, of disease of the heart, on Saturday evening last. He led the first overture at the concert of the Philharmonic Society, returned early to his residence, and died at half-past ten o'clock.

BOSTON AND PLYMOUTH. The Old Colony Railroad will be opened as a public road this day. The first train, with the directors and invited guests, will leave the depot at South Boston at ten o'clock in the forenoon, for Plymouth, stopping at way stations, and leave on its return at three o'clock in the afternoon.

NEW JERSEY. The whigs will probably have a majority in both branches of the Legislature. The democratic candidate is doubtless elected to fill the vacancy in the Congressional delegation, occasioned by the death of the late whig incumbent.

ATTEMPT AT INCENDIARISM. We understand that an attempt was made to set on fire, last Monday evening, the barn of Mr. Jacob Allen, in Braintree, and that the incendiary was discovered in the act and pursued, but that he succeeded in effecting his escape.

SPEEDY COMMUNICATION. The posts for the Magnetic Telegraph of Messrs. Hudson & Smith, between Nantasket and the Merchants Exchange, in Boston, passing through this town, are all put up from Nantasket to South Boston Bridge, a distance of twenty miles. The Telegraph will be in operation in about a week.

LANDING OF THE PILGRIMS. The citizens of Plymouth will celebrate the two hundred and twenty-fifth anniversary of that event, by a dinner and ball. There will be no oration, the Society adopting the more prevalent custom on occasions of this character, of substituting therefor speeches at the dinner table.

TAVERN STAND FOR SALE. We beg to call the attention of our readers to the sale at auction, on Wednesday next, of the well known Neponset House, so long and so excellently kept by its present popular proprietor, Mr. Otis Wright, whose retirement, (which we regret is solely on account of ill health,) will be a loss to all whose good fortune it may have been to have experienced the comforts of his house. "May his shadow never be less" and his successor, to whom a rare chance is offered to make a fortune, prove worthy of his predecessor. See advertisement in another column.

THANKSGIVING'S COMING. We notice an extensive sale, at auction, of West India Goods, "Family Fixin's," Groceries, Crockery, Paper Hangings, etc., on Thursday next, at Milton Lower Mills. Thanksgiving being at hand, a good opportunity is offered for all to supply themselves with many articles proper for that interesting occasion. See advertisement in our columns.

TEAS. Occasion has led us frequently to purchase teas at the store of J. Fletcher & Co., in Washington Street, nearly opposite the Marlboro' Chapel, in Boston, which have been found to be equal and generally superior to the representations by the proprietors in their notices. Recently, we saw advertised in the Boston papers an excellent quality of black tea, and was determined to test its virtue, and on trial found it equal to the statement. Teas can here be procured at fair prices, of superior quality, and palatable to the taste. Many of our own store-keepers keep excellent qualities of the different varieties of teas, and for reference we refer to our advertising columns.

INCENDIARISM. An attempt was made at midnight last Saturday to fire the large building in this town, occupied by Messrs. Abner Willett and Jabez Sumner. The fire was set close to a partition, had burnt through the floors, and was ascending. It was discovered before much damage had been done.

WHIG CAUCUS. A meeting is to be held this evening, by the whig citizens of this town, at the Lyceum Hall, seven o'clock, to select a candidate for Representative.

POSTPONED. The trial of Peter Connor for the murder of Edward Welch, before the whole court at Dedham, was broken off and continued until the next term, in February. The government had put in all their testimony, and the defence was opened, when it was found that one of the defendant's witnesses was absent, who had been in attendance.

The Massachusetts Texas Committee now consists of forty members, from the several political parties. Charles Francis Adams, Esq. is Chairman, and Eliza Wright, Jr. Secretary.

A Churn is invented in Northampton, which requires to be wound up and set in motion, and the butter comes out ready for use, while the good housewife employs herself with knitting or reading a newspaper.

It is stated that an individual who lately died at Providence, left a policy of ten thousand dollars Life Insurance which had cost him up to his death three hundred and seventy-two dollars only.

Father Miller has re-commenced his lectures in Burlington, (Vt.) taking the ground now that the end is to be in 1847.

German newspapers printed in this country, are forbidden to be read by the inhabitants of Germany, and an order has been transmitted to this country forbidding their entrance into the German provinces.

Upwards of seven hundred suits have been returned in the Boston Common Pleas this term.

NOTICES.

The democratic citizens of Quincy will meet at the Lyceum Hall, SUNDAY EVENING, at six o'clock, to select a suitable candidate for Representative, and to transact other business preparatory to the coming election.

A full attendance is earnestly desired.
WILLIAM S. MORTON, Chairman.
WILLIAM B. DUGGAN, Secretary.

Cancer, Scrofula and Goitre.

Ample experience has proved that no combination of medicine has ever been so effectual in removing the above diseases, as JAYNE'S LIFE PRESERVATIVE. It has effected cures that have been truly astonishing, not only of Cancer and other diseases of that class, but has removed the most stubborn diseases of the Skin, Scrofula, Dyspepsia, etc. This medicine enters into the circulation, and eradicates disease wherever located. It purifies the blood and other fluids of the body, removes obstruction in the pores of the skin, and produces enlargements of the glands or bones. It increases the appetite, removes headache and drowsiness, and invigorates the whole system, and imparts animation to the diseased and debilitated constitution. There is nothing superior to it in the whole materia medica. It is perfectly safe and extensive, and has the advantage of clearing the system, and accompanying the idea of swallowing medicine.

Agency for the sale of all Dr. Jayne's preparations at the Quincy, Oct. 25.

GREAT ENGLISH REMEDY

For Coughs, Colds, Asthma, and Consumption.
The great and only remedy for Coughs, Colds, Asthma, and CONSUMPTION, is the HUNGARIAN BALM OF LIFE, discovered by the celebrated Dr. Buchan of London, England, and introduced into the United States under the immediate superintendence of the inventor.

The extraordinary success of this medicine, in the case of pulmonary diseases, warrants the American agent in soliciting for treatment the worst possible cases that can be found in the community—cases that seek relief in vain from any of the common remedies of the day, and have been given up by the most distinguished Physicians, as confirmed and incurable. The Hungarian Balm has cured and will cure the most desperate of cases. It is no quack nostrum, but a standard English medicine, of known and established efficacy.

Every family in the United States should be supplied with Buchan's Hungarian Balm of Life, not only to counteract the consumptive tendencies of the climate, but to be used as a preventive medicine in all cases of Colds, Coughs, Spitting of Blood, pain in the side and chest, irritation and soreness of the Lungs, Bronchitis, difficulty of breathing, hectic fever, night sweats, emaciation and general debility, Asthma, Influenza, Hooping Cough and Croup.

Sold in large bottles, at $1 per bottle, with full directions for the restoration of Health.
Pamphlets, containing a mass of English and American certificates, and other evidence, showing the unequalled merits of this Great English Remedy, may be obtained of the agents, gratuitously.

DAVID F. BRADLEE, sole Agent of the United States, 119 Court-street, Boston.

AGENTS—A. E. Dubois, Randolph; R. Whiton, Hingham; D. Brewer, Dorchester; S. Langley, & Bonney, Abington; and in Quincy by Mrs. E. HAYDEN.

Quincy, March 1.

Fare on the Boston and Lowell Railroad has been reduced to sixty-five cents. Over the same road to Nashua, one dollar; to Concord, (N. H.) one dollar seventy-five cents.

The Editor of the Worcester Spy has received from a friend in West Boylston, a red apple of very good quality, without seeds or core, and understands that the fruit is produced without any blossom upon the tree.

A youth who lately hung himself at Galena, (Ill.) to prevent any accident, filled his pockets full of rocks and gave slack rope enough to the rope to allow a drop of twenty feet. The arrangement was tolerably effectual.

There is now growing, on the very top of Portkerry Church steeple, in Wales, about forty feet from the surface of the earth, an apple tree, with from seventy to eighty apples thereon.

It is said that a French surgeon recently replaced the cornea of the eyes of a young girl, blinded with the small pox, with those of a young dog, and that the patient can distinguish day from night.

At the Cattle Show, connected with the American Institute at New York, recently, there were exhibited a pair of milk white mules—also, a couple of milk white Guinea fow!

In the years 1840, not less than 471,657 pounds of tobacco were raised in Connecticut. East Windsor raised 244,666 pounds. It has increased greatly since then.

In the changeful nature of our climate, it must be expected that we should at all times and seasons, be the continual prey of Consumption, Liver Complaint, Coughs, Colds, Asthma and Pains in the Chest and Side. We are then wholly dependent on the power of medicinal remedies to drive away these terrible complaints. A faithful use of C. Brinckerhoff's Health Restorative, will eradicate the most stubborn case possible. The general agent has a case now entirely cured, where two months before, the faculty told the patient to go home to die, as no earthly means could prevent his death. The agent presented him with two bottles of the Restorative, and told him to use it; after the first bottle, he was relieved and began to attend to his business, and the tenth bottle entirely freed him from every vestige of disease.

A CARD.
The Members of Tiger Engine Co., No. 2, tender their thanks to Mr. Edward Gray for refreshments provided after the fire, on the evening of Oct. 26th; Also, to the citizens of Weymouth, for refreshments provided at Wales' Hotel on the evening of Oct. 25th.

Messrs. BROWN, LAWRENCE & STICKNEY,
IN the Basement of the Old City Hall, State Street, BOSTON, most respectfully invite the inhabitants of this County and vicinity, to call at their large Establishment, and examine the extensive Stock of READY MADE CLOTHING,

facturing from the best material, and after the most approved style, which they offer for sale, wholesale or retail, at prices which cannot fail to please those who are desirous of having precisely the article they pay
for.

We wish to assure all who may favor us with a trial, that we do not compete with any, in price or durability of our apparel, who deal in cheap "Slop Goods."
The superior manner in which all our Garments are made, being done under our own supervision, will of itself recommend our goods to all who want strong and handsomely made Clothing. We therefore expect to have all who are in pursuit of such Clothing, to call and test the truth of our statements.

Postscript. They would also state that we have one of the largest assortments of WINTER CLOTHS ever before offered to the public, to which we would invite the attention of persons about to visit the city with the intention of obtaining an outfit made in the most fashionable style.

New Fall and Winter Goods.
JOHN DINEGAN
WOULD respectfully inform his customers and the public, that he has received several cases of English, French and German

be found to be entirely new articles in this market, and will come very cheap.

In addition to the above, I have also received a complete assortment of Superfine Cloths, such as

A good assortment of BLUE, which will come remarkably cheap for Dress or Frock Coats, or Boys'
Jackets and Pants.

A COMPLETE ASSORTMENT OF
FRENCH DOESKINS AND CASSIMERES.
Among the assortment I have received may be seen, a lot of heavy TWEEDS, all wool, suitable for Coats which will come cheaper than can be bought in any store in Boston, say fifty cents per yard or a Coat made up complete for $4.00.

VESTINGS,
Of every description; FIGURED SILK AND SATIN, remarkably cheap; a good variety of Cashmere
and Valencia. A Vest will come from $1.75 to $3.50, made to order.

The liberal patronage I have received since I came to Quincy, has enabled me to open as choice a selection of Goods as ever was introduced into this market.

I return my customers and the public my sincere thanks for their liberal patronage, and I respectfully invite them to call and examine my present stock of Goods. I can make garments considerably cheaper, as well and of as good cloth as can be had in any Store in the city of Boston. The reason I can do these things are, in the first place I am prepared to cut and make a garment with any man that can be named
my own work. These are facts that are worth the consideration of those who wish to get their garments where they can get them cheapest and best, and to suit them in every respect or no sale.

I have adopted the one price system. I am fully convinced it is the most honest way of doing business, and my terms are Cash. JOHN DINEGAN,

MISCELLANY.

MY WIFE,
OR, THE RIGHT ONE AT LAST.

BY FREDERICK BREMER.

'But it is known with certainty in what language Adam declared his love to Eve?' I said one day a friend of mine, a linguist, with earnestness, to which he just as seriously replied, 'Yes, quite certain! It was the very language in which she answered him!'

A profound answer! 'Tis pity only, that did not become wiser in the matter; and a pity it is on the whole, an everlasting pity that we know so little about love transactions previous to the flood! Could a love story fished up from that time, it would possess more freshness and vigor than even the very last of our novels, and this the first one in the morning time, within the groves of paradise how peculiar it must have been!

Alas! still in this world, so many thousand years old, a spirit of the paradisaical spring breathing through the life of every man, in the moment that he exclaims, 'I love! I am loved! Food and clothing, office and household, and thine, great and small, circumstances troubles, which our orderly world (very like ancient paradise, I suspect!) has arranged around us, to tame our will and steady course; to make us sensible and dull; to forget in this instant, or rather all is transformed, idealized; a living spirit is breathed into the clay.

Beside, we do not stand on earth then, we soar, we dance, we fly! Yes; even in the present day, life brings forth flowers for a happy son of Adam, in the moment when he finds his Eve! But Adam, he was the best! For there being but only one Eve in his day, could not be mistaken; and she on her could have neither choice nor suffer disappointment. But we begin! We do not find easy, in the enormous swarms of Adam's progeny, to judge who is the right one for us; every body would honestly confess his experience on this score, it would be very instructive and surely very interesting too. And on being sure of teaching or amusing the world any other way, I will now take the opportunity and candidly confess my mistakes in searching for the Eve I once adored in—ROSE GREEN.

Oh! how beautiful she was! Nay, how sweet, charming, bewitching! I would describe her. Already, when I was a cadet, she charmed me; she bewitched me from the time I was in the fourth class, a more dangerous woman there never was a young man with lively feelings. Her country was so natural, so united with goodness, childish gracefulness, that it was impossible to see anything but the most angelic influence therein. At the military academy I read her name in my books. If I were drawn there in the midst of circles and squares, the only line I saw clearly, was the road which led me to her home. And when I got to the flower bespangled Green Valley, my mother in the slow but friendly accents, dressed me, 'My dear Baron, you must here come to home!' I replied, 'Certainly, I love you!' and felt entirely at home. 'I love you, so that I saw nothing, knew nothing, thought of nothing, except "Rose".'

It was always lively at Green Valley. There were plenty of visitors and amusements, when the young people of the house were aquatic or other pleasure excursion, it was ways I who should manage it, and on the subject to the old baroness, the mother whom all the children entertained a whole fear. Generally she used then to say, 'My dear Baron! if you are with them I suppose have to say yes, for then I depend upon looking after the children!' 'Certainly! I; but I could not take care of myself, and no attention to nobody nor nothing but'

Worms Kill Thousands.

CHILDREN are most subject to them, but persons of all ages are liable to be afflicted with them. Bad breath, pain about the lips, flushed cheeks, picking at the nose, wasting away, leanness, pain in the bowels, joints or limbs, disturbed sleep, frightful dreams, moaning and sometimes a voracious appetite, are among the symptoms of worms. Many are doctored for months for some other imaginary disease, when one box of Sherman's Worm Lozenges would effect a cure. Dr. Ryan, corner of Prince street and the Bowery, cured a man of worms that was reduced to a skeleton, and by only one box of Sherman's Lozenges; he is now as fat as an Alderman. The Hon. B. B. Beasley has saved the life of one of his children by them. The sales of over two millions of boxes has fully tested them. They are the only infallible worm destroying medicine known. What family will be without them?

Consumption, Coughs, Colds, Whooping Coughs, Asthma, and all affections of the lungs, will find a healing value in Sherman's Cough Lozenges. They saved the Rev. Richard D. Forest, the Rev. Mr. Streeter, Jonathan Howarth, Esq., and that worthy old hero, Leonard, from the consumptive's grasp. They cured in one day the Rev. Mr. Dunbar, the Rev. M. Hancock, Wm. H. Attree, Esq., of distressing coughs. They are the pleasantest cough medicine and cure the soonest of any known remedy.

Headache, Sea-sickness and palpitation, relieved in from five to ten minutes by Sherman's Camphor Lozenges. Persons attending crowded rooms or traveling will find them to impart buoyancy of spirits and renew their energies. Those suffering from too free living will find a few of the lozenges to dispel the horrors and horrors of spirits. Mr. Knauth of the Sunday Mercury has repeatedly cured himself of severe headache by them. Captain Chadwick, of the packet ship Wellington, has witnessed their efficacy in a great many cases of sea-sickness. They operate like a charm upon the agitated or shattered nerves, as Sherman's Poor Man's Plaster does, on the Rheumatism, lumbago, pain or weakness in the side, back, breast, or any part of the body. Mr. B. G. Rogers, 30 Ann Street, Henry R. Goulding, 35 1/2 Chatham street, Moses J. Henriques, Esq., and a multitude of others have experienced the wonderful efficacy of these Plasters. Price only 12 1/2 cents. Caution necessary to see that you get the genuine Sherman's Lozenges and Plasters, as there are many worthless articles attempted to be palmed off in place of them, by those who would trade with your life for a shilling.

Dr. Sherman's warehouse is at 106 Nassau street, New York. Also, sold by Redding & Co., 8 State street, Boston; J. Babcock and M. D. Plummer, Milton; Eli Thayer, Weymouth; King & Nash and N. N. Dyer, Abington; R. Gleason, Dorchester; Wm. A. Torrey, South Weymouth; A. E. Dubois, Randolph; and by Mrs. E. HAYDEN, rear of the Stone Temple, Quincy.

MALAY RELIGION. Only one way is thought by the religious Malay, to lead straight to heaven, and on this being resolved, he offered up his prayers, performed his ablutions, and prepared to "run a muck." The fanatic who thus determines, first vows to his God to destroy every living thing he may meet on his path; to spare neither sex nor relationship, to turn neither to the right nor to the left, but to sacrifice all indiscriminately till he himself in turn is sacrificed. He first proceeds to oil his body, all over to elude capture as long as possible (for the more victims he makes the more certain is his road to heaven.) He casts off every thing that may be caught at; shaves his head lest he should be seized by the hair; takes a very large portion of opium or some other maddening poison, then arming himself with a knife or creese in either hand, he rushes forth to immolate all he may encounter.

OLD COLONY RAIL ROAD.

We availed ourselves of the invitation extended to us by the Directors of the Old Colony Rail Road to visit the landing of the Pilgrims on the occasion of the opening of the road for public travel. It is now nearly two and a quarter centuries since the May Flower, after innumerable perils, landed our ancestors on the "stern and rock bound coast" of Plymouth. The cars left Boston about ten o'clock, with several hundred invited guests, and when they reached Quincy we took a seat in them and arrived in Plymouth about half past twelve, the distance being about thirty-seven miles. After our arrival we were escorted by a band of music to Pilgrim Hall where were seen many Indian and Pilgrim curiosities, the interesting relics of olden times. After a short congratulatory address of Mr. Loud, we partook of a simple but bountiful collation, which received ample justice from the assembled multitude. After the collation was concluded appropriate addresses were made by several distinguished gentlemen.

The road in most places is completed, but as we were informed by one of the directors, there remained much to do in leveling it and rendering it substantial. In all new roads much time is required for the ground to become sufficiently solid to prevent it from being undulated, and constant attention in this particular is always necessary. The depots at the several stations are in a process of completion, and when the whole route is finished the journey to Plymouth will afford great pleasure, not only from beauty of the scenery and excellence of the road but also from the many interesting associations which belong to the holy spot where England's exiles from religious persecution first found a resting place amid the unexplored forest of the western world.

We left the Old Colony on our return at three o'clock and arrived safe and sound, well pleased with our excursion and with the kind hospitalities which we received from many of the citizens of Plymouth. We feel well assured that the road must be a profitable investment for the proprietors, as the necessary business of that section of the State will turn a great amount of travel and freight over it, which formerly found its way to the city by land and water carriage. Strangers too visiting the city will avail themselves of the great facility afforded by this conveyance to visit a spot so memorable in the history of New England; a spot forever rendered sacred by the most holy associations. The pure principles and noble daring which was so deeply implanted in the hearts of our Pilgrim fathers is breathing in the spirits of their sons and will shed its sacred influences through all the generations of coming time, showing to the world that an unsullied name, a religious character and a pure exemplar is the best inheritance which can be transmitted to posterity.

Aye, call it holy ground,
The soil where first they trod;
They have left unstained what there the found—
Freedom to worship God.

HALL CEMETERY. A monument of about thirty tons in weight has recently been erected in the Hall Cemetery in this town. It is formed of a single block of granite, of four feet mean diameter, and about thirty feet high, and is rough pointed. An excavation was made in the base in which was deposited some of the tools now made use of in the working of granite, viz: one Bush hammer, one Peen hammer, with drills, chisels, wedges and half rounds. A package was also included, containing the Quincy Patriot with the Voting List and the Aurora, with a pamphlet containing the Constitution and by-laws of the Association with a plan of the grounds.

The implements for working granite were coated with wax, to preserve them from oxidation, and were deposited in order to show (should the present white race become extinct, and the site of the monument be visited by the curious at some future period) that the granite of the present day was not wrought with copper tools.

The whole is intended to be somewhat unique in its appearance, and of a rural character. A mound is to be raised about the base, with creepers trained in a spiral manner to the summit. It is also to be crowned with an appropriate figure, and is to have an inscription giving the name of the ground and date of its consecration. With regard to the taste of the design there may be a difference of opinion, but as the moving of heavy bodies has always been considered as evidence of energy and skill, it may be presumed that this monument will not be viewed at a future period as the work of an effeminate race.

TOWN MEETINGS.

A meeting of the inhabitants of this town was held last Monday, for local purposes, William Seaver, Esq., Moderator.

Voted—To accept that portion of the Report of the Selectmen relating to laying out a new road from Willard Street, over the Granite Railway, to the house of Thomas Graham, and reject that part from Adams to Willard Street.

CONCERT. We call the attention of our citizens to the grand Concert of vocal and instrumental music which is to take place at the Town Hall on Tuesday evening next. No testimony of ours can add to the well acknowledged reputation of Messrs. E. & J. K. Kendall, who stand unrivalled in their excellence and power upon the instruments which they preside over with more than magic skill. Mr. Swift who takes part in the Concert, is a vocalist of surpassing merit and whose name alone among the performers would be a sufficient inducement for any lover of song to be present at the performance; but when we see added to his name that of the Kendalls with bugle and clarinet and Miss Kendall, whose sweet voice is like the silver rippling of a summer current, we cannot doubt but that every one whose soul is moved by concord of sweet sounds will avail themselves of so excellent an opportunity of enjoying this pure and rational gratification.

THE SUPPOSED MURDER. At the recent session of the municipal Court of Boston, the grand jury returned two indictments against Albert J. Tirrell, alias De Wolf—the first charging him with the murder of Maria A. Bickford, and the second for setting fire to the house in which she was killed. Whoever arrests him will not only be entitled to the reward of one thousand dollars lately offered, but also to the reward of two thousand dollars offered for the detection of incendiaries, by the city authorities some months ago.

OLD COLONY RAILROAD. Cars now run regularly over this road, from Plymouth to Boston, twice a day, leaving the depot at Plymouth at half past seven in the morning and three o'clock in the afternoon. Returning, leave Boston at eight in the morning and half past three in the afternoon. The obstruction occasioned by the sinking of a portion of the road at Tirrell's Cedar Swamp, in South Weymouth, has been repaired and trains now pass the whole distance. The cars are handsome, durable, and conveniently constructed as any now running in New England. With the conductors we have formed no acquaintance and consequently have no knowledge of their capability, but with one at least of the engineers, John S. Pickering, we have no hesitation in speaking favorably of his knowledge, skill, and other proper qualifications for that very important post of duty.

THE ELECTION. The present excellent whig incumbent lacks an election by the people. There are however eleven whig Senators chosen, and one hundred and seventy odd whig members elected to the House, which secures the choice of a Governor and other officers of the government of that political faith for the ensuing year. The democrats will have only fifty, and the Native Americans three members of the lower branch.

In the ninth Congressional district there has again been no choice—the democratic nominee leading his whig opponent.

PROJECTED RAILROAD. A Committee has been chosen to petition the Legislature for a charter for a Railroad from Cohasset to Quincy, and to ascertain and report at a future meeting the most advisable route for such road.

PROGRESSING WITH ZEAL. The grading, masonry, and superstructure for the entire route of the extension of the Fall River Railroad, to the junction with the Old Colony in Braintree, have been contracted for, to be completed by the first of August, 1846.

MICHIGAN ELECTION. The election in this State has resulted favorably for the democratic party, by about their usual majority, sufficiently large for all useful purposes.

UNCERTAINTY OF LIFE. The accident which befel Mr. Alpheus M. Heustis, noticed in our paper last week, resulted in his death. The liberality of the public is deservedly called to the wants of his widow and orphan children. Let charity be open hearted on this occasion.

SNOW. Snow fell at Cayuga Bridge, N. Y., on Sunday last, to the depth of eighteen inches, and the engine had to proceed with only the baggage car. The trains were delayed several hours.

SUMMARY OF INTELLIGENCE.

In Louisiana, the newspapers charge ten dollars to candidates for office for announcing their names to the public.

The colored man, against whom thirty six indictments have been found, in Maryland, for insurance, has been tried upon ten of them and found guilty, and sentenced to forty years imprisonment.

Among the expenditures for Queen Victoria's household, for one year, are for Wine, Ale, Beer and other liquors thirty-three thousand and for Bread only ten thousand dollars!

Twenty thousand are weekly spent it is estimated in theatrical amusements in New York.

There are two hundred and eight hacks, two hundred and fifty cabs, and two hundred and thirty-nine omnibusses in New York city; making in all six hundred and ninety-seven public conveyances.

The Emperor of China has issued an edict in which he says he does not wish to exclude the Christian religion from the dominions, but means to punish with rigor those who make that religion a cloak under which crimes are committed.

The Duke of Wellington has issued a general order to the British Army, prohibiting the formation of Temperance Societies in any of the regiments, or in fact any societies at all; it being thought that societies of this sort have the effect of inducing designing men to use them as the instruments for spreading disaffection and sedition among the men.

A great fire has recently occurred at Wilmington (N. C.) destroying one entire square, one hundred and seventy-five thousand dollars. It was the work of an incendiary, this being the fifth or sixth attempt to fire the same square within the year.

A decision has lately been given in one of the courts in the City of New York, that omnibus proprietors are common carriers and liable for the loss of property entrusted to their care though they receive no extra compensation for the transportation.

At the late term of the Superior Court sitting at New Haven, (Conn.) for that county, no less than thirteen divorces were granted.

Seventy-seven thousand newspapers were mailed at the Post Office at Concord, (N. H.) during the single month of October. They were all printed in that town.

The American Peace Society, in a circular just issued, request the clergy, to preach on "Peace," on the approaching Thanksgiving days, throughout the country.

James Powers, who was to have been tried for his life at Salem, (Mass.) last week, for committing an outrage upon a young girl, saved his neck by marrying her on the morning his trial was to have commenced. The testimony of the girl was thus lost.

GREAT ENGLISH REMEDY
For Coughs, Colds, Asthma, and Consumption.

The great and only remedy for Coughs, Coughs, Asthma, and CONSUMPTION, is the HUNGARIAN BALSAM OF LIFE, discovered by the celebrated Dr. Buchan of London, England, and introduced into the United States under the immediate superintendence of the inventor.

The extraordinary success of this medicine, in the case of pulmonary diseases, warrants the American agent in soliciting for treatment the worst possible cases that can be found in the community—cases that seek relief in vain from any of the common remedies of the day, and have been given up by the most distinguished Physicians, as confirmed and incurable. The Hungarian Balsam has cured and will cure, the most desperate of cases. It is no quack nostrum, but a standard English medicine, of known and established efficacy.

Every family in the United States should be supplied with Buchan's Hungarian Balsam of Life, not only to counteract the consumptive tendencies of the climate, but to be used as a preventive medicine in all cases of Colds, Coughs, Spitting of Blood, pain in the side and chest, irritation and soreness of the Lungs, Bronchitis, difficulty of breathing, hectic fever, night sweats, emaciation and general debility, Asthma, Influenza, Hooping Cough and Croup.

It is sold in large bottles, at $1 per bottle, with full directions for the restoration of Health.

Pamphlets, containing a mass of English and American certificates, and other evidence, showing the unequalled merits of this Great English Remedy, may be obtained of the agents, gratuitously.

DIED.

In this town, 11th inst., Mrs. Emily, wife of Mr. Charles Marsh, aged 25.

When autumn winds were sighing, and the flowers had passed away,
And fallen leaves upon the earth, all seared and withered lay—
When mourning nature through the trees, its dying requiem sung,
She faded in her loveliness, the beautiful and young.

No more her childhood's gentle song, like silvery waters clear,
Shall greet with quiet tenderness affection's listening ear;
No more the place through life's brief hour, that she was wont to fill,
Shall aye be lighted with her smile, for all is dark and still.

We listened to the mournful knell, that told her burial hour,
And sighed to think the cold damp earth should hide so fair a flower;
'Tis but a few short months since she, who sleeps so lowly now,
Before the holy altar knelt and breathed her bridal vow.

But early friends have gathered round her sad and silent bier,
And shed above her lifeless mould, the unavailing tear;
Yet there is one whose bitter tears no soothing nor gives relief—
The partner of her sunny joys and saddened hours of grief.

Rest, sleeper, rest—for thee no more the bud will open in spring,
Nor summer's breeze through blooming flowers to thee a fragrance bring,
For mourning friends thy mouldering form to earth's dark tomb consign,
And fondly trust in yon blue heaven, a happier home is thine.

QUINCY PATRIOT.

New Fall and Winter Goods.

JOHN DINEGAN
WOULD respectfully inform his customers and the public, that he has received several cases of English, French and German

BROAD CLOTHS,
OF THE VERY BEST DESCRIPTION.
Among the selection I have made may be found, Plain and Double Weaved English BEAVERS;
Plain and Figured PILOT CLOTH;
Several pieces of FRENCH BROADCLOTH, suitable for Over Coats or Dress Frock Coats, which will be found to be entirely new articles in this market, and will come very cheap.

In addition to the above named, I have also received a complete assortment of Superfine Cloths, such as
JET BLACK, BLUE BLACK AND GOLDEN BROWN'S;
A good assortment of BLUE, which will come remarkably cheap for Dress or Frock Coats, or Boys'
Jackets and Pants.

A COMPLETE ASSORTMENT OF FRENCH DOESKINS AND CASSIMERES.
VESTINGS,
Of every description; FIGURED SILK AND SATIN, remarkably cheap; a good variety of Cashmere
and Valencia. A Vest will come from $1.75 to $3.50, made to order.

The liberal patronage I have received since I came to Quincy, has enabled me to open as choice a selection of Goods as ever was introduced into this market.

I return my customers and the public my sincere thanks for their liberal patronage, and I respectfully invite them to call and examine my present stock of Goods. I can make garments considerably cheaper, as well as of as good cloth as can be had in any Store in the city of Boston. The reason I can do these things are, in the first place I am prepared to cut and make a garment with any man that can be named
there, in the next place, I can purchase my goods as cheap as any man can do, and I cut and superintend my own work. These are facts that are worth the consideration of those who wish to get their garments where they can get them cheapest and best, and to suit them in every respect or no sale.

I have adopted the one price system. I am fully convinced it is the most honest way of doing business,
and my terms are Cash.
JOHN DINEGAN,
Quincy, Sept. 27. 1f

Fall and Winter Goods.
Let another man praise thee and not thine own mouth; a stranger and not thine own lips.

A LARGE assortment, consisting of as great a variety as is usually kept in any Store, all of which will be sold at low prices, viz:

Blue; Alpacaes, M. de Laines, PRINTS; Edgings, Muslins, Laces, and a good assortment of domestic Flannels, Cottons, Yarn, etc.

SLIPPERS, BOOTEES and TIES.
Gentlemen's HATS, CAPS, GLOVES, Suspenders, NECK TIES, Ladies' GRAYETS, Black Satin
SCARFS, Shaker SHIRTS and DRAWERS, Linen
BOSOMS and COLLARS, Wool and Cotton Socks.

BOOTS.
Men's Sewed Calf Boots; Stout Pegg'd do; Slippers.
A good assortment of ready made
SACK COATS, PANTS and VESTS, FLANNEL SHIRTS, Cotton do.

Also—Several Cases SEWING COTTON.
BEAVER, BROAD & PILOT CLOTHS, which can be made into any style of garment to suit
the fancy of the purchaser.
Blue Black, Steel Mixed and Fancy
DOESKINS, CASSIMERES & SATINETTES, AND OF
VESTINGS,
EVERY DESCRIPTION NOW IN USE.

All persons wishing to clothe the other man would find it to their advantage to give us an early call.

N. B. People passing through this village from the neighboring towns to visit the famous city, (where they are liable to be caught in traps equal to mock auctions in New York city,) would find it to their advantage to call and examine Mr. Russell's style of cutting. To those acquainted with the abilities of Mr.
Russell as an artist, it is superfluous to say one word,
but from all unacquainted we would solicit an early
call to examine his new style of Falot or Overcoat, designed for Fall or Winter wear. Feeling confident that he will give satisfaction we recommend him to the public.
Quincy, Oct. 4. 1f

Tailoring.
I WOULD respectfully intimate to my friends and the public, that I continue to occupy rooms in the Store of E. Packard. Feeling grateful for past favors,
I would solicit a continuance of that patronage so liberally bestowed since I commenced business. Being regularly in receipt of the latest and most approved English, French and American styles, with the abilities of first rate workmen, (employing none else)
enables me to produce a garment every way desirable
in point of style and finish.

People are requested to call and examine for themselves, and not be cajoled by the rigmorale advertisements, for "by square and rule works many a fool."
My theory of cutting being entirely different from that used by country tailors, aids me in giving a perfect fit to the most imperfect form.
All asked is a fair trial and no favor.
JOHN RUSSELL.

POETRY.

For the Quincy Patriot.

THE FIRST WHITE HAIR.

How stranger—hah, you are not welcome quite,
Amidst my glossy brown, one hair of white
Looks odd indeed—looks odd and very queer—
What is your business and what brought you here?

Speak! thou most ominous and lone white hair;
"I will—one word of warning, friend prepare!"
Prepare, I will, to oust thee by the root,
Your looks with my complexion does not suit.

You bring not righteousness enough, I doubt,
To add the honorable, and therefore out;
I did not dream to find you here so soon,
What is't you say—with me 'tis afternoon?"

What then, my limbs as yet are stout and strong,
And I may hope to live God knows how long;
"How long you do not know," the hair replies,
"Therefore regard my warning and be wise."

"If you would rob the conquerer of his sting,
Think on the admonition that I bring:
Respect the warning of your first white hair,
Prepare thyself in time—for death prepare."

F. M. ARLINGTON.

A HUNDRED YEARS AGO.

Where, where are all the birds that sang
A hundred years ago?
The flowers that all in beauty sprang
A hundred years ago?

The lips that smiled,
The eyes that wild
In flashes shone
Where eyes upon—

Where, oh where, are lips and eyes,
The maiden's smile, the lover's sighs,
That lived so long ago?

Who peopled all the city street,
A hundred years ago?
Who filled the church with faces meek,
A hundred years ago?

The sneering tale
Of sister frail,
The plot that work'd
A brother's hurt,

Where, oh where, are plots and sneers,
The poor man's hopes, the rich man's fears,
That lived so long ago?

Where are the graves where dead men slept
A hundred years ago?
Who were they, the living wept
A hundred years ago?

By other men
That know not them,
Their lands are till'd,
Their graves are fill'd;

Yet nature then was just as gay;
And bright the sun shone as to-day,
A hundred years ago!

THE CHRISTIAN'S REWARD.

'Tis not like the monarch's, a chaplet of gold,
Nor yet like the victor's a laurel so cold;
But his is a crown never fading and bright,
A laurel 'till last till eternity's night.

It is not the wealth that this world can bestow,
Or honors so transient from mortals below;
But his is the richest of treasures combined,
The blessings bestowed by the infinite Mind.

While sojourning below, his thoughts are on high,
With the God of his fathers beyond the bright sky;
Where seraphs in glory exulting sing
Their anthems of praises to Jesus, their King.

Having finished the race he is destined to run,
His labors all ended, his work being done,
He rises in triumph to mansions above,
To bask in the smiles of a dear Savior's love.

AFFECTION.

What I most prize in woman
Is her affection—not her intellect.
Compare me with the great ones of the earth—
What am I? why a pigmy among giants?

But if thou lovest—mark me, I say love—
The greatest of thy sex exceeds thee not!
The world of the affections is thy world—
Not that of man's ambition. In that stillness

Which most becomes a woman—calm and holy—
Thou sittest by the fireside of the Heart,
Feeding its flame. The elements of fire
Is pure. It cannot change its nature;

But burns as brightly in a gypsy camp
As in a palace hall.

ANECDOTES.

"Mister printer," said a little urchin, poking himself into the "sanctum" with a paper in his hand, and pointing to a word, "mother wants to know what's the meaning of that word?"

"Wist word—that salmagundi?"

"Yes, sir."

"Tell your mother that Webster says it is a mixture of chopped meat and pickled herring, with oil, vinegar, molasses, red flannel and onions, to be eaten three times a day!"

"By thunder! if the old woman didn't think it was a scripture name."

"What's the price of this silk?" inquired a deaf old lady of a young shopman.

"Seven shillings," was the reply.

"Seventeen shillings!" exclaimed she, "I'll give you thirteen."

"Seven shillings, ma'am, is the price of the silk," replied the honest draper.

"Oh! seven shillings," the lady sharply rejoined, "I'll give you five."

Relationships are rather far-fetched sometimes both in Scotland and Ireland. "Do you know Tom Duffy, Pat?" "Know him is it?" says Pat; "sure, he's a very near relation of mine; he once wanted to marry my sister Kate."

"You ought to have a pension," said a wag to an unfortunate who was in the habit of taking a drop too much.

"How so?" inquired red eye.

"Why, you fell at the battle of Brandy Wine."

A coward soldier is like a lazy clerk, because they both fear a discharge.

C. BRINCKERHOFF'S

THE vegetable kingdom is provided by the God of Nature with herbs of different properties and suited when properly administered, to every condition of disease—it will not be contended but that it requires invention and well directed skill to prepare these native medicaments so that their remedial powers shall be well drawn out and the better applied; that is too apparent a necessity to require support. The Proprietor of the Health Restorative, in the number of years since he first commenced its preparation from the original family recipe has devoted a great portion of his time to the study of the medical effect and strength of each herb used in the compound. This study has had the effect of more perfectly convincing him of the superior curative power of the Health Restorative. It seems perfectly adapted to the cure of Consumption, Liver Complaint, Asthma, Colds, Coughs, and pains in the Side and Chest—for these diseases it is particularly recommended, with a certainty of success and satisfaction which can be felt in its force only by those who have been healed by its means. No consideration of pecuniary recompense was the proprietor; he is influenced solely by the great pleasure of ministering to the relief of suffering humanity, and has devoted such great expense to the future of this remedy, and deals out so largely in the quantity given, that the income barely suffices to cover the immense outlay. Let those who are seeking a Balm in Gilead, use the Health Restorative. The following certificate is from Dr. Chilton, the well known New York chemist.

"I have analyzed a bottle of medicine called 'C. Brinckerhoff's Health Restorative,' and find that it does not contain Mercury, or any other metallic preparation, nor opium in any of its forms. It is composed of vegetable matter entirely."

MRS. T. V. SULLIV

QUINCY PATRIOT.

SATURDAY, NOV. 22, 1845.

John A. Green, Editor.

MELANCHOLY EVENT. We regret to learn that Miss Ann Blanchard of Weymouth, an amiable and accomplished young lady, daughter of the late Mr. Nathaniel Blanchard of that place, closed her existence last Saturday evening by drowning herself in the river at Weymouth Landing, while under a nervous state of mind that produced mental alienation. She had been teaching school in Braintree, but relinquished it a few weeks since on account of ill health.

POSTPONEMENT. The Messrs. Kendall's concert noticed last week was postponed on account of illness. The time when it is to take will be hereafter made known.

A HARD CASE. In the capital case of Polly Bodine, at New York, it seems impossible to get a jury. Up to the last intelligence, twenty-six hundred and sixty jurors had been summoned, and the whole panel exhausted in getting nine who were qualified. Five hundred more were to be summoned, after which, if a jury was not obtained, the judge gave notice that he should give it up and proceed to other business.

NEW PAPERS. Sylvester Graham, heretofore well known as a lecturer on health, diet, &c., proposes the publication of a monthly journal, to be called "Graham's Journal of Health and Water Cure Advocate." Subscription price, one dollar. It is proposed to publish a paper to be called the "Christian Patriot," at Jamestown, (N. C.) to be devoted mainly to the discussion of American Slavery. Price two dollars in advance.

INTERESTING SUIT. It is reported that Col. James Watson Webb, editor of the New York Courier and Enquirer, has commenced a libel action against Horace Greeley, the editor of the Tribune newspaper, published in that city and advocating the whig cause in politics, for asserting that he was bribed by the late United States Bank, or words to that effect. Damages are laid to the amount of fifty-two thousand, the sum alleged as the bribe.

WRITING SCHOOL. Mr. R. Gilbert, favorably known as a teacher of Penmanship in the city of Boston, proposes opening a school in this town on MONDAY EVENING, 24th inst., at the Town House. From the specimens exhibited of his style and method of imparting the knowledge of writing to others, we can recommend him as an excellent instructor in penmanship.

MISSISSIPPI ELECTION. From the returns received, there is no doubt of the re-election of the present democratic incumbent of the gubernatorial office, and of the election of the four democratic nominees for members of Congress.

ECCLESIASTICAL. Rev. Joy H. Fairchild has been ordained as pastor of the "Payson Church and Society" in South Boston. Sermon by Rev. Dr. Leonard Woods of Andover.

THE ANTI-RENT MURDERERS. An opinion is expressed by the newspapers of the State of New York generally that the sentences of O'Connor and Van Steenburgh, anti-renters, convicted of the murder of deputy sheriff Steele, will be commuted by the Governor.

NEW HAMPSHIRE SENATOR. The Governor has appointed Hon. Benning W. Jenness of Stratford, Senator to the United States Congress, to fill the vacancy occasioned by the resignation of Hon. Levi Woodbury.

ANTI-TEXAS NEWSPAPER. The Massachusetts Anti-Texas Committee have issued a small sheet, weekly or oftener, to exist until the great question of the admission of Texas is settled. It is entitled The Free State Rally and Texas Chain Breaker.

HARVARD COLLEGE. It is understood that Hon. Edward Everett has consented to accept the appointment of President of Harvard University, in place of Hon. Josiah Quincy, resigned.

IMPORTANT SUIT. The Philadelphia Chronicle says that proceedings have been instituted in that city, by a prominent leader in the temperance movement, against a tavern-keeper for a violation of the law of 1793, which forbids all worldly employment on Sunday. This suit is brought to test the right of tavern-keepers to sell liquor on Sunday.

LOUISIANA. The democratic candidate has been elected to Congress from the third district in Louisiana, to fill a vacancy occasioned by the death of John B. Dawson, (dem.)

MONUMENT TO HALE. The project of erecting a monument of Quincy granite, forty-five feet in height, to the memory of Capt. Nathan Hale, a patriot of the American revolution, who was hung by British authorities as a spy, Sept. 23d, 1776, has again been revived and from present appearance will be speedily accomplished. It is to be erected at South Coventry, (Conn.)

LATE FROM MEXICO. The National (D. C.) Intelligencer states that Mexico proposes or consents to a renewal of diplomatic relations and to negotiations between her and the United States, as well concerning boundaries as the claims of our citizens—on the preliminary that our naval forces before Vera Cruz be withdrawn, which will be granted it is supposed.

James Clarke, who has been appointed Governor of Iowa, was formerly a journeyman printer at Harrisburg, (Pa.) He is now editor and proprietor of the Iowa Territorial Gazette.

IMPROVEMENT. The religious society under the ministrations of the Rev. John T. Burrell, at Quincy Point, have recently made an addition to their house of worship by which twenty pews are added. A new bell, weighing ten hundred and forty pounds, and which cost two hundred and eighty dollars, has been placed in the tower. These are gratifying evidences of the prosperity of the society under the labors of the present pastor.

FRAUD ON THE POOR. It is said that a great part of the barrels of flour sold in Massachusetts, are deficient in weight. Some of them fall short twenty pounds or more. It is stated that a certain flouring establishment saves at least thirty-six hundred dollars a year in that way. The loss falls principally on the consumers. It may be well for all who use flour to stand for their rights. When they pay the price of a barrel of flour, they have a right to one hundred and ninety-six pounds of flour and the barrel besides, which will weigh nearly or quite twenty pounds.

SCHOOL TEACHERS' CONVENTION. A Convention for the formation of a State Association of School Teachers, to which all teachers of Common Schools in the State are invited, is to be held at Brinley Hall, in Worcester, on Monday evening, and Tuesday next. A train of cars from Boston on Monday afternoon, will take members of the Convention to Worcester, and another will convey them back at the usual charge of a single passage. Such an Association will bring together teachers from various parts of the State, and among them will be men of sound views and large experience, who will be ready to impart "of their abundance," for the common good. In this way, whatever of excellence may exist in one part of the State, will be diffused through other parts.

STEAM PROPELLER MASSACHUSETTS. This steamer, about which some anxiety has been felt in New York, arrived at Holmes' Hole, on Wednesday last, after having touched at Nantucket, to land the Captain, who was seriously ill. In entering the Hole, she struck on a shoal, without, however, receiving material damage. The Massachusetts had been out twenty-eight days, owing to the heavy winds which prevailed during most of the passage.

CAPITAL PUNISHMENT. The National Convention to abolish the death punishment has just closed its session in Philadelphia. The Vice President of the United States, Hon. George M. Dallas, presided, and made a speech to the multitude. A large number of ladies were in attendance, and the greatest enthusiasm prevailed.

The following letter from Hon. John Quincy Adams was read during the deliberations of the meeting:—

Boston, Nov. 7th, 1845.
FELLOW CITIZENS—I regret my inability, from the state of my health, to attend the General Meeting of the Friends of the Abolition of Capital Punishment, to be held in your city on the 11th inst., to which I am invited by your Circular of the 28th ult.

Gladly would I co-operate with any Society whose object should be to promote the abolition of every form, by which the life of man can be voluntarily taken by his fellow-creature man. If there be any case which, in the intercourse of human society, can possibly justify this act, it is that sanctioned by the community for the punishment of enormous crimes.

In the progress of the human race towards that improved condition of their existence to which our religion teaches us that they are destined, the total abolition of violent extinction of the life of man by the will and act of his brother, is among the blessed promises of Futurity. War, Slavery, Murder and Homicide in any form, are evils, I fondly hope, to disappear hereafter from the annals of the human race upon earth. Every step in this progress that can be made during the remnant of my own life, will be hailed by me with inexpressible delight; and although the restoration of that sentence of the Almighty, that "whoso sheddeth man's blood, by man shall his own blood be shed," would in my prayers to Heaven, be the last accomplishment of the perfectability of man upon earth, I would gladly contribute to it, even in advance of some other forms of homicide more odious in themselves, but perhaps more deeply rooted in the infirmities of man's nature. I do, therefore, heartily wish and pray for the success of your efforts to promote the abolition of Capital Punishment, and if you can shape the laws of the land to a disclaimer of the right of Government itself to take from any human being the life granted him by his creator, I would welcome it as the harbinger of a brighter day, when no individual of the race of man shall ever lose his life by the act of another. I am, very respectfully, gentlemen, your friend and fellow citizen,
JOHN QUINCY ADAMS.

REPLY TO THE CHALLENGE. The following answer was returned by the Vulture Engine Company, No. 4, to the challenge from the Granite Engine Company, No. 3, which was published a few weeks since in the Patriot.

QUINCY, Nov. 7th, 1845.

Mr. C. L. Badger,
Sir—Your letter dated November 5th, purporting to be a challenge from Granite Engine Company, No. 3, to Vulture Engine Company, No. 4, was duly received and laid before the Company, No. 4, this present evening, November 7th. After due consideration, it was referred to a Committee of three, with instructions for them to make reply and say that they do not consider it, in its present form, worthy of notice, for the reason that it is not in accordance with the rules of honor and etiquette in such cases.

1st. We deem it the duty, according to all rules of honor, that the party challenged should have the privilege to select the time and place.

2d. We hold, in accordance with the same laws, that the party challenged should have a voice in the terms or manner of playing.

When, therefore, a challenge is given in its proper form, the Company, No. 4, holds themselves ready to duly consider it and to return a proper answer.

Yours, respectfully,
BARNABAS HOWARD,
GEORGE NEWCOMB,
CHARLES SPEAR, } Committee.

The steamer Mayflower now makes but one trip a day between Boston and Hingham; leaving Boston at eight o'clock in the forenoon, and Hingham at half past three in the afternoon.

There is a shirt bosom now on exhibition in New York, having nearly ninety-nine thousand stitches. Price eighteen dollars.

It is stated that Charles Freeman, the celebrated American giant, died recently in one of the public hospitals of London.

A disease as mysterious as that which affects potatoes, has attacked the fish in many of the rivers of England and Ireland.

President James K. Polk was fifty years of age the second day of this month—November.

To those that are laboring under diseases of the Lungs, Liver Complaint, &c., we would recommend the use of the Health Restorative of Mr. C. Brinckerhoff. It contains no mercury or any other being entirely vegetable, as has been tested by an eminent chemist of New York.

TEMPERANCE PARTY AT WEYMOUTH. The Washingtonian Tea Party by the young ladies and gentlemen of Weymouth and Braintree, which took place last Tuesday evening, at Wales' Hotel, was a pleasant and interesting festival at which a large number participated. The evening passed very pleasantly, with songs, speeches and the merry dance. The following songs were sung on the occasion.

TIME—The Rose Tree.
The cause we all are pleading,
Bless'd of Heaven it cannot fail
Triumphantly succeeding,
Yet cease not your ardent zeal,
For countless eyes are weeping,
Thousands strong delusions mourn
While folly's wages reap.
Then stretch forth the friendly hand.

The Eye that is all-seeing,
Prompting every righteous deed,
By thee thy brother freeing,
Can save e'en the helpless one;
Then let not means be wanting,
Brothers, sisters, lend your aid,
What e'er is needful granting,
Heav'n will pay the debt again.

And hearts that now are breaking
Sav'd by you from ruin's fangs,
To hope and joy awaking,
Will strewn flowers in your path,
And fill hearts with pleasure,
For love gains by all it gives
In God's own gen'rous measure,—
Then trust him the faithful one.

TUNE—Soldier's Return.
From hill and dale and fertile plain,
Where man has made his dwelling;
The friends of temperance rise again
Like some proud river swelling.

They come to offer at his shrine,
Whom all the good delight in,
And aided by a spark divine
Her altar fires relighting.
Ah, good it is to mingle here,—
The cause we now are aiding,
Will wipe away the mourner's tear,
Restore the bloom that's fading.

Here friends united heart and hand,
To help the cause endeavor;
Comparing notes in wisdom plan'd,
To ply the temperance lever.

But while around the festive board,
With spirits light as feather,
We closer draw the tripe cord
That binds our hearts together.

While free from care and sorrow here,
Our hopes and fortunes thriving;
Let's not forget what once we were
When we were heading driving.

'Tis well to turn our thoughts at times,
To days that have pass'd o'er us,
When with the minstrel's mad'ning rhymes
The glasses rang before us.

When roaring mirth and chuckling glee,
In winking spells had bound us,
And while we dream'd that we were free
The chains were clinging round us.

Oh holy be that blessed hour,
When he who rules creation,
From humble means produced a power
To save this mighty nation.

The temperance cause was struggling hard
'Till truth and justice own'd it;
Its merits failed of due regard,
'Till mercy's seal had crown'd it.

The Washingtonian brother band,
By heavenly council aided,
Have spread their leaven through the land
The rising mass pervaded.

No more the stubborn heart recoils,
While reason's voice is striving,
The drunkard-maker yields his spoils
Unnumbered hearts reviving.

Oh! aid the cause with heart and brain,
'Till all the land's enlightened;
'Till every brow has lost its stain,
And every eye is brightened.

Then swell the anthem loud and high—
A ransomed nation's offering—
And fill our Father's sparkling sky
With praise from all his offspring.

GREAT ENGLISH REMEDY
For Coughs, Colds, Asthma, and Consumption.

The great and only remedy for Coughs, Colds, Asthma, and CONSUMPTION, is the HUNGARIAN BALSAM OF LIFE, discovered by the celebrated Dr. Buchan of London, England, and introduced into the United States under the immediate superintendence of the inventor.

The extraordinary success of this medicine, in the case of pulmonary diseases, warrants the American agent in soliciting for treatment the worst possible cases that can be found in the community—cases that seek relief in vain from any of the common remedies of the day, and have been given up by the most distinguished Physicians, as confirmed and incurable. The Hungarian Balm has cured and will cure, the most desperate of cases. It is no quack nostrum, but a standard English medicine, of known and established efficacy.

Every family in the United States should be supplied with Buchan's Hungarian Balsam of Life, not only to counteract the consumptive tendencies of the climate, but to be used as a preventive medicine in all cases of Colds, Coughs, Spitting of Blood, pain in the side and chest, irritation and soreness of the Lungs, Bronchitis, difficulty of breathing, hectic fever, night sweats, emaciation and general debility, Asthma, Influenza, Hooping Cough and Croup.

Sold in large bottles, at $1 per bottle, with full directions for the restoration of Health.
Pamphlets, containing a mass of English and American certificates, and other evidence, showing the unequalled merits of this Great English Remedy, may be obtained of the agents, gratuitously.

C. BRINCKERHOFF'S
HEALTH RESTORATIVE.

A REMARKABLE AND SINGULAR ATTESTATION has just been made by an eminent member of the Medical Faculty, as to the curative power of C. Brinckerhoff's Health Restorative in cases of Consumption, Chronic Coughs and Colds, and Pains in the Side and Chest. This gentleman furnishes his patients with the Restorative, and finds it absolutely necessary, as he never had any prescription to produce the astonishing results realized by the use of the Restorative. This gentleman stands among his medical brethren as one of the most distinguished of his number; his name is left with the proprietor for reference. There is no doubt but that in a few years the leading physicians will prescribe this remedy, and that afflicted patients will use it and bless the hour that it was made known to them. Being a truly fine herbal medicine it is consequently of more importance, as every one feels safety while using it, and no sense of danger as if he were using deleterious minerals. Mr. Wilkes a respected merchant in New York, used the Restorative and was cured wholly from a dangerous cough and expectoration. The editor of the Commercial Advertiser with an earnest appeal commends it to the confidence of the sick, and affecting calls on them all to give it a fair trial before relinquishing every hope. The following certificate is from Dr. Chilton, the well known New York chemist:

"I have analyzed a bottle of medicine called 'C. Brinckerhoff's Health Restorative,' and find that it does not contain Mercury, or any other metallic preparation, nor opium in any of its forms. It is composed of vegetable matter entirely."

MISCELLANY.

THE MAIDEN AND THE WIFE.

Chapter I. The Maiden.

Mary Wickliffe was the belle of Concord. What hearts she pleased to win, she won; and what to break, she broke. That is, she smiled graciously upon this one, danced and flirted with that one, and talked about the moon with the other one, until this, that and the other one fancied themselves adored, and went straightway upon their knees before her. Heaven! she had not thought of such a thing! She had not thought of them in a serious way. She had only been amusing herself, for the want of something better to do—just as, at Mrs. Graham's party, she thrust out her little foot, speaking earnestly meanwhile to the lady on the left, on purpose to make that horribly awkward Ned Boylston stumble. By the way, the innocent fellow was passing her, holding nervously upon a coat button, on his way for the choice of a partner in the cotillion forming. And it was just as she threw the jealous Lydia Brooks into a fit of the nervous headache, the other day, by telling her that she—Mary herself—was about to be married to James Cummings; and, again by the way, said James Cummings had passed her these two months with lifted head, knit brow and smirking lips, because she came near dying by laughing at him one icy day, when he attempted to bow a la Française, and made instead a most provoking summerset. And, lastly, it was just as in childhood, she had been "forever in mischief," as her mother was wont to say; and as now, in her girlhood, she was always upon the que rize for amusement, or, at least occupation—this morning laughing, the next pouting—this morning running all about town, making costly and unnecessary purchases, and the next running all about town to show them.

Not that Mary Wickliffe was really more wicked than a thousand others, who, with temperaments which keep them all their lifetime half asleep; pass for very clever people—very excellent people indeed—how much steadier than Mary Wickliffe? Mary's brain was the trouble. This was so restless! This made her, from infancy, delight more in air and freedom than her food and drink.

"Oh, do let's have the window open!" she often said, like one suffocating. "One can't breathe to save one's life. There—now let me sit here. I wish I had been made into a bird."

Her dresses she could scarcely allow to touch her. This, in the days of tight lacing, was no small grievance to her mother, who loved to see her daughter looking prim; and to her dress-maker, who liked to say that she did Mrs. Thomas Wickliffe's work, and yet hardly dared to risk her reputation on the untidy fits she got for Mary. But Mary would have it so that she could breathe, throw her arms about and twist and turn; she took real comfort in all of these, she said.

She could not even endure her hair about her face, if it was the fashion—if ma did coaxed and if the curls were ever so much disposed to straggle.

Sitting and sewing—from this, above all other things, she begged her mother to spare her. "Oh, dear mother!" she would say, when she had sewed until she was nervous and ready to fly; "mother, I shall go out of my skin! Do let me go out doors just one minute—just one minute!"

If her mother refused, and doomed her to sew on, she reddened, threw her arms out, sighed, and last hit usually on some strange mode of relief.

"Sarah!" exclaimed she one day, while in this case, and while her contented little ten-year-old sister sewed and sang, "Sarah, let's do something—let's gape!"

She was perfectly serious; but her uncle, who sat near, looking up over the top of his paper, saw plainly enough the "lurking devil" in her eye.

"Well," said Sarah, smiling, always ready to oblige.

Sarah opened her mouth wide, and Mary filled it with the pantalette she was making. Still she was serious; but her uncle saw said "lurking devil" now peeping out at every dimple in her fat face, and at the corners of her eyes.

Sarah was ready to die of laughter.

"The next time, Miss Mary Wick, that you want any gaping done, I guess—ha! ha! ha! I guess you'll have it all to do yourself."

This did Mary good. She worked with some comfort a whole hour after it.

This was when Mary was a child—thirteen years old, though; and now, when our story opens, she was a woman of twenty-two. Still she was mischievous; and still it was for the want of something interesting to do. Still, air, freedom of speech and movement, were the supreme delights of her existence; and still she would have them, if people did say, "What a gipsy!" and if the match-making Mrs. Ladd did say, "You will lose the best match in town by this frolicking. A minister would never dare to marry such a wild one. He would have his whole church about his ears at once."

And this was true. Mr. Kame did not dare to marry such a wild one, although he understood her character; and had himself no doubt that in a sphere of such activity as his wife's must be, she would be one of the best and happiest of women. But he knew that, as Mrs. Ladd said, "he would have the whole church about his ears." He sighed, lost his appetite entirely, and grew quite shadowy after coming to the conclusion; and especially, after coming to the conclusion that the must marry; and that he must marry some exemplary lady, as his people were continually assuring him that by this means, his usefulness would be greatly increased. This "exemplary lady" he knew was, alias, Miss Lucretia Atwood. He married her, therefore; but only to learn that her seriousness had, indeed, been moroseness, her charitableness pharisaical ostentation.

Mary laughed and recreated more than ever for a few weeks; and then went on in exactly her old courses, climbing every mountain and hill that came in her way; riding a horse that was the terror of every other lady in town; ranging highways and by-ways in search of adventures and wild flowers, after doing up what household occupation came to her lot, with a railroad despatch; and, as her mother, who kept saying she was a spoiled child, could not help confessing, with the highest order and neatness.

But, in the midst of all this, the girl fell in love "entirely," and at first sight, too, although she had always maintained her utter disbelief in even the existence of the grand passion. She had always been quite sure that she would never love, but just as she loved her brother George; and, if she ever married, it would be out of sheer benevolence, to some one who was old, or sick, or poor, and in need of her.

But now see! Louis Alden was none of these; and yet she was forever acknowledging to herself and to him, that she could love him, and only him; she could leave every other thing and go with him, whether he were old or young, rich or poor, sick or well. If he only had love for her—deep, earnest love like hers, this was all she asked, and this she received in rich stores. Alden had, moreover, considerable wealth, high talent, and a lucrative business.

"Never was a better match!" said parents and friends on both sides, and all Concord. "Never was there a better man!" thought Mary.

Chapter II. The Wife.

It was the year 1840, and twelve years Mary had been a wife; eleven a mother.

"Poor creature!" and "poor Mrs. Alden!" people said now, when they saw how she toiled and denied herself; especially when they reflected in what indulgence she had been reared; how many and clamorous her wants for recreation, and luxuries of all sorts, had been, and how these had been gratified.

Now—ah! you would not have known her. Her eyes, once so full and restless—well might they be sunken then, and subdued, and gentle in their light; for Heaven knows that they had looked upon much long hours of watching and weariness; and although she sung, and tried to be hopeful always, and pressed their lids close, had yet let fall many a scalding tear. Her cheeks, to which, in early life, her habits of exercise and exposure to sun and air gave such freshness, were pale and thin. Her form was attenuated, and bowed somewhat; yet it seemed, by her strong voice, and the clear light of her eye, not so much in disease as in toil, confinement, and self-neglect.

At the opening of this sequel, she sat and bent low over her fine sewing, rocking her baby and lulling it with a low sweet melody. She lay down her work in her lap a moment, when she saw two beautiful heads raised in listening attitudes from a low bed near her, and, slightly smiling, sang again—"Peace is the pillow of my head," slowly repeated her oldest, a dear good girl of eleven. "Peace is the pillow of my head, too, mamma," echoed curly-headed Willie, two years younger. He smiled on his mother, half asleep although he was. The children both hugged their pillows close, as if they felt that they were indeed at peace, said "good night, mamma," in drowsy tones, and in a moment were fast asleep.

Two, between these and the baby in the cradle, our mother had laid away to sleep in the green churchyard near. She thought of them then; and, weary and lonely as she was, now that the children were asleep, and Louis had not come, she almost wished that it was for her, her other children, and her best beloved, her faithful one, to lie down with them; that she might rest; and that they might not be left to struggle on through the cold world without her. But it was only for a moment; and so transient, her strong will made all seasons of heart-sickness. They would come up on her sometimes, ay, often; in spite of her purposes of a perfect resignation under every trial that might be laid on her. The room in which Mary sat was their only one—upon the second floor of a large house of many tenements, opposite the splendid building they occupied in the early years of their married life. It was neatly but simply furnished. Many articles of taste were there, such as drawings, card-cases, alum, wax, and shell baskets. There was a pretty but cheap sideboard, on which were ranged their books, a few large shells, and bits of coral. On each of the south window ledges were flower pots, one containing a rose, the other a geranium now in full flower. These simple articles were their only luxuries. Mary always said with a cheerful smile; and dearly were they loved. Mary's clothes, her husband's and the children's were relics of the wardrobe of their more prosperous days—made to "look almost as well as new," by her ever busy fingers.

While Louis yet tarried, and Mary listens for his footfall on the stairs, we will explain briefly what has brought them to this. Avarice it was, in the heart of Louis's father, which, although he was already rich, near his grave, and with only one child, was continually crying—more! more! in his ear. This passion, which had always ruled him with a tyrannical sway, grew more clamorous in its appeals for indulgence, the nearer the old man felt himself drawn to that point, beyond which "there is no work, no device." The eastern land speculation mania seized him at last, and he made a desperate plunge. His own property, and much of Mary's father's, he staked; and it was lost. Then came sickness for Mary occasionally, on giving birth to her children; sickness and death for two of her little ones, and, at last, when times were at their hardest point, when Louis had just secured a good clerkship, after weeks of fruitless search, then came protracted debility and despondency on him.

Still Mary toiled, and sung, and smiled, even in the darkest hour. Still she declared, and sincerely, that she was happier than when she went through the days and years full of restless and frivolously employed activity, and conscious of living to no purpose. Surely this is beautiful—once unable to endure an hour's sedentary labor, now never heeding how much she might be hurried, or how long, if the work might be done, and if the bread might come; once impatient of control, restive under self-denial, fond of display; now, meekly and patiently bending her head to every yoke; in fine, once the maiden, and now the wife and mother—this was the change in our good, our best Mary. She was not then a "poor creature"; she was not then "poor Mrs. Alden," as some, who know nothing of the true glory of woman's character, often called her. "No. But Louis has come. He has told his story, it seems, while we have been telling ours, for he says—"You know I have said all along, Mary, that I only wanted permanent employment to make me perfectly content. I hope now this is secured, I shall not find that I deceived myself."

His eyes fill and Mary's. He bends low over his sleeping Louis; Mary rocks and looks on with a beautiful smile.

THE TEA-PARTY AT WEYMOUTH.

MR. EDITOR—Below you have an account of a grand Washingtonian Tea-Party given by the young ladies and gentlemen of Weymouth and Braintree, at Asa B. Wales' Hall in Weymouth, on the evening of the 18th inst. The people assembled at the Universalist Church at an early hour, and were there addressed by brothers Allen and Thompson of Walpole, until seven o'clock, at which time a procession was formed in front of the church and marched to the hall, which was very finely decorated with trees, vines, banners, pictures, etc. Over the orchestra was placed a large banner with the following very appropriate inscription:—"Welcome Washingtonians." The tables were very handsomely set, and loaded down with donations of pies, puddings, cakes, fruit, etc., that the fair ladies of the neighborhood had very generously provided for the occasion. The large supply on the tables speaks loud in praise of the ladies of the village; it tells us that they feel an interest in the temperance cause, and to this fact we owe our prosperity, in a great measure. Though the tables were set to accommodate nearly two hundred, still nearly every seat was occupied.

The meeting was called to order by the chairman of the Committee of Arrangements, and prayer was offered by Rev. Mr. Dennis. The chairman then made some introductory remarks, in which he said we had assembled there as a band of brothers and sisters, regardless of party, sect or race, with a strong desire to promote the glorious cause of temperance, and it was his desire that whatever there be said or done it be done with strict reference to the object in view. And that each and every one of us might be benefited by meeting together he hoped the speeches would be short and many, and if there were any who had not the moral courage to rise and speak their sentiments, if such would write them out he would read them. When he had closed his remarks the Cotillion Band (which by the way is an excellent Band of music for such occasions) gave us one of their lively tunes, which gave new life to all present. The meeting then partook of the Colation so bountifully spread before them by the untiring Committee of Arrangements, who certainly deserve great praise for their diligence, toil and anxiety in getting up this beautiful entertainment. After the Colation was taken, brother Edwin Thompson of Walpole, addressed the meeting in his usual happy and spirited manner. His remarks were very interesting, being a mixture of serious and mirthful matter.

Brother Daniel Allen, Jr., of Walpole, perhaps better known as the Norfolk County farmer, next addressed the meeting. He is universally admired as a temperance speaker and, I believe as a man. His easy and graceful manner of speaking is peculiarly interesting; his flow of language, as phrenology would say, is very large; he carries his hearers along with him and makes them feel the force of his argument whether they would or not. His remarks were very interesting and were well received.

Rev. Mr. Dennis next followed in the train. The Universalist Society in this village have just engaged the services of Mr. Dennis, as their local preacher, and I must confess that he is one of the most powerful public speakers that I have ever heard. He is a young man of superior talents and is highly esteemed here. He is heartily engaged in the temperance cause and his influence must be felt in the community.

Several other gentlemen addressed the meeting, among whom were George Newcomb, Esq. of Quincy, and Mr. Elias Richards of Weymouth.

The following toast was given by Mr. Atherton Wales, Jr.

Our cause is just; we need not fear
Though foes against us come;
We're fighting for our country's good
Against the curse of rum.

The chairman read the following, which he presumed was from a lady:

The young gentlemen of Weymouth: Though they generally enjoy the blessings of temperance, of virtuous and industrious habits, still far too many of them are wonderfully destitute of the moral courage to enjoy the blessings of wedded life.

The following sentiment was handed in but not read for want of time.

The temperance cause:
May heaven bless its onward course
Till all the land is free from rum,
And God's own image here enjoy.
The blessings that will surely come.

The chairman also read the following in answer to the sentiment by a lady:

The young ladies of Weymouth: Though they are all Washingtonians to a man, and heartily engaged in every moral enterprise, still, as their list of old maids show, they are wonderfully deficient of the power to gain the affections of the young men.

There were many other good toasts given which I did not take a minute of at the time and cannot now call to mind.

Suffice it to say, that the whole passed off well and we had a very pleasant and profitable time. All seemed to be pleased with the entertainment, and we all left, I trust, with new zeal and with a more determined spirit to urge on the glorious cause of temperance. May the instruction we received there sink deep into our hearts, and may we carry them out by using our influence, in all possible ways, to free our land from the curse of intemperance. Yea, may that happy day soon dawn, when the whole inhabitable globe shall feel the influence of this mighty reformation and all be induced to bow to its sceptre. J. O. F.

The following songs, in addition to those published last week, were sung on the occasion.

TEASE—Sweet Home.
Through all our wild rambles in search after bliss,
Experience informs us there's no place like this;
A charm for the soul seems to hallow this place,
And open our hearts to the whole human race.
This, yes, this, 'tis this, there's no place like this,
There's no place like this.

A Brother who breaks from his festering chain
And seeks for that freedom he scarce hopes to gain,
Kind friends and protection will find in this Hall,
And freedom of speech that's awarded to all.
Chorus.

The slave of intemperance, tho' chain'd to her ear
As victors of old drag'd their trophies of war,
If he would be free, let him whisper our call—
We'll tender the pledge and his fetters will fall.
Chorus.

To all we the hand of affection extend,
And hail every man as a brother and friend;
The seal of our God on his forehead we trace,
And ask not his title, his sect, or his race.
Chorus.

Men, Women and Children together we join,
To drive out the curse of rum, brandy and wine;
Experience assures us that Temperance is bliss,
Then come to her altar, there's no place like this.
Chorus. F. M. ADLINGTON.

TEASE—The Temperance Cause is going on.
The Temperance cause is gaining ground,
In climes afar its friends are found,
To spread its quick'ning virtues round
The nations to regenerate;
The temperance tide is rushing in,
To wash away our nation's sin—
To purge the land from rum and gin
And all that can intoxicate;
Ho, every friend of virtue, come!
Unmask the hiding dens of rum,
Expose to light their filthy scam,
That all may see and execrate.

Old Ocean brings her jewels forth,
Her noble sons of sterling worth,
The valiant tar and gallant youth,
All hands are piping merrily;
The temperance ship is steaming on,
She bears the flag of Washington,
That banner to the breeze was thrown,
To rouse your souls to energy;
Majestic o'er the opposing wave,
A refuge for rum's sinking slave,
She floats the dread of all her brave
The lightning of her battery.

A whistling sound comes from the skies,
The voice of the departed wise,
To open our benighted eyes
To heaven-born truth's reality;
The temperance star is shining bright,
Its cheering beams our hearts invite
To open to its holy light,
The cure for immorality;
Where'er it casts a living ray,
It drives the mist of night away,
And ushers in a new born day,
The morn of Immortality.

The lonely grave is dumb no more,
For truth unbars its secret door,
Its awful history written o'er
Would pale the heart of bravery;
The temperance trump is sounding loud,
It cries from every dank'd sward,
Behold the victims run has bow'd,
The spoils of sordid knavery;
And will you to a serpent foe,
Bend your exalted natures low?
Awakened millions answer, no!
We rend the chains of slavery.

DOUGLAS' NARRATIVE.

MR. EDITOR—The following eloquent and affecting extract from the Narrative of Frederick Douglass, written by himself, seven years after his escape from slavery. Mr. Douglass is now in Europe, lecturing on temperance and anti-slavery. At a recent meeting in Ireland he was introduced to Daniel O'Connell and invited to address the meeting which he did to great acceptance. H. W. B.

"If at any one time more than another I was made to drink the bitter dregs of slavery, that time was during the first six months of my stay with Mr. Covey. We were worked in all weathers. It was never too hot or too cold; it could never rain, blow, hail or snow too hard for us to work in the field. Work, work, work was scarcely more the order of the day than of the night. The longest days were too short for him, and the shortest nights too long for him. I was somewhat unmanageable when I first went there, but a few months of this discipline tamed me. Mr. Covey succeeded in breaking me. I was broken in body, soul, and spirit. My natural elasticity was crushed, my intellect languished, the disposition to read departed, the cheerful spark that lingered about my eye died; the dark night of slavery closed in upon me; and behold a man transformed into a brute. Sunday was my only leisure time. I spent this in a sort of beastly stupor, between sleep and wake under some large tree. At times I would rise up, a flash of energetic freedom would dart through my soul accompanied with a faint beam of hope that flickered for a moment and then vanished. I sank down again mourning over my wretched condition. I was sometimes prompted to take my life and that of Covey, but was prevented by a combination of hope and fear. My sufferings on this plantation seem now like a dream rather than a stern reality.

"Our house stood within a few rods of the Chesapeake Bay, whose broad bosom was ever white with sails from every quarter of the habitable globe. Those beautiful vessels, robed in purest white, so delightful to the eye of freedom, were to me so many shrouded ghosts to terrify and torment me with thoughts of my wretched condition. I have often in the deep stillness of a summer's Sabbath, stood all alone on the lofty banks of that noble bay and traced with saddened heart and fearful eye the countless number of sails moving off to the mighty ocean. The sight of these always affected me powerfully. My thoughts would compel utterance; and there with no audience but the Almighty, I would pour out my soul's complaint in my rude way, with an apostrophe to the moving multitude of ships:—"You are loosed from your moorings and are free; I am fast in my chains and a slave! You move merrily before the gentle gale and I sadly before the bloody whip! You are freedom's swift-winged angels that fly round the world; I am confined in bonds of iron! O that I were free! O, that I were on one of your gallant decks and under your protecting wing! Alas! betwixt me and you the turbid waters roll. Go on, go on, O that I could also go! Could I but swim! if I could fly! O, why was I born a man of whom to make a brute! The glad ship is gone; she hides in the dim distance. I am left in the hottest hell of unending slavery. O God save me! God deliver me! Let me be free! Is there any God? Why am I a slave? I will run away. I will not stand in. Get caught or get clear, I'll try it. I had as well die with the ague as the fever. I have only one life to lose. I had as well be killed running as die standing. Only think of it, one hundred miles straight north and I am free! Try it? Yes! God helping me, I will. I cannot be that I shall live and die a slave. I will take to the water. This bay shall yet bear me into freedom. Let but the first opportunity offer and I am off. Meanwhile I will try to bear up under the yoke. I am not the only slave in the world. Why should I fret. I can bear as much as any of them."

"Thus I used to think, thus I used to speak to myself; goaded almost to madness at one moment and at the next reconciling myself to my wretched lot."

COLD WATER ARMY. The annual meeting of the General Cold Water Army is to be held this afternoon, at two o'clock, in the Lyceum Hall. A full attendance of the Army is desired, and ardent solicited. The clergy are expected to be present and address the children, and musical entertainment has been provided. It will be a good time no doubt.

WRITING SCHOOL. Mr. Gilbert, who is now teaching school in the Town House building in this village, has been advised to organize a day class for the benefit of those ladies and gentlemen who cannot conveniently attend the evening school. In accordance with this advice, he will give the first lesson to a day class next Wednesday, at three o'clock in the afternoon. Those wishing to join this class can apply at the writing room at that time. Mr. G., who has long been a successful teacher in Boston, comes to us with the best of reference as to character and qualifications. His system of writing, one has but to see it to admire it. His terms for teaching are moderate considering that he always guarantees entire satisfaction. We wish him success.

MEMPHIS CONVENTION. This body commenced its session on the 12th inst. was opened with prayer. Hon. John C. Calhoun was chosen to preside. On taking the chair, he conjured the members to avoid all questions calculated to excite party feeling. The purpose of the Convention, as he understood it, was to promote and foster the interest of the South and West. The improvement of the Mississippi—a system of Gulf Defences—the relinquishment by the Federal Government of all jurisdiction over the Public Lands—were subjects in his opinion on which Congress could be properly memorialized. Fifteen States are represented by five hundred and sixty-four delegates.

ANNUAL MEETING. At the annual meeting of the Washington Total Abstinence Society, held in the Temperance Reading Room on Monday evening last, the following gentlemen were elected as officers of the Society for the ensuing year: President—Urbanus Cudworth. Vice Presidents—Josiah Adams, Ezra Badger. Treasurer—Seth Adams. Corresponding Secretary—Seth Adams. Recording Secretary—Theodore Kellogg. Directors—George Follet, James M. Wade, Ebenezer Field, Nathaniel Mann, John C. Underwood, Reuben Ricker, Elijah Baxter, George L. Miller, William Hamill, Nathan Ames, Harrison O. Whitney, John J. Carr, Edwin W. Marsh, Edward Brackett.

HANCOCK HOUSE, BOSTON. This venerable establishment, the oldest public house in the city of Boston, situated in Corn Court, a few rods south of the "Old Cradle of Liberty," has recently been leased by Mr. John Adams Duggan, and fitted up in a tasteful and neat style for the comfort and accommodation of those who may patronize him. Mr. Duggan's charges for single meals and board are extremely low, his accommodations excellent and no landlord exceeds him in courtesy or attentions and kindness to those who favor him with their custom. It is one of the most retired yet central hotels in the city, being one minute's walk from the Quincy Market. We heartily wish the enterprising proprietor success in his new vocation.

MISSISSIPPI. The democratic majority in this State, at the late election, is about ten or twelve thousand on Governor and Members of Congress, and the democratic majority on joint ballot in the Legislature will be more than fifty. The Governor of Mississippi has appointed Joseph W. Chalmers, (dem.) to the seat in the United States Senate, vacant by the resignation of Hon. Robert J. Walker, which appointment had been offered to Hon. Jacob Thompson.

MAIL ARRANGEMENTS. The Directors of the Old Colony Railroad have made an arrangement with Mr. Granville Gardner, the contractor, to carry the mail from Plymouth to Boston, when the Postmaster General shall consent.

A DIFFICULTY. The Constitution of Massachusetts requires the number of sixteen Senators to constitute a quorum for doing business. Only nine members are elected to the next Senate by the people. This is believed to be the first time that less than a quorum has been chosen by the people, since the formation of the Constitution.

DEATH OF THE MAYOR OF BOSTON. His Honor Thomas A. Davis died on Saturday afternoon last, at his residence in Brookline. The melancholy event has been for some time past hourly expected. As a man he was beloved and respected by a large circle of friends; as a magistrate he aimed to do his duty conscientiously and faithfully, as far as declining health would allow.

NEW POSTAGE LAW. The deficit in the Post Office department of this country, under the new law, will amount to a million and a half of dollars, according to the statement of the Washington Union.

ECCLESIASTICAL. Rev. J. S. Dennis, recently of Granby, (Conn.) has assumed the pastoral charge of the Universalist Society, at Weymouth Landing.

MASSACHUSETTS LEGISLATURE. It is now ascertained that only nine of the forty members of the Senate are chosen. The number of members elected to the House now stands as follows: whigs one hundred and eighty-six; democrats fifty-four; natives five.

The plain inference to be drawn from the lengthy and interesting letter of that well known and highly esteemed physician, Dr. Freiligh of Watervliet Centre, New York, is that there could be no possible duplicity on the subject. He saw his beloved daughter raised like as from the dead, and the sight was so astonishing, so unexpected, that he gave over all his former prejudices, and extended to the proprietor the warm gratitude of his overflowing heart. His letter on the occasion, accompanies each bottle of Mr. C. Brinckerhoff's Health Restorative, which medicine was the happy means of effecting the cure.

The trial of Samuel Parker, a lawyer, at Lowell, for perjury, has resulted in his conviction by the jury. His counsel have filed exceptions to the verdict.

Com. Parker was last week received as commandant at the Navy Yard in Charlestown, in place of Com. Nicholson, with the customary salute.

Hon. Josiah Quincy, Jr. has been selected as the whig candidate for Mayor of Boston at the election on the second Monday of December next.

Frederic Douglas, the fugitive slave, now in Europe, has been invited to a dinner with the lord mayor of Dublin, in company with a number of the aldermen and common council of that city.

Rev. George Bourne, a preacher against slavery and popery, recently died of apoplexy in the office of the Religious Intelligencer of New York.

A large number of females have petitioned the Legislature of Tennessee, praying that the law against tipping may not be repealed, but rather so amended as more effectually to restrain the vice of intemperance.

Forgery is still a capital crime in South Carolina. A man has recently been sentenced at Charleston to be hung in January next, for a crime of that description.

Lately a little girl about eight years of age daughter of a widow woman, residing in Michigan, was frightened in such a manner, that she died in about two hours after the fright. Her brother, a small lad, dressed himself in a dried bear skin, and chased her as she was going to a neighboring house.

A fine little boy of three years, died in Baltimore last week, from swallowing a cake of paint—such as are sold at the stores, in small boxes.

Nearly sixty millions of dollars worth of railway has been constructed by the associated means of private railways in Germany.

The death of Luke Dodge of Hamilton, in this State, is recorded in the papers, at the age of forty years. He was remarkable for his extraordinary size, having weighed three hundred and eighty pounds a few weeks before his death.

The first Thanksgiving in Massachusetts was appointed by the "General Court and Assistants" of the Old Colony as early as 1636—over two hundred years ago.

A close observer of the fashions, says an exchange paper, remarks that "Ladies dresses are fuller behind than he ever saw them before."

The African Repository, says, that in seventy-five years from 1765 to 1840 the colored population has increased in but three counties in this State, viz: Berkshire, Bristol and Nantucket, in all the rest it has diminished. The mortality of the blacks in Boston, is stated to be much greater than that of whites. The increase of the blacks during the whole period of seventy-five years has been, though aided by immigration, less than one third that of the whites.

QUINCY PATRIOT.

Ex-President Adams has requested us to give the following prospectus an insertion. We are informed by our esteemed townsman that he views it as the only channel through which he can get a concise and impartial account of congressional proceedings, and that it is worthy of the support of all political parties.

Congressional Globe and Appendix.

TO BE STEREOTYPED.

The undersigned originated the mode of journalizing the proceedings of Congress, which presented them entire. Their publication was the first and only one that gave each successive step in every measure in both branches of Congress; a brief of all the debates; every important vote; and an appendix including at full length all the revised speeches delivered during the session. The work thus conducted by them is a most perfect political history. The Senators from the States and the Representatives from every section of the Union bring to the country the most accurate and correct account of the proceedings of their several constituencies. Public opinion and the public information, as it exists among those they represent, are embodied by them; and in the crucible of Congress the wisdom of our times is brought to its test, and is there concentrated, in directing the political movements of the whole country. The impressions given through Congress from every quarter react upon the nation as a whole, and all its component parts are made to move in co-operation. The press cannot be more usefully employed than in condensing and again spreading abroad the intelligence of our free country, tending to such happy results through our almost miraculously adjusted State and National institutions.

Having identified ourselves with the plan of advancing the usefulness of Congress by publishing full and impartial reports, and having a large mass of the Congressional Globe and Appendix, issued during the last ten years, which would be impaired in value to us and utility to the public if the work were discontinued, we have a double motive to prompt us to extend it through a new series. We are resolved if possible to give it permanence, and to hand it down to successors as a standard work, worthy of being maintained and improved. We shall enter upon our new undertaking without being distracted or burdened by any associate labors of the press; and, thus unencumbered, shall hope to make the new series a step in advance of the former in all points of execution. With a view to accomplish this, we shall be (one or the other) always in attendance in Congress—will compare the manuscript of our own reporters with the daily reports of the city papers—correct all by our own observation and knowledge of the proceedings; and in important matters, where that will not assure us of the fidelity of the reports, we will procure the aid of the members themselves, to obtain the exact scope of their remarks. The work, thus authenticated, will be stereotyped, which is a guaranty that we will make it as perfect as it is possible for us to make it, as we would not incur the expense of stereotyping it, if we did not feel confident of its superiority over all works of the kind which have been or are likely to be published. Stereotyping the work will enable us to supply lost or mutilated numbers, which we will do, without making any charge for them.

The Congressional Globe is made up of the daily proceedings of the two Houses of Congress. The speeches of the members are condensed, to bring them into a readable length. All the resolutions offered, or motions made, are given in the mover's own words; and the yeas and nays on all the important questions. It is printed with small type—brevier and nonpareil—on a double royal sheet, in quarto form, each number containing sixteen royal quarto pages.

The Appendix is made up of the President's annual message, the reports of the principal officers of the Government that accompany it, and all the long speeches of members of Congress, written out or revised by themselves. It is printed in the same form as the Congressional Globe, and usually makes about the same number of pages.

We print the numbers as fast as the proceedings of Congress furnish enough matter for a number. During the first month or six weeks of a session, there is scarcely more business done than will make one number of the Congressional Globe and one number of the Appendix a week; but during the remainder of a session there is usually sufficient matter for two or three numbers of each every week. The next session will be no longer one, and it is supposed will be unusually interesting; therefore, we calculate that the Congressional Globe and Appendix will each make near one thousand large quarto pages, printed in small type, brevier and nonpareil. We furnish complete indexes to both at the end of a session.

We have on hand the Congressional Globe and Appendix for the last twelve sessions of Congress, of which five were long and seven were short sessions. The Congressional Globe and Appendix of each session are bound together in excellent binding, with Russia leather corners. Our prices for them, thus bound together, are $3 a volume for a short, and $5 a volume for a long session, making $46 for a full set. Those who want the back volumes should apply for them immediately, as they are in demand. The last Congress subscribed for two hundred and twenty-six sets; and it is probable that the next will subscribe for at least as many more, as the proceedings of Congress for the last eight years cannot be procured from any other source, and Gale & Sexton having stopped printing their Register of Debates in 1837. A few hundred copies of the first volume is all we have on hand.

The next session of Congress will be a long one, and therefore the Congressional Globe and Appendix should be $2 for the session, which is the price we charge for the numbers of the past long sessions; but we have concluded to reduce the price, as follows, until the first day of next January, after which time the Congressional Globe and Appendix will each be $2 for the session, and no deduction be made on account of the number of copies taken.

TERMS.
For 1 copy of the Congressional Globe, $1 50
For 1 copy of the Appendix, 1 50
For 4 copies of either, or part of both, 5 00
For 25 copies of either, or part of both, 25 00
The money may be remitted by mail at our risk. It should be here by the 7th of December, at farthest, to procure all the numbers promptly.

Our prices for these papers are so low that we cannot afford to credit them out; therefore, no person can consume less time in writing for them and not sending the money.

GREAT ENGLISH REMEDY

For Coughs, Colds, Asthma, and Consumption.

The great and only remedy for Coughs, Colds, Asthma, and CONSUMPTION, is the HUNGARIAN BALM OF LIFE, discovered by the celebrated Dr. Buchan of London, England, and introduced into the United States under the immediate superintendence of the inventor.

The extraordinary success of this medicine, in the case of pulmonary diseases, warrants the American agent in soliciting its use, as the most possible cause that can be found in the community—cases that seek relief in vain from any of the common remedies of the day, and have been given up by the most distinguished Physicians, as confirmed and incurable. The Hungarian Balm has cured and will cure, the most desperate of cases. It is no quack nostrum, but a standard English medicine, of known and established efficacy.

Every family in the United States should be supplied with Buchan's Hungarian Balm of Life, not only to counteract the consumptive tendencies of the climate, but to be used as a preventive medicine in all cases of Colds, Coughs, Spitting of Blood, pain in the side and chest, irritation and soreness of the Lungs, Bronchitis, difficulty of breathing, hectic fever, night sweats, emaciation and general debility, Asthma, Influenza, Hooping Cough and Croup.

Sold in large bottles, at $1 per bottle, with full directions for the restoration of Health.

Pamphlets, containing a mass of English and American certificates, and other evidence, showing the unequalled merits of this Great English Remedy, may be obtained of the agents, gratuitously.

In South Weymouth, 17th inst. William Jenks, son of Mr. D. P. and Mrs. L. M. Newcomb, aged 10 months.

In Weymouth, Sept. 18th, Charles Henry, aged 8 months; and Oct. 26th, Eliza Osgood, aged 14 years, children of Mr. C. C. and Mrs. Deborah S. Jordan. Also, Nov. 9th, Mrs. Delilah S. wife of Mr. C. C. Jordan, aged 37.

Thus in the short space of six weeks, has Br. Jordan been called to part with two beloved children, and an affectionate wife. God, in his wise, though mysterious providence, has seen fit to draw the dividing line and take one half of this family to the eternal world! Truly can our brother say, "The hand of affliction has been laid heavily upon me." But in the midst of his sorrow, he can rejoice in that faith which enables him to feel the assurance that his loss is the infinite gain—that they have gone to that world where sickness, pain and death can never enter, and where all shall ultimately meet to part no more forever. Sister Jordan was a kind mother, an affectionate wife and a good neighbor. In religious faith she was a Universalist; and he may be truly said of her, that she adorned her profession with a Christian life. And not only was her faith sufficient to guide her in the path of duty, while in active life, but also gave her comfort and support during her long and severe sickness, and brightened her hopes in the hour of dissolving nature. I had not the pleasure of visiting her during the last few weeks of her earthly being, but was informed that her faith remained unwavering to the last. A short time before her death, a preacher of another faith visited her, to whose inquiries her answer was, "Jesus is precious to my soul, and my hope is in Lord is sure and steadfast." To her husband, a few moments before her death, she said—Mourn not for me, nor our children. I leave one half with you the other half will be with me in heaven, where we shall all meet to part no more. She then took an affectionate leave of her family and friends, and peacefully yielded up her spirit into the arms of her Savior. Thus adding one more to the vast number of souls already given, of the value of our faith in a dying hour. May the God of all grace impart to this mourning family, and other sorrowing friends, the consolations of the gospel which are neither few nor small.

Several pieces of FRENCH BROADCLOTH, suitable for Over Coats or Dress Frock Coats, which will be found to be entirely new articles in this market, and will come very cheap.

In addition to the above, I have also received a complete assortment of Superfine Cloths, such as

A good assortment of BLUE, which will come remarkably cheap for Dress or Frock Coats, or Boys'

Jackets and Pants.

VESTINGS,

Of every description; FIGURED SILK AND SATIN, remarkably cheap; a good variety of Cashmere

and Valencia. A Vest will come from $1.75 to $3.50, made to order.

The liberal patronage I have received since I came to Quincy, has enabled me to open as choice a selection of Goods as ever was introduced into this market.

I return my customers and the public my sincere thanks for their liberal patronage, and I respectfully invite them to call and examine my present stock of Goods. I can make garments considerably cheaper, as well and of as good cloth as can be had in any Store in the city of Boston. The reason I can do these things are, in the first place I am prepared to cut and make a garment with any man that can be named

there, in the next place, I can purchase my goods as cheap as anyone can do, and I put and superintend

my own work. These are facts that are worth the consideration of those who wish to get their garments where they can get them cheapest and best, and to suit them in every respect or no sale.

I have adopted the one price system. I am fully convinced it is the most honest way of doing business,

and my terms are Cash. JOHN DINEGAN,

Russell as an artist, it is superfluous to say one word,

but from all unacquainted we would solicit an early designed for Fall or Winter wear. Feeling confident

Tailoring.

I WOULD respectfully intimate to my friends and the public, that I continue to occupy rooms in the Store of E. Packard. Feeling grateful for past favors,

I would solicit a continuance of that patronage so liberally bestowed since I commenced business. Being regularly in receipt of the latest and most approved

English, French and American styles, with the abilities of first rate workmen, (employing none else)

enables me to produce a garment every way desirable

in point of style and finish.

People are requested to call and examine for themselves, and not be misled by the rags and shreds of others, for "by square and rule works many a fool."

My theory of cutting being entirely different from that used by country tailors, aids me in giving a perfect fit to the most imperfect form.

All asked is a fair trial and no favors.

THE AUTUMN LEAF.

Lone trembling one!
Last of a summer's race, withered and sore,
And shivering—wherefore art thou lingering here?
Thy work is done!

Thou hast seen all
The summer flowers reposing in their tomb;
And the green leaves that knew thee in their bloom
Wither and fall!

Why dost thou cling
Fondly to the rough sapless tree!
Has then existence aught like charm for thee,
Thou faded thing?

The voice of spring,
Which woke thee into being, ne'er again
Will greet thee, nor the gentle summer rain
New verdure bring.

The zephyr's breath
No more will wake for thee its melody;
But the lone sighing of the blast shall be
The hymn of death.

Yet a few days,
A few faint struggles with the autumn storm,
And the strained eye, to catch thy trembling form,
In vain may gaze.

Pale autumn leaf!
Thou art an emblem of man's mortality;
The broken heart, once young and fresh like thee,
Withered by grief!

Whose hopes are fled,
Whose loved ones all have dropped and died away,
Still clings to life—and lingering, loves to stay
About the dead!

But list!—e'en now
I hear the gathering of the autumn blast!
It comes—thy frail form trembles—it is past!
And thou art low!

CHARITY.

How meekly beautiful she walks
Along the embattled line of life,
Regardless of the pomp and power,
That mingle in the strife.
The glittering toys that strew the way,
Have no attraction in her eyes;
How dim they seem, beside the pearl
That in her bosom lies.

She bears no sword amid the fray,
She seeks no laurel, no renown;
What should she do with earth's bay,
Who heirs a heavenly crown?
She seeks not—needs not—man's applause,
She knows 'tis but a passing wind;
And his revellings, scoffs, and taunts,
Fall harmless on her mind.

Careless of these, she passes on,
With searching eye and heeding ear,
With heart that thrills at every moan,
And pities every tear.

'Tis hers to raise the prostrate form,
To staunch the wound with tender art;
To lay soft loaves of Gilead's balm
Upon the bleeding heart.

To turn the lifted blade away,
And shield the trembler from the blow;
To lead the weary on their way,
And soothe the wanderer's woe.

To aid the bending form of age,
And cheer its path of pain and gloom;
Pointing the dim eye to the day,
That acts not in the tomb.

And see, close-folded to her breast,
The outcast little orphan's form;
She gives it clothing, food, and rest,
And shelter from the storm.

Her eyes, and heart, are heavenward still,
Her hands are to the needy given,
To bind each wound, to soothe each ill
And lead the weak toward heaven.

What though her eyes are sometimes wet,
When venom'd arrows pierce her breast;
And blood drips from her weary feet
That knows no earthly rest!
Still, be whose footsteps she pursues,
Heals all her wounds with holy love,
And dries her tears, with dawning views
Of her own home above.

ANECDOTES.

A son of Erin at Schenectady heard the breakfast bell ring on board a canal boat just starting out for Buffalo. The fragrance of the viands induced him to go on board.

"Sure, Captain, dear," said he, "an' what'll ye ax a poor man for travelling in yer illegant swan ov a boat?"

"Only a cent and a half a mile and found," replied the captain.

"An' is it the vittles ye mean to find sure?" "Yes. And if you're going along, go down to breakfast."

Pat didn't want to be told a second time, but having descended into the cabin and made a hearty meal, he came again on deck and requested that the boat might be stopped.

"What do you want to stop for?" inquired the captain.

"How far have we come, just?" asked Pat.

The Great Remedy

Consumption, Asthma, Dyspeptic Consumption, Spitting of Blood, Brachitis, Difficulty of Breathing, Hoarseness, Influenza, Croup, Colds, Pain in the Breast and Side, Dyspepsia, and various affections of the Stomach and Liver.

Folger's Olosonian, or All-Healing Balm.
It is acknowledged that more persons die of Consumption than of any other disease. It is estimated that in the United States over THIRTY THOUSAND PERSONS annually fall victims to this dreadful scourge. The cause of the evil is generally overlooked. A short dry Cough is the precursor—or a neglected cold. These symptoms are deemed unimportant. Pain in the Side, Hectic and night Sweats follow, and death ends the scene.

Would you find a REMEDY FOR THE EVIL? Here it is. The experience of more than twenty years has proved its efficacy, and thousands are rejoicing in its effects.

Case of INCIPENT CONSUMPTION.—George W. Burnett, Esq. of Newark, N. J., had suffered under the effects of a severe cold for more than a year, and in the month of August, when his Cough had reduced him so much that he feared he would die, he commenced using the Olosonian. He raised blood at this time, complained of pain in his side and chest, and was very much debilitated by night sweats. His appetite was gone, and altogether he appeared to be rapidly sinking. He was under the care of several physicians in Brooklyn, who told him they could do no good, as his disease was settled and fixed Consumption. He moved to this city to die among his friends. He was by this time so weak that he could not walk without assistance. Although his friends had now given up all hope of his ever being any better, he commenced using the Olosonian, or All-Healing Balm, and in a few weeks was so far restored as to be able to resume his business.

Read the following case of CONSUMPTION.—The cure was truly a wonderful one and places the Olosonian or All-Healing Balm, at the head of the list of remedies for eradicating that dreadful disease.

George W. Hays, residing in this city, (New York) was seized with a severe cold in the early part of the summer. His cough became very troublesome and he began to raise blood. He complained of a severe pain in the chest and his breathing became so short that he could not walk any distance without stopping for breath. His night sweats reduced him very low. He was under the care of several physicians in Brooklyn, who told him they could do no good, as his disease was settled and fixed Consumption. He moved to this city to die among his friends. He was by this time so weak that he could not walk without assistance. Although his friends had now given up all hope of his ever being any better, he commenced using the Olosonian, or All-Healing Balm, and in a few weeks was so far restored as to be able to resume his business.

Mr. T. Laban, residing at 52 Pine street, was severely afflicted with Asthma, in consequence of having taken a severe cold in the early part of last winter. In the early part of the night he could sleep tolerably well, but towards one o'clock in the morning his Asthma became so severe that he was obliged to get up and sit for the remainder of the night leaning forward on a chair. His cough was most distressing throughout the day. He had, during his sickness, tried almost every thing without relief. He never had a good night's rest in ten months, until he commenced taking the Olosonian or All-Healing Balm, when he found immediate relief, and before using half a bottle of it was perfectly well, and now sleeps as quietly as he ever did in his life.

Hundreds of cases could be given to prove the efficacy of the great remedy. And it possesses a property superior to all others, viz: it does not congest the bowels. Reader, are you suffering under any of the above symptoms of disease? Try this remedy—it will allay the Pain in your side and chest—put to flight the COUGH which deprives you of sweet sleep and repose; if you have Asthma, be assured there is no medicine in the world that will cure you so speedily, and it will arrest all those disagreeable symptoms which strike such terror to the mind and give such dreadful forebodings of an untimely and speedy dissolution.

CLICKER'S SUGAR COATED VEGETABLE PILLS
A MEDICINAL preparation is herein announced which has been long desired, and sought for, and which the public must at once be acknowledged the advantage of. It is a purgative pill, COATED WITH SUGAR, so that it leaves no taste whatever in the internal organs. In fact the medicine is so carefully disguised, that if a person were to swallow the pills without being informed what they were, he would believe them to be simply lozenges of pure sugar, and would swallow them with great gusto, and thus the patient who takes them avoids two evils which attend all other purgative medicines, namely: nausea and pain. Medicine administered in all other sweet forms has the disadvantage of being mixed with the sugar, and hence produces a mingled flavor, which, to most persons, is more disagreeable than unadorned bitterness. In these pills this is altogether avoided; the sugar and the medicine being entirely distinct from each other, so that the former must be thoroughly removed before the latter can manifest itself to the taste. It is universally known that nearly all diseases originate with impurity of blood. Pure blood is therefore essential to health. We must not, however, wait until the blood is impure, for then it takes time—and that time passed in ill health—to rectify it; but when the slightest derangement of the system is indicated by costiveness, or any other gutting, as it was beneficial. Now, however, the cure must be given, which should at once be got rid of; for the removal of the chyle (from which the blood is formed) in a healthy state, and purity of blood must be restored, as stated, is universally known; but people have such an aversion to medicine that, unless the case is urgent, they prefer the disease to the cure, and thus the system remains in a state of chronic derangement for the fully of their conduct. Still they had some excuse; for, heretofore, medicine in almost all its forms, was nearly as disgusting as it was beneficial. Now, however, the cure is effected by the use of CLICKER'S SUGAR COATED VEGETABLE PILLS, which have no taste whatever of medicine, and which, when taken, produce no effect in removing impurities from the system, and which are excelled by any other medicine which has ever been discovered.

It is unnecessary to say more here. If these pills are as described, the public will freely and gladly purchase them; and the proprietor merely asks a trial, which he is sure of receiving, to prove that he assumes no merit for them which they do not fully possess.

CLICKER'S Sugar-coated Vegetable Purgative Pills are prepared and sold by wholesale and retail, and for exportation, by C. V. CLICKER & Co., Chemists, at the wholesale and retail drug warehouse, No. 79 and 81 Barclay street, New York. Price: 15 cents per box, with full directions, and sold by the following list of Agents:

ART AND LOVE.
"Grief improve the well organized mind, as it purify the atmosphere."

"Mother, dear mother, do lay aside your work and take some rest; you will fatigue yourself to death."

The mother lifted her heavy eye-lids, and her eyes filled with tears as she beheld the delicate form of her daughter bending with wearying assiduity over her embroidery, which she had been employed for many hours.

"You require rest even more than I do," child, replied the lady. "Your face has become so thin and your cheek so pale, I wonder your acquaintances scarcely recognize you."

"Oh no, I feel very well," said the young girl, drawing up her slight but elastic form, "but lay aside your work, if you love me, and I will finish little Ellen's frock as soon as have shaded this rose bud."

"You lead a toilsome life, my child. How much does Mrs. Garnet promise to give for your mantilla?"

"Thirty dollars. To be sure the material cost twenty, but even that will be a very good help."

"It has cost you a month's hard labor." "Yes; but we shall find ten dollars a reasonable assistance just now. If we can only make up ten more to pay the doctor, should feel tolerably well satisfied. Do you member, mamma, she said, after a thoughtful pause, "many, many months ago, before and here a slight shudder shook her frame, 'before our misfortune—do you remember much Mr. Ashton used to praise my paintings?'"

"Remember, love! do I ever forget what I told you to? I recollect he said the 'found and the view of the bay' were much executed than pieces sent to the exhibition."

"And you know he sold a piece resembling the fountain for sixty dollars, and the gentleman who bought it professed to admire it equally as much. I know, she continued blushing, "that there is a vast difference, between admiring the works of an amateur, one who paints for a livelihood; but if I get twenty, or fifteen, or even ten dollars, my pictures, I might perhaps be enabled to take lessons in miniature painting."

"The life of an artist would be very try to one so delicate and enthusiastic as you, my dear," sighed Mrs. Lee; "and yet not so so than the one you lead at present."

"Ah! I should love to have all things, mamma. Madam Gaudet tells me that she made two thousand a year by it; and with that, with half of it, how comfortable we might live in the sweet little white cottage over the wall. It almost seems like a glimpse of Paradise to think of. How charming it would look with plenty of vines and white curtains, and flowers and pictures, and—"

Here she cast her eyes around the scantily furnished and dimly lighted chamber which formed their only apartment—signifying the felt uncertainty nature of her airy fancies, and was silent.

LETTER FROM BOSTON.

Boston, Dec. 31, 1845.

The President's Message was received in this city at eleven o'clock to-day, by express, in twenty-three hours from Washington. The most intense curiosity was manifested by the multitude here to get a sight of this important document of President Polk; the rush around the Times office was immense, and many, in their attempts to reach the counter and deposit their three cents for the 'extra,' suffered such compressibility that they will for many days painfully remember.

I have rapidly glanced over the Message, and will try to give you a brief synopsis of this lengthy state paper occupying thirteen close columns of the Boston Daily Times.

It opens with dignified language, congratulating the national representatives of the happy state of our country; under the blessings of Divine Providence and the benign influence of our free institutions, it stands before the world a spectacle of national happiness.

The Texas question occupies three columns. Nothing is now wanting but an act of Congress to admit Texas as a State, in order that the union of the two Republics shall be consummated by their own voluntary consent. A State Constitution of Texas is submitted, which the President urges the immediate acceptance of, that the Senators and Representatives from the State of Texas may take their seats at Washington during the present session. The President, as was expected, gives his hearty approval of the annexation measure. Towards Mexico, England, and even France for their interference with the United States and Texas while the negotiation for annexation was going on, he is very severe. For many years the Mexican Government has been inimical to the United States and have insulted her citizens and flag. Her course in the non-payment of her claims has been dishonorable. The Diplomatic intercourse which for some months has been broken off between our government and Mexico, has been recently renewed. A Minister, at the request of Mexico, despatched to that government, and there is good prospect ere many months, that all difficulties with the Mexicans will be amicably settled, including the Texan boundaries, etc.

The Oregon question occupies nearly three columns of the Message. He shows most conclusively that the claim of the United States to the whole of Oregon, south of forty-nine degrees of north latitude is unquestionable, including Columbia River. In 1818, it was agreed by treaty with Great Britain and the United States, that each nation for the space of ten years should have free access for trade, etc., in the Oregon Territory, on equal footing. And in the event of any difference as to the claim of soil, settlement, etc., between the two nations, a year's notice shall be given before taking possession of the soil, etc. The President recommends that Congress give the year's notice forthwith to England of her intention of taking possession of Oregon, and at the year's end establish a territorial government over the whole of Oregon, which will doubtless be done by Congress. The President claims Oregon as a part of the North American Continent to which it is confidently affirmed the title of the United States is the best now in existence.

He recommends some modifications in our treaty of Commerce with Prussia, the Netherlands and Spain, favorable to the interests of those powers, growing out of the Tariff of 1842.

The state of the Treasury is prosperous. Our receipts the past year from revenue and the sale of public lands were nearly thirty millions of dollars. The balance in the Treasury on the first of July last was nearly eight millions of dollars. The public debt on the first of October, 1845, was $17,095,445.52. Soon the United States will be free from debt.

It recommends a reduction of the Tariff of 1842—a tariff of revenue and not for "protection" merely—a tariff that will favor "domestic industry" not of the manufacturer only, but the farmer, mechanic and merchant—a system of ad valorem duties, or where all articles are taxed according to their cost and value, rather than the minimum standard of twenty per cent. In short a tariff of revenue merely, not so high on any article as to abridge its importation, nor so low on articles of domestic industry, as not to afford incidental protection to all branches of enterprise. His views on this vexed question are certainly characterized with great wisdom and will be received with profound deference by the American people.

The President recommends the restoration of the Independent Treasury; speaks in high terms of the condition of the navy and army; recommends an increase of the navy by steam vessels.

He recommends change in the new Post Office laws. There has been a falling off the present year compared with the last of over a million of dollars in the receipts of the Post Office Department.

He recommends that the Attorney General's department be on a footing with that of other members of the Cabinet, by an increase of clerks, pay, etc.

He urges the fostering care of the District of Columbia to the attention of Congress, and concludes with a just tribute of praise to the memory and deeds of Andrew Jackson.

The Message is the most able document submitted to Congress for many years. The language is clear, chaste and perspicuous. It breathes throughout, an exalted spirit of patriotism, and cannot fail to rank Mr. Polk as one of the most eminent and profound statesmen of the age.

GENERAL COLD WATER ARMY.

The annual meeting of the Army was held in Lyceum Hall, Town House, on Saturday afternoon, the 23d ult. The weather and walking were fine; and a surprisingly large number of cleanly, bright, well-clad children were present, with their parents, friends and lovers of the cause.

Five of our ministering brethren were with us, and manifested a lively interest in the cause of temperance and the welfare of the young.

Four members of the Dorchester Band discoursed sweet music on their beautiful instruments, much to the gratification of the youthful audience. The meeting was called to order by the President, and opened with prayer by Rev. Mr. Otheman.

On motion of Mr. William Pratt, it was voted that a Committee of four be chosen to nominate a list of candidates, for Officers in the Army, the ensuing year.

The following gentlemen were chosen—Reuben Ricker, William Pratt, Nathaniel Mann and George L. Miller.

While the nominating Committee were out, the Secretary read from his records the organization of the Army, one year ago, with about four hundred and eighty members. It now numbers about eight hundred. We were now favored with music from the Band, and a song from the Choir.

Two little daughters of Mr. Wood, at the Point, came to the stand, and sung some verses very prettily. Also the little daughter of Dr. George Newcomb sang a good song well. The daughter of Rev. Mr. Davis spoke some verses, so as to convey their excellent sentiments distinctly to the mind.

The nominating Committee came in with the following Report:—

President—Theodore Kellogg.
Vice Presidents—David Atwood, William Pratt.
Treasurer—George L. Gill.
Corresponding Secretary—T. Kellogg.
Recording Secretary—Ezra Walker, Jr.
Directors—Dea. George Baxter and son George, Jonathan Baxter and son Samuel, George Vezie and son Charles, Abram Prescott and Francis J. Newcomb, Charles A. Cummings and Charles Cook, Elias Nash and James Newcomb, 2d, William D. Gray, George L. Miller and some had to be chosen by them, John A. Billings and Master Warren Leonard.

On motion of J. C. Edwards, voted that the list of Officers be chosen collectively, or all at once—Rev. Dr. Clark put the motion, which was carried.

On motion of Rev. Mr. Fox, voted that the time of holding the next annual meeting be left with the Board of Officers.

After music and singing, we were favored with addresses from all the clergy, and George Newcomb, Esq. The allegories, stories, facts and remarks were appropriate and well delivered.

A collection was taken up to defray expenses. A vote of thanks was offered to all who had taken part in the exercises.

After again reading the names of the Officers, all of whom will be supplied with a pledge, that the children in their neighborhood may have the privilege of signing it without trouble, the meeting adjourned, to meet at such time and place as the Board of Officers shall direct.

The exercises were pleasant and profitable, the Hall convenient and comfortable.

OLD COLONY RAIL ROAD. A few weeks only have elapsed since the cars have been running on this road, yet so perfect has it become that the highest expectations of the most sanguine in regard to the travel over it has been more than realized. In the construction and finish of the passenger cars, convenience, utility, and ornament have been most successfully combined. Every person connected with the road, seems to know his business and practices on his knowledge. The aim of each individual appears to be of such a character, that if anything on the road is wrong it will not be his fault, and every one having that object in view there is little doubt that the traveller will receive every possible accommodation. It has been said that though the fare from Boston to Plymouth is reasonable yet from some of the way stations it is comparatively out of proportion and somewhat too high. How this may be, we do not know; but if such is the case, it will, without doubt, be rectified, when brought to the knowledge of the Directors. To one point we will call their attention, not particularly as it regards their interest, (though it does in a great degree) but as it affects the security and safety of those who travel in their own conveyance. All crossings on a level with the common road must, of course, be somewhat dangerous, but they are much more so when over great thoroughfares, thronged as they are with foot passengers and vehicles. South Boston turnpike, near the city, is now much travelled over and in the course of a few years will increase, with the increasing population of the southern suburbs of the city, and therefore it is imperatively necessary that the turnpike should be raised so as to pass over the rail road. The expense now would be small in comparison to what it will be a few years hence. It must be so constructed sooner or later. The raising of the Tremont Road required great labor and expenditure of money, which had it been done when the Worcester Railroad was first constructed, would have been a measure saved. The same remarks apply to the Old Colony Road. Little damage would now accrue to the land, but in a short time, when by the march of enterprise it is covered with buildings, the injury which a great embankment will cause to the abutters, will, in the settlement thereof, be no inconsiderable item of expense. We hope, both for the public safety and the interest of the corporation, that the work will not be delayed.

UNITED STATES SENATORS. Hon. John C. Calhoun has been elected Senator to Congress from South Carolina, in place of the Hon. D. E. Huger, resigned.

Hon. John McPherson Berrien, (whig) is still Senator from Georgia, the Legislature having re-elected him to fill the vacancy occasioned by his own resignation.

MAYORALTY OF BOSTON. John T. Heard has been selected as the democratic candidate for Mayor at the ensuing election.

William S. Durrell has been nominated by the Native American party as their candidate.

WELL MERITED. Walter A. Bryant, Esq., (dem.) editor of the Barre Gazette, has been elected a member of the Legislature. His principal competitor was the editor of the whig paper. Barre will be ably and faithfully represented.

INCENDIARY FIRE. On Saturday evening last, about half past six o'clock, the barn of Mr. George W. Barrett, in the western part of this town, was discovered to be on fire, which was soon consumed and its contents of fifteen tons of hay. Attached to it were a corn barn and shed that were saved by being demolished. In the barn were horses, cows, etc., which were rescued at much risk. There is no doubt that this conflagration was the work of one or more incendiaries, and we think the Selectmen, if they have the power, should arrest this high-handed course by offering a suitable reward. The town will unquestionably sustain them in any efforts they may use to detect and punish. There was an insurance on the barn at Dedham of two hundred dollars and on the stock at the State Mutual of two hundred dollars, besides which Mr. Barrett must lose probably five hundred dollars, and as he is a worthy and industrious citizen we hope that the heretofore liberality of our townsmen will generously cheer him in his hour of misfortune.

We are pleased to mention the fact that the Danube of Milton, and even the Fountain of Milton Mills, came promptly to the alarm. Their spirit of enterprise deserves high commendation.

FALL OF RAIN. The quantity of rain which fell during the storm last Thanksgiving day, as ascertained at the Astronomical Observatory at Cambridge, was four and a half inches. The annual average is not more than thirty-six inches; so that the rain on that day was equal to about one-eighth of the whole annual quantity.

A writer in the Boston Daily Advertiser, states that in the rain of Thursday last week, there fell the greatest quantity that has fallen in the same number of hours, since January, 1818, nearly twenty-eight years, having been 3.37 inches in sixteen hours. The quantity of rain the past month has been 8.876 inches. The only months that have equaled this quantity, since January, 1818, were August, 1836, and November, 1840. In the former of these, the quantity was 11.31, and the latter 9.48 inches.

CONGRESS. On the opening of the session on Monday last, forty-two members of the Senate and two hundred and twelve members of the House, were present. Among the members present were Mr. Davis of the Senate and all the members of this State elected in the House.

John W. Davis of Indiana, (dem.) was elected Speaker on the first ballot, receiving one hundred and twenty votes. Ex-President Adams, as the oldest member, administered to him the oath of office, and after a brief address, the like oath was administered to the members, beginning with Maine and ending with the Territories. Seventy-two votes were cast for Samuel F. Vinton of Ohio, the whig candidate for Speaker; nine for Moses Norris, Jr., (dem.) of New Hampshire; five for William S. Miller of New York, (Native American); and four scattering. The whole number of votes two hundred and ten; necessary to a choice, one hundred and six.

A motion was made to abolish the one hour rule, which was rejected. An attempt was also made to restore the far-famed twenty-first Rule, prohibiting the reception of abolition petitions, which was unsuccessful. The Rules of the last House were adopted till they can be revised by a committee hereafter to be chosen.

The Senate held a brief session, Vice President Dallas in the chair. The credentials of several senators were presented, when an adjournment took place.

SAD AFFAIR. A fatal accident occurred at a shooting match, in South Scituate, on Wednesday afternoon of last week, the 26th ult. Otis Torrey, about nineteen years of age, son of Mr. George Torrey, while lying on the ground at an intermission between firing, accidentally discharged a musket into his own breast, in the act of drawing it towards him, by grasping the gun near the muzzle. He lived about twenty minutes.

AN ALLEGED OFFENCE. The Plymouth Rock, states that John Cushing of Abington, was brought before the Police Court at Boston, for obtaining a bill of lading for three hundred and fifty dollars from Prescott Richardson, by false pretences. He waived an examination, and gave bonds in seven hundred and fifty dollars for his appearance at the Municipal Court.

MAGNETIC TELEGRAPH. The continued line of wire from Nantasket, East head, to the cupola of Merchants' Exchange, Boston, a distance of twenty two miles, has been completed. Magnetic communication will commence as soon as several places are connected which were broken during the heavy blow on Thanksgiving day.

NEW HAMPSHIRE. The returns thus far received indicate that there has again been no choice for a member of Congress to complete the delegation from New Hampshire. Woodbury, (dem.) lacks more votes of an election than at the previous trial Hale (dem. abol.) runs about the same as heretofore as does also the whig candidate, Goodwin.

HEAR HIM. To those who delight to hear the cause of temperance faithfully and nobly advocated, we would say, go to the Lyceum Room next Tuesday evening and hear the Norfolk Farmer, Daniel Allen, an eloquent and fearless speaker, who ranks among the ablest philanthropists in pleading for the unfortunate inebriate.

A gentleman was eating some oysters in New Orleans, when he found one particularly gritty. On examination of the cause, no less than twenty pearls were taken out of the oyster. Two of these pearls are large and pronounced by judges to be valuable.

The emigration into Florida is unprecedented. The interior of the country is filling up rapidly with settlers. At several points scarcely a day passes without a number flocking in.

The active capital of the Rothschild the past year is said to have been one hundred and forty-five millions of dollars, and their profits for the same time by means of railway speculations over twenty-four millions of dollars.

At Elizabethtown, New Jersey, a plain white marble monument, five feet at the base and sixteen feet high, has been erected and dedicated to the memory of Rev. James Caldwell, a chaplain in the army of the revolution, who was killed by a shot from a sentinel at Elizabethtown Point, in 1781. His wife Hannah was killed at Connecticut farms by a shot from a British officer.

A proverb saith, "Labor while the day lasts, for the night cometh, when no man can work." There were no printers when that was written.

The majority in favor of a State Convention to reform the constitution in New York is only one hundred and eighty-one thousand. From this unanimity, it is evident that the people of that State expect something to be done by the Convention. It will meet at Albany in June next.

We hope soon to see in some part of our advertising columns, the notice that our friends have taken hold of the use of the Health Restorative of Mr. Brinckerhoff with the same spirit that is manifested in other parts of the country. Where it has been known it is resorted to without delay, in Lung and Liver complaints, the sufferer showing his confidence in this medicine above any other aid. We predict no disappointment in its use.

A CARD.

The thanks of the subscriber are hereby tendered to the several engine companies of Quincy, also to the Danube of Milton, the Fountain of Milton Mills, and the citizens generally, for their alacrity and efforts on the evening of Saturday last, when his barn and its contents were destroyed by the incendiary's torch. Such kindness is worthy of all praise and will be lastingly remembered.

GEORGE W. BARRETT.

GREAT ENGLISH REMEDY

For Coughs, Colds, Asthma, and Consumption. The great and only remedy for Coughs, Colds, Asthma, and CONSUMPTION, is the HUNGARIAN BALSAM OF LIFE, discovered by the celebrated Dr. Buchan of London, England, and introduced into the United States under the immediate superintendence of the inventor.

The extraordinary success of this medicine, in the case of pulmonary diseases, warrants the American agent in soliciting for treatment the worst possible cases that can be found in the community—cases that seek relief in vain from any of the common remedies of the day, and have been given up by the most distinguished Physicians, as confirmed and incurable. The Hungarian Balsam has cured and will cure, the most desperate of cases. It is no quack nostrum, but a standard English medicine, of known and established efficacy.

Every family in the United States should be supplied with Buchan's Hungarian Balsam of Life, not only to counteract the consumptive tendencies of the climate, but to be used as a preventive medicine in all cases of Colds, Coughs, Spitting of Blood, pain in the side and chest, irritation and soreness of the Lungs, Bronchitis, difficulty of breathing, hectic fever, night sweats, emaciation and general debility, Asthma, Influenza, Hooping Cough and Croup.

Sold in large bottles, at $1 per bottle, with full directions for the restoration of Health. Pamphlets, containing a mass of English and American certificates, and other evidence, showing the unequalled merits of this Great English Remedy, may be obtained of the agents, gratuitously.

N. B. People passing through this village from the neighboring towns to visit the famous city, (where they are liable to be caught in traps equal to mock auctions in New York city,) would find it to their advantage to call and examine Mr. Russell's style of cutting. To those acquainted with the abilities of Mr. Russell as an artist, it is superfluous to say one word, but from all unacquainted we would solicit an early call to examine his new style of Pattern or Overcoat, designed for Fall or Winter wear. Feeling confident that he will give satisfaction we request him to the public.

Tailoring.

I WOULD respectfully intimate to my friends and the public, that I continue to occupy rooms in the Store of E. Packard. Feeling grateful for past favors, I would solicit a continuance of that patronage so liberally bestowed since I commenced business. Being regularly in receipt of the latest and most approved English, French and American styles, with the abilities of first rate workmen, (employing none else) enables me to produce a garment every way desirable in point of style and finish.

People are requested to call and examine for themselves, and not be cajoled by the rigmorale advertisements, for "by square and rule works many a fool."

My theory of cutting being entirely different from that used by country tailors, aids me in giving a perfect fit to the most imperfect form.

All asked is a fair trial and no favors.

THE SHOEMAKERS.

Ho! workers of the old time styled
The Gentle Craft of Leather!
Young brothers of the ancient guild,
Stand forth once more together!
Call out again your long array
In the olden, merry manner;
Once more on gay St. Crispin's day
Fling out your blazoned banner!

Rep, rap! upon the well-worn stone
How falls the polished hammer:
Rep, rap! the measured sound has grown
A quick and merry clamor.
Now shape the sole; now deftly curl
The glossy vamp around it!
And bless the while the bright-eyed girl
Whose gentle fingers bound it!

For you along the Spanish Main
A hundred keels are ploughing;
For you, the Indian on the plain
His lasso coil is throwing;
For you, deep gleams with hemlock dark
The woodman's fire is lighting;
For you, upon the oak's grey bark
The woodman's axe is smiting!

For you, from Carolina's pine
The resin gum is stealing;
For you, the dark-eyed Florentine
Her silken skein is reeling;
For you, the dizzy goat herd roams
His rugged Alpine ledges;
For you, round all her shepherd homes
Bloom England's thorny hedges.

The foremost still, by day or night,
On moated mound or heather,
Where'er the need of trampled right
Brought toiling men together,
Where the free burghers from the wall
Defied the mailed master,
Than yours, at Freedom's trumpet-call,
No craftsman rallied faster!

Let foppings sneer, let fools deride,
Ye heed no idle scorner;
Free hands and hearts are still your pride,
And duty does your honor.
Ye dare to trust for honest fame
The jury time empowers,
And leave to Truth each noble name
Which glorifies your annals.

Thy songs, Hans Sach, are living yet,
In strong and hearty German,
And Bloomfield's lay and Gifford's wit,
And the rare good sense of Sherman,
Still from his book, a mystic seer,
The soul of Belsham teaches,
Of Fox's leather breeches.

The Foot is yours; where'er it falls
It treads your well-wrought leather—
On earthen floor, in marble halls,
On carpet or on heather,
Still there the sweetest charm is found
Of matron grace or vestal's
As Hebe's foot bore nectar round
Among the old celestials!

Rap, rap!—your stout and bluff brogan,
With footstep loud and weedy,
May wander where the sky's blue span
Shuts down upon the prairie;
Your slippers shine on Beauty's foot,
By Saratoga's fountain,
On lead, like snow-flakes falling mute,
The dance on Cuskil mountain!

The red brick to the mason's hand,
The brown earth to the tiller's—
The shoe in yours shall wealth command,
Like fairy Cinderella!
As they who shunned the household maid
Beheld the crown upon her,
So all shall see your toil repaid
With health, and home, and honor.

Then let the toast be freely quaffed,
In water cool and brimming;
"All honor to the good old Craft,
Its merry men and women!"
Call out again your long array
In the old time's pleasant manner:
Once more on gay St. Crispin's day
Fling out his blazoned banner!

ANECDOTES.

A fashionable young lady met her plain old grandmother at the Springs. The old lady's heart was filled with innocence and simplicity, and her ideas of fashion halted at a straight coat and plain cap. When therefore, she met her dear niece the first time for many years, and saw her a disfigured invalid, she was shocked, and almost fainted. When her emotion had a little subsided, she turned, with tears in her eyes, and said, "Margaret, honey, these may get well; but indeed I fear that the waters never will cure thee of this dreadful thing—(laying her hand on Margaret's fashionable bustle) O! how awful these must feel about it!"—and another shower of tears gushed forth.

"Doctor," said a wag to his medical adviser one day, "isn't there a disease called skinties?" "Yes—to be sure," replied Galen. "Then I've got it for certain," said the patient, "for the roof of my mouth is broken out in a dozen places!"

"Sir, you have laid down with your boots on," said the steward of a steamboat to a raw Hoosier who had "turned in" without removing shoes or casings. Mr. Hoosier calmly raised his head, and, looking down at the boots, innocently replied, "It won't hurt 'em; they are not the best pair!"

"Hollos dar, Gumbo, where you goin'?" "What's dat to you, nigger?" "Kase I's got a columbus to propul at you, and I wants you to dissolve it." "Ax on nigger." "Why am a puty gal like de bab of a wog on wheel, eh?" "I guss dat right up." "Wal den, I'll explain him to you—kase she's surrounded by fellows (fellows), ha, ha, ha." Nigger you am a polygy of learning—you's born for some great vent.

Worms Kill Thousands.

CHILDREN are most subject to them, but persons of all ages are liable to be afflicted with them. Bad breath, paleness about the lips, flushed cheeks, picking at the nose, wasting away, listlessness, pain in the bowels, joints or limbs, disturbed sleep, frightful dreams, moaning and sometimes a voracious appetite, are among the symptoms of worms. Many are bothered for months for some other imaginary disease, when one box of Sherman's Worm Lozenges would effect a cure. Dr. Ryan, corner of Prince street and the Bovey, cured a man of worms that was reduced to a skeleton, and by only one box of Sherman's Lozenges; he is now as fat as an Alderman. The Hon. B. B. Berdeley has cured his children from the consumption's grave. They cured in one day the Rev. Mr. Dunbar, the Rev. M. Hancock, Wm. H. Atter, Esq., of distressing cough. They are the pleasantest cough medicine and cure the most of any known remedy.

Consumption, Coughs, Colic, Whooping Coughs, Asthma, and all affections of the lungs, will find a healing value in Sherman's Cough Lozenges. They saved the Rev. Richard De Forest, the Rev. Mr. Streeter, Jonathan Howarth, Esq., and that worthy old hero, Henderson, Esq., and a multitude of others, have experienced the wonderful effects of these Lozenges. Price only 1/2 cent. Caution is necessary to see that you get the genuine Sherman's Lozenges and Plasters, as there are many worthless articles attempted to be palmed off in place of them, by those who would trade with your life for a few shillings.

Dr. Sherman's warehouse is at 106 Nassau street, New York. Also, sold by Redding & Co., 8 State street, Boston; J. Babcock and M. D. Plummer, Milton; Eli Thayer, Weymouth; King & Nash, N. The Great Remedy

Consumption, Asthma, Dyspeptic Consumption, Spitting of Blood, Bronchitis, Difficulty of breathing, Hoarseness, Influenza, Croup, Colds, Pain in the Breast and Side, Dyspepsia, and various affections of the Stomach and Liver.

Folger's Olossonian, or All-Healing Balsam. IT is acknowledged that more persons die of Consumption than of any other disease. It is estimated that in the United States over THIRTY THOUSAND PERSONS annually fall victims to this dreadful scourge. The cause of the evil is generally overlooked. A short dry Cough is the precursor—or a neglected cold. These symptoms are deemed unimportant. Pain in the Side, Hicetic and night Sweats follow, and death ends the scene.

Would you find a REMEDY FOR THE EVIL? Here it is. The experience of more than twenty years has proved its efficacy, and thousands are rejoicing in its effects.

Case of INCIPENT CONSUMPTION.—George W. Burnett, Esq. of Newark, N. J., had suffered under the effects of a severe cold for more than a year, and in the month of August, when his Cough had reduced him so much that he feared he would die, he commenced using the Olossonian. He raised blood at this time, complained of pain in his side and chest, and was very much debilitated by night sweats. His appetite was gone, and altogether he appeared to be rapidly sinking. He was so much relieved by the use of this remedy that by the month of November he left for Pittsburg, Pa. with every prospect of being permanently cured.

Read the following case of CONSUMPTION.—The cure was truly a wonderful one, and places the Olossonian or All-Healing Balsam, at the head of the list of remedies for eradicating that dreadful disease.

George W. Hays, residing in this city, (New York) was seized with a severe cold in the early part of the summer. His cough continued, and he became more and more debilitated. He complained of a severe pain in the chest and his breathing became so short that he could not walk any distance without stopping for breath. His night sweats reduced him very low. He was under the care of several physicians in Brooklyn, who told him they could do no good, as he had a settled and fixed Consumption. He removed to this city to die among his friends. He was by this time so weak that he could not walk without assistance. Although his friends had now given up all hope of his ever being any better, he commenced using the Olossonian or All-Healing Balsam, and in a few weeks was so far restored as to be able to resume his business.

Mr. T. Laban, residing at 52 Pine street, was severely afflicted with Asthma, in consequence of having taken a severe cold in the early part of last winter. In the early part of the night he could sleep tolerably well, but towards one o'clock in the morning his Asthma became so severe that he was obliged to get up and sit for the remainder of the night leaning forward on a chair. His cough was most distressing through the day, but during his sickness, he tried almost everything without relief. He never had a good night's rest in ten months, until he commenced taking the Olossonian or All-Healing Balsam, when he found immediate relief, and before using half a bottle of it was perfectly well, and now sleeps as quietly as he ever did in his life.

Hundreds of cases could be given to prove the efficacy of the great remedy. And it possesses a property superior to all others, viz: it does not constipate the bowels. Reader, are you suffering under any of the above symptoms? If so, do not delay, but at once try it. It will allay the Pain in your side and chest—put to flight the COUGH which deprives you of sweet slumber and repose; if you have Asthma, be assured there is no medicine in the world that will cure you so speedily, and it will arrest those disagreeable symptoms which strike such terror to the mind and give such dreadful forebodings of an untimely and speedy dissolution.

Sold at one dollar, per bottle, by REDDING & Co. State street, Boston; and by the following appointed agents:

Mrs. Hayden, Quincy; J. Babcock, Milton; M. D. Plummer, Milton; Eli Thayer, Weymouth; Wm. A. Torrey, do; King & Nash, Abington; N. Dyer, do; A. E. Dubois, Randolph; R. Gleason, Dorchester. August 16. if

A MEDICINAL preparation is herein announced which has been long desired, and sought for by the public most anxious and acknowledge the advantage of it. It is a purgative pill, COATED WITH SUGAR, so that it leaves no taste whatever of its internal ingredients. In the use of this medicine is so easily guarded, that if a person were to swallow the pills without being informed what they were, he would believe them to be simply pure sugar, nor could he afterwards, unless by the aid of its internal ingredients, suspect that he had been taking medicine. For these pills are so skillfully prepared, that they do not grip the bowels; and thus the patient who takes them avoids two evils which attend all other purgative medicines, namely: nausea and pain. Medicine administered in all other sweet forms has the disadvantage of being mixed with the sugar, and hence produces a disagreeable flavor, which, to most persons, is more disagreeable than unadulterated bitterness. In these pills this is altogether avoided; the sugar and the medicine being entirely distinct from each other, so that the former must be thoroughly removed before the latter can manifest itself to the taste. It is universally known that nearly all diseases originate with impurity of blood. Pure blood is therefore essential to health. We insist, however, that until the blood is impure, then it takes time—and that time passed in ill health—to rectify it; but when the slightest derangement of the system is indicated by costiveness, or any other sign, it admonishes us that superfluous elements are gathering in the system, which should at once be got rid of; for their removal leaves the body (from which the blood is formed) in a healthy state, and pure blood must be the result. This fact, as stated, is universally known; but people leave such an aversion to medicine that, unless the case is urgent, they prefer the disease to the cure, until an impaired constitution, or a fit of sickness, renders them for the folly of their conduct. Still they had some excuse; for heretofore, medicine in almost all its forms, was nearly as disgusting as it was beneficial. However, the evil is now being speedily removed; for CLICKENER'S SUGAR-COATED VEGETABLE PURGATIVE PILLS have no taste whatever of medicine—produce none of the nausea and griping attendant on the operation of other medicine—while their speedy effect in removing all impurities from the system cannot be excelled by any other medicine which has ever been discovered.

It is unnecessary to say that these pills are as described, the public will freely and gladly patronize them; and the proprietor merely asks a trial, which he is sure of receiving, to prove that he assumes no merit for them which they do not fully possess.

Clickener's Sugar-Coated Vegetable Purgative Pills are prepared and sold, wholesale and retail, and for exportation, by C. V. CLICKENER & Co., Chemists, at 41 N. Broadway, New York. Price 5 cents per box, with full directions, and sold by the following list of Agents:

MISCELLANY.

ANNETTE, THE HEIRESS.

Edward Ogilvie was the youngest of five brave brothers who served their country, both in the field and on the sea, during the last war. Their mother was a widow of comfortable estate, who dwelt in a pleasant homestead facing the waters of Boston Bay. Large elms overshadowed the roof, and broad fields interspersed with woodlands extended away on the right, till they met the fields and woodlands of Squire Harwood, a man of substantial wealth, who had an only daughter of eighteen, who was a belle and an heiress. The road from the homestead of the widow Ogilvie wound along the seaboard, with a hedge and green fields on one side bordering it, and the white sparkling sand and blue waves on the other. The distance between two mountains was little less than a mile; and about half way between was a bridge of stone, spanning a small rivulet, that had a course of half a dozen miles from the interior.

It was about an hour before sunset, near the close of the war, in the month of October, that Edward Ogilvie was crossing this bridge, on his way to visit Annette Harwood, the beauty and heiress; for the charms of the rustic belle had taken captive the young student's heart; and every evening, for the last month, he had directed his walk in the direction of her abode. Edward was in his twentieth year, of good figure, of a pleasing but somewhat diffident address, and with that calm, meditative aspect peculiar to students; for such was this young man. Annette was not loved without giving her heart in return; but the Squire although he had observed with apparent indifference this mutual attachment, had a mind of his own touching a matter so interesting to the lovers themselves.

Edward had got upon the bridge, where he used to linger for a few moments, as he crossed, to watch the flowing sea rush through the arch up the creek, and gaze upon its expanse of waters; or from the opposite side of the bridge contemplate the dark inlet, as it lost itself amid the overhanging trees in a dell where stood a mill belonging equally to the two manors.

Edward had paused a moment on the bridge to watch the effect of the purple light of the western sky reflected upon its mottled bosom, when his eyes were arrested by a sail in the offing. He continued to watch it for a few moments, and then went on his way, from time to time glancing seaward to admire the stately and slow motion of its trackless passage over the ocean. As he came near the dwelling of Squire Harwood, he discovered that her course was towards the land; but seeing Annette on the piazza he forgot the vessel to hasten to her. The meeting was more like that of brother and sister than of lovers; that is, it was affectionate, frank, and free from restraint.

We shall have a lovely evening to walk, the sunset will be so pleasant, said Annette, whom we would stop to describe, if our pen could do justice to her beauty. We will, however, say that the color of her eyes was a deep sea-blue, and they sparkled like waves glancing in the sunlight; her lips had doubtless once been a pair of cherries stolen from Cupid, to make her mouth the prettiest mouth imaginable. Her smile was sunshine, her form sylph like and blooming with youth, her voice full of music, and every motion as graceful as a fawn's. She was good humored, intelligent, and was suitably grave, and was just the maiden to ensure a student like Edward Ogilvie.

Yes, Annette, the air is rich with golden tints, and soft as a June evening. Suppose we ramble towards the village, and listen to the martial music of the soldiers as they march from the ground!

I should like it of all things. My father says our company, the Blues, made the finest show of any on parade, to-day.

He was at the review, then?

Yes, and acted as a major or colonel, I believe. At any rate, he has just come home on horseback, in full uniform, with a sword by his side, and looks as brave, I tell him, as a crusading knight. He told me to hold my little tongue, and so I have for full a minute.

And the longest time you ever held it? No, said the Squire, coming out of the house, his chapeau in his hand and his sword unbelted and beneath his arm. Ah, Edward, good evening, man. Fine day we have had for the general muster?

Yes, sir! Are the troops dismissed yet?

Not all.

We were going up the road to the hill top, to listen to the music, father, said Annette.

No—no! stay at home, child, said the Squire, gravely. I suppose Master Edward has asked you to go?

I did, Mr. Harwood; I thought the walk might be pleasant.

Humph! Look you, young man, said Squire Harwood, bluntly; military music is not made for the amusement of studious youths after idling the day over musty books, nor merely to please a lassie's ear. It is the voice of the spirit of liberty, and calls the young men of the land to her battles, and the maidens to make them clothes to fight in, and colors to fight under! You, I see, like my Annette, and far as I can see, she likes you back again.

Now Edward, you are a very correct, excellent young man, that I know; but you see I haven't but one daughter, and I don't mean she shall marry any man who, excellent as he may be, through all this war has never drawn a blade nor pulled a trigger for love of his country.

Your brothers are all brave fellows, and serving her with honor. You stay at home to pore over dictionaries in the day time, and come to make love to Annette by moonlight. Now, I have nothing against you, as I said before; but I've made up my mind, Annette shan't marry a man who hasn't had a hand in this war against the English. If you are a mind to follow the example of your brothers, and let me hear something that you have done I can tell my neighbors of with pride, then you shall have my consent to marry Annette; for hers, I dare say she's given you long ago.

A text, you know, is as good as a sermon, Master Edward. So, if you want my daughter, you know how she is to be won.

Thus speaking, Squire Harwood took Annette under his arm, and bowing very kindly, but firmly, to the astonished lover, disappeared within the house.

Edward remained standing a moment, upon the spot where they had left him, as if trying to realize what had passed. He then turned away in silence, his cheek burning with the glow of a mortified and sensitive spirit.

The profession which he had in view was that of a clergyman; and although not deficient in courage nor patriotism, he had suffered his brothers to take the field and the deck, while he remained at home. The words of the Squire sunk deep into his spirit. He walked slowly homeward, very sad, and filled with painful ideas of losing her who was so very dear to him. As he came upon the bridge he had made up his mind. He stopped, and speaking aloud, said firmly—

If Annette is only to be won by my taking up arms, I will enlist to-morrow! It is honorable to serve one's country. I am not yet a clergyman, and I can therefore act freely. This is the last day the reproach shall be thrown upon me, that I remain dallying at home while my brothers are abroad exposing their bosoms to the weapons of their country's foes!

While he was speaking, he saw that the ship, which he had noticed half an hour before at a distance, had drawn close in with the land, and had dropped anchor about a mile abreast of the inlet. The sun had already set, yet he could see her distinctly, and discover that she was a merchant ship. He remained for some time watching her, and listening to the distant drum of a detachment of the militia of the neighborhood, which was retiring homeward from the muster-field. The sound of the drum died away in the distance beyond the mill; and the low dashing of the waves against the bridge fell upon his ear.

Well, to-morrow I too shall march to the measure of pipe and drum. I will enlist as a private, and make my way up. Annette shall be won!

He paused, thinking he heard the sound of oars. He looked seaward, but the twilight rendered objects too obscure to detect any boat approaching. Yet each moment the fall of the sweeps came nearer, and he soon was enabled to discover a barge pulling in towards the bridge. His position, in the shadow of an overhanging limb, shielded him from observation. He saw that the boat contained at least twenty men. It moved slower as it drew nearer land, and a person standing up in the stern directed its landing. It struck the shore close by the bridge within the inlet; and almost beneath where he stood, the party debarked.

He now saw that half of them were seamen and half marines, and that all were armed. They were commanded by a young midshipman, who, forming them into a column, marched them up the bank and on the bridge. Edward, as they came near, drew up into the limb, and was concealed by its foliage, while he observed with surprise their stealthy movements.

How far is the grist mill hence, Sambo? asked the young officer, looking about him after all his party had got on the bridge, save a man to guard the boat.

The first mill man 'bout a third of a mile up de creek-shore! answered a man, in the true Yankee negro intonation, but speaking with manifest reluctance.

I know dat well 'nuff, so I tells you de truth, tho' I hates to mighty! I knows all 'bout dis place, coz I used to lib here once!—Ober dar is whar Squire Harwood live, and ober dat way am widder Ogilvie, an' I wish dis nigger was safe in dar kitchen! Inebber go cook agen in Boston ship, nor no oder one 'ut bein' taken pris'n'r by de British, as I am dis time! I wish I may never see blue water agen, if I gets my liberty dis time!

Hist with your noise! each of you march forward in silence. We are in an enemy's country, and must be cautious.

Yes, I guess you better, said the negro, sulkily. If de country people know'd you was skulm' here arter corn, and flour, and sheep, and oxes, to keep from starvin' to death, as we have been a week past, they be 'round as thick as snakes in de grass, and debble one ob you get back to your boat! So I advise you massa to keep sharp eye to windward! Guy how mad all on 'em be in de mornin', when dey find out you land here in a prize-ship, wid only two gun aboard and thirty men, an' carry off clear to Halifax de grist from dese two mills, and sheep and turkeys, too, for de lieutenant's dinner! Dey sware den, and I expect de Squire swear enuff for a whole regiment!

Forward! cried the midddy. Silence, all of you, and advance swiftly and with caution!

They filed off the bridge, and taking the path along which the negro led the way, they were soon lost to the sight of Edward in the gloom of the overhanging banks of the creek.

These men, then, are English, he reflected, as he let himself down upon the bridge; the vessel is a prize, bound to Halifax, with a midshipman and two-and-thirty men—twenty here and ten remaining on board! My course is decided on! It will take them an hour to be disembarked. Half of that time is enough for me. I shall know where to seek the militia party with the file and drum; and if I can find twenty brave men among them to put themselves under my orders, I will win Annette before to-morrow's sunrise!

As he spoke, he glided noiselessly away from the bridge, and after getting beyond hearing of the men in the boat, he fled like the wind across a meadow in the direction of what was called the Cross Road, a cluster of village habitations, the principal of which was a large country tavern where he knew that he should find assembled many of the militia-men who had borne a part in the review in the neighboring town. This inn was about half a mile distant from the bridge, on a road in the rear of Squire Harwood's farm, across which, leaping fence after fence, Edward Ogilvie was now flying with the speed of a deer.

The tavern, as he came near, was so quiet that he feared that the men he sought had left for their respective homes. Seeing a light in the tap, however, he hoped yet to find some persons assembled there. Through the windows, as he approached the door, he saw that the bar-room was nearly filled with men. The next moment he was in their presence. His manner was divested of all excitement, and a spirit calm and resolute beamed from his eyes.

There were at least twenty men in the apartment, most of them with knapsacks and bayonet belts upon their persons, and some leaning upon their muskets; while the guns of the rest of the party were stacked in a corner of the room. Some of them were smoking, others drinking, and all listening to a long yarn told by one of the party, of certain exploits by himself, personally performed at the battle of Plattsburg.

On Edward's entrance the landlord first noticed him—

Ah—so you can enter a tavern on a training-day, Mr. Ogilvie; glad to see you. Though you are not much of a fighting man, I like you for your brothers' sake, who are all serving their country. But there must be parsons as well as soldiers, and every man to his trade!

All eyes were now turned upon the young man. Advancing a little way into the floor, he said, with a firm tone—

I am glad to find so many of you here assembled. If the brave men among you are willing to place yourselves under my direction for the next two hours, I will lead you where you can win both honor and prize money.

Spoken with spirit! exclaimed several.

That rings like your brother George! said the landlord. But what is it? cried all crowding round.

Will you be led by me? There is danger to life and person; but I ask no man to follow where I fear to lead!

The man has courage if he is a student, remarked one to the other with surprise.

What have you discovered? demanded two or three of the most forward of the men.

Will you follow me and obey my orders, if I can place in your hands, as prisoners, twenty English seamen and an officer, who have just landed?

Yes—lead on! was the general response, and the men commenced arming themselves.

Briefly, Edward told them what he had witnessed. All was enthusiasm. Among the militia-men was a young man whom he dispatched to Squire Harwood. In twenty minutes the Squire was on the spot, mounted on his horse, and armed with his broad sword.—Five of his farm men had followed him. Others came in from all sides.

Edward, with great coolness and skill, took upon himself the conduct of the whole affair. He suggested that the Squire, with thirty men, should cut off the retreat of the foraging party and take them prisoners.

And what will you do? asked the Squire: You are not going to keep out of danger?

No sir! If there are twenty brave men here, who will volunteer to go with me, I will proceed to their boat, take possession of it, and embark for the ship. In the night we can board her without difficulty, as we shall be taken for their own party. Once on board, the ship will easily fall into our hands, for the most of her prize crew are ashore! Who will volunteer?

This bold proposition at first startled the boldest man among them. But in less than five minutes twenty of them had volunteered; and in five minutes more he was at their head, leading them to the bridge, while the Squire, with his detachment, proceeded to cut off the retreat of the enemy.

The result was in all prospects successful.—The English party, at the mills, surrendered after a brief skirmish, and were taken to the tavern as prisoners within an hour after the Squire had left it. Edward and his brave band boarded the ship without suspicion, and after a short conflict he was master of her. He took her, by the aid of the released American crew, into Boston harbor the next day; and we need not add that, within less than three months, he was rewarded with the hand of the beautiful Annette Harwood.

THE WAY SHE FIXED HIM.

If there is a really difficult point to be managed, and a cuteness is required to effect it, commend us to woman's wit for the purpose.

Now there was a certain pedlar of tin ware who traversed the country to dispose of notions to such as were willing to bargain. He was a persevering trader, and never suffered himself to be baffled off with a short answer. One house, in particular, he continued to visit, in spite of continued rebuffs, and assurances that nothing was wanted;—they never bought goods in that way. Nevertheless he made his calls steadily, with each regular round, until he became a regular pest—and in reply to the information that it was useless to call, he made known his purpose to do so, just as often as he pleased.

One bitter cold day, the house bell rang, and the good lady made all haste to get her hands from the dough in which they were busy, to answer the call. When she went, there stood the everlasting pedlar.

"Any tin ware wanting to-day, ma'am?"

"Have you any tin kitchens?"

"Yes ma'am"—and away he went to bring samples, chuckling at the idea that his zeal was to be successful, at last. "There's nothin' like hangin' on, any how," muttered he. The tin kitchens were brought, and tin pans were next inquired for. The pans were brought and other articles enumerated to the number of seven different kinds, until a goodly portion of the pedlar's load had been transferred to the house.

"Is there any thing more that you want, ma'am?"

"O no—I don't want any of these. I only asked if you had them—I didn't say I wanted them."

The pedlar was fairly "sold," and for a moment he felt like getting angry—but the idea rather tickled him, and he commenced returning his wares to his cart, without uttering a word. He then mounted and rode off, satisfied that for once a tin pedlar had met his match. He has never called at that house since.

LONGEVITY OF ANIMALS. A necrological table of statistics, exhibitory of the relative length of life enjoyed by different animals, presents the following interesting facts:—The average length of life of the Lion, Tiger, and Panther, in a Menagerie at Paris, is six or seven years. The male lion has, however, lived to the age of twenty-nine years, the female seventeen. Those lions which are carried about for exhibition, generally live much longer, often from seventeen to twenty years. The Siberian bear lives only from three to four years; the black bear, being of a more robust constitution, from eight to nine. The family of bears known by the name of Maimonte a l'arbe, live from seventeen to twenty years, and behold a long series of generations. The hyena lives only four or five years; dromedaries and camels thirty or forty years. The elephant, which, when free, reaches the age of a century, only attains a quarter of that space of time, when domesticated. The giraffe, which is now in Jardin des Plantes, has been there seventeen years, and still enjoys excellent health. Monkeys only survive four or five years, and it is mentioned as a great phenomenon, that one lived in Gibraltar for seventeen years.

A GUARDED ANSWER. In the Registration Court, Cupar Eife, was called on to appear as a witness, and could not be found. On the Sheriff asking where he was, a grave elderly gentleman rose up, and with much emphasis, said, "My Lord, he's gone." "Gone! gone!" said the Sheriff, "where is he gone?" "That I cannot inform you," replied the communicative gentleman, "but he's dead."—New York Mirror.

WHAT IS LUXURY. A candle would have been a luxury to Alfred; a half crown cotton gown to his Queen. Carpets, in lieu of rushes, would have been luxury to Henry VII.—Glass windows, in lieu of horn, to his nobles. A lettuce to Henry VIII's Queen; silk gloves and stockings to Queen Elizabeth; and so on, ad infinitum. Mr. Charles Waterton, the author of some works on natural history, in an account of his family, tells us that one of his ancestors, in the time of Henry IV., was sent into France by the King, with orders to contract a royal marriage, and was allowed thirteen shillings a day for his trouble and travelling expenses.

SHOEMAKING IN FRANCE. The New York Gazette states, that there are one hundred million shoes made annually in France. The salaries paid to the men making them, amount to three hundred million francs. The value of the leather gloves annually manufactured in France, is thirty million francs, and this business affords employment to ten thousand workmen.

NEW WAY TO RAISE THE WIND. A stranger recently obtained a loan of a hundred dollars from one of the Cincinnati merchants, securing the repayment by the deposit of a cask of extra brandy. He went his way. "On a full examination," says the Chronicle, "it was found that a copper can, which contained a small quantity of brandy, had been firmly fitted around the bung-hole, and all besides was water!"

LOAFERS. Different nations have different kinds of loafers. The Italian spends his time in sleeping—the Turkish loafer in dreaming—the Spanish in praying—the French in laughing—the English in swearing—the Russians in gambling—the Hungarian in smoking—the German in drinking—and the American in talking politics.

NEVER FRET. If a man would but glance over his yesterday, he will at once see how foolish it is to fret one's self about the time to come; for he will find in every yesterday, a miniature grave, as it were, dug by a too fearful imagination, in which is buried all his little store of daily happiness. Men slight the good they have, in their anxiety for the good to come. They waste their oil for to-day in fruitless attempts to procure a supply for the morrow, forgetting that He who replenishes the cistern is inexhaustible.

TIGHT LACING. A young lady of high respectability, residing a few miles from Philadelphia, has lately had a cancer extracted from her breast—the effect of tight lacing! She is about thirty years of age, and has long been addicted to the follies of this life. She has suffered most acutely.

GOOD COUNSEL. That you may not speak ill of any, do not delight to hear ill of them. Give no countenance to busy bodies, and those that love to talk of other men's faults; or, if you cannot decently reprove them on account of their quality, then direct the discourse some other way; or if you cannot do that, by seeming not to mind it, you may sufficiently signify that you do not like it.

GENTLENESS. Gentleness, which belongs to virtue, is to be carefully distinguished from the mean spirit of cowards and the fawning assent of sycophants. It removes no just right from fear; it gives up no important truth from flattery; it is, indeed, not only consistent with a firm mind, but it also necessarily requires a manly spirit and a fixed principle in order to give it any real value.

EXPECTATIONS. Seldom does it fall to the lot of mortals fully to realize their expectations; crosses unexpected, and disappointments unforeseen, more frequently check our everyday life, and serve as a lesson whereby we are taught not to expect or build our hopes upon happiness in this life. Let us not be too sanguine, for in the course of our lives we may have many a bitter cup to drain, and he who has been most buoyant, or less thoughtful than others, doubly feels its bitterness.

For the Quincy Patriot.

OLD COLONY RAILROAD.

MR. EDITOR—It has been asserted repeatedly, by gentlemen connected with the Old Colony Rail Road Corporation, that the fare on said road would be permanently established at two and a half cents per mile; and indeed the fare to other places, for instance, Quincy, Weymouth, etc., is at about that rate, but to the great disappointment of the citizens of the village of Neponset and vicinity, who were wishing to avail themselves of a cheap, regular and expeditious facility of going to and from the city, the fare from said village to South Boston is at the rate of five cents per mile, or, in other words, the fare from Neponset Village to South Boston—four miles—is twenty cents.

Now sir, for the interest of the Old Colony Rail Road Company especially, and for the interest of the citizens of this village in particular, I hope the fare will be reduced so much as to accord with the expectations and wishes of this Community and the present, and especially the future prosperity of this might be very popular road.

Osseonian, or All-Healing Balm.

It is acknowledged that more persons die of Consumption than of any other disease. It is estimated that the United States have THIRTY THOUSAND annually fall victims to this scourge. The cause of the evil is generally a cold short dry Cough is the precursor—or the cause. These symptoms are devoted attention in the Side, Hectic and night Sweats death ends the scene.

Find a REMEDY FOR THE EVIL?

The experience of more than twenty years has proved its efficacy, and thousands are restored to health.

INCIDENT CONSUMPTION—George H. Esq. of Newark, N. J., had suffered effects of a severe cold for more than a year in the month of August, when his Cough became so much that he feared he would die, and was complaining of pain in his side and chest, very much debilitated by night sweats. His wife, who was much relieved by the remedy that by the month of November he was cured.

Following case of CONSUMPTION—was truly a wonderful one, and places the Osseonian, or All-Healing Balm, at the head of remedies for excruciating that dreadful disease.

W. Hays, residing in this city, (New York) with a severe cold in the early part of the year, his cough became very troublesome, and he could not walk any distance without stopping. His night sweats reduced him very low, and the care of several physicians in Brooklyn and him they could do no good, as his disordered and fixed Consumption. He resorted to the Osseonian, or All-Healing Balm, and was cured.

Osseonian, or All-Healing Balm, was several times used in consequence of having a severe cold in the early part of last winter. A part of the night he could sleep tolerably, but in the morning his frame so ached, that he was obliged to get up for the remainder of the night leaving for a chair. His cough was most distressing day. He had, during his sickness, tried every thing without relief. He never slept more than two or three hours, until he commenced Osseonian, or All-Healing Balm, when immediate relief, and before using half a bottle was perfectly well, and now sleeps as quietly as in his life.

For the Quincy Patriot.

A WORD OF CAUTION.

I wish to suggest through the columns of your valuable paper, the propriety of certain gossiping persons, in a neighborhood not many miles from your office, exercising a little more caution in calumniating the good name of one who never wronged a person in mind, body or estate. Shakespeare, the immortal bard, uses something like the following language: "He who steals my purse steals trash;  but he who robs me of my good name takes from me that which will do him no good and makes me poor indeed." I would recommend to all persons, fond of propagating slander and prying into family concerns, to mind their own business.

OPPOSITION TO TEXAS. A meeting was held last Monday evening, in this town, in reference to the annexation of Texas. Presiding officers were chosen, a prayer was then offered by Rev. J. T. Burrell, after which Hon. C. Francis Adams of Boston addressed the assembly. At the close of the address, George Newcomb, Esq., after some remarks, offered the annexed resolutions, which were adopted.

Whereas, In the language of a distinguished late State paper—"It was the purpose of the illustrious founders of our republic to base the institutions which they reared upon the great and unchanging principles of justice and equity, conscious that if administered in the spirit in which they were conceived, they would be felt only by the benefits which they diffused, and would secure for themselves a defence in the hearts of the people, more powerful than standing armies, and all the means and appliances invented to sustain government founded in injustice and oppression—"

And whereas, The highest motive for the enlargement of the boundaries of our republic by the annexation of Texas has been, and is, in the language of its diplomatic history, "To prevent the abolition of Slavery in Texas," and "to maintain Slavery in the United States."

And whereas, Its manner of annexation by the joint resolution of Congress is in our judgment a violation of the Constitution itself—therefore be it

Resolved, That we, the citizens of Quincy, in public meeting assembled, without distinction of party—while we hold in fond remembrance and cherish with warm hearts, the lofty tone of the liberty-inspiring sentiments, and the patriotic labors of our Hancock, our Quineys and our Adamses, with their co-workers of '76, cannot look on in silence, and behold the fairest work of their great achievements, marred and debased, by being lent to the basest of purposes, the extension and upholding of human Slavery.

Resolved, That the admission of Texas into our Union with a State Constitution that sets at naught the great and fundamental doctrine of a free government, the rights of man, is not establishing the justice, nor securing the blessings of liberty to themselves and their posterity, as the Federal Constitution contemplated. And, in exercise of those rights invested in us as a portion of the sovereign people, we solemnly, in the name of God and Humanity, protest against its admission as a Slave State.

Resolved, That we fully and heartily concur in the resolutions, passed by a newly assembled convention in the Legislature of this Commonwealth, protesting against this high-handed, unconstitutional act, and provided the deed of annexation be consummated, do pledge ourselves to sustain and uphold such action as her enlightened wisdom and devoted patriotism may suggest for the restoration of our rights, and for the re-establishment of justice and equity in our national government.

Resolved, That a Committee of be chosen, whose duty it shall be to act in regard to this great question of Human Rights, as time and circumstances may require.

The following gentlemen were selected by the chairman of the meeting as the committee designated in the last resolve, viz:—Messrs. George Newcomb, Charles A. Cummings, George Clapp, Henry Barker, William D. Gray, Thomas Hardwick and George Baxter.

USE OF TOBACCO. The following letter, from our townsman, Ex-President Adams, should be read by every one. There cannot be a doubt, in reference to the conclusions to which he has arrived.

QUINCY, Mass., Aug. 19, 1845.

DEAR SIR: I have received your letter of the 13th inst. and shall deem myself honored by the inscription to me, of your introduction to the proposed publication of the Reverend B. I. Lane's work on Tobacco and its Mysteries. In my early youth, I was addicted to the use of tobacco in two of its mysteries, smoking and chewing. I was warned, by a medical friend, of the pernicious operation of this habit upon the stomach and the nerves; and the advice of the physicians was fortified by the results of my own experience. More than thirty years have passed away, since I deliberately renounced the use of tobacco in all its forms; and although the resolution was not carried into execution, without a struggle of vitiated nature, I never yielded to its impulses; and in the space of three or four months of self denial, they lost their stimulating power, and I have never since felt it as a privation.

I have often wished that every individual of the human race afflicted with this artificial passion, could prevail on himself to try but for three months the experiment which I have made; sure that it would turn every acre of tobacco land into a wheat field, and add five years of longevity to the average of human life.

I am, with great respect, dear sir,
Your friend and Christian brother,
JOHN QUINCY ADAMS.
Rev. Samuel H. Cox, D. D., Brooklyn, N. Y.

REPORT OF THE POSTMASTER GENERAL. By the report of the Postmaster General, it appears that the deficiency in the revenue of that department during the last fiscal year, is about a million and a quarter.

He recommends the purchase by Congress of the patent right of Morse's Telegraph, as he believes it will prove a dangerous engine in the hands of individuals not under the control of law, and that the few will be benefitted at the expense of the many.

The report shows that there were three thousand and thirty-three appointments to office during the year ending with June last, of which seven hundred and fifty-three were in place of removals. Over two thousand postmasters resigned on account of the new law.

The Postmaster General anticipates a falling off of forty-five per cent. the current year, in the profits of the department, and a diminution of means of $1,328,977. He recommends a quarter ounce for a single letter, and proposes the following alterations: For a single letter, five cents under fifty miles; ten cents between fifty and three hundred miles; and fifteen cents over three hundred miles.

ANATOMY AND PHYSIOLOGY. We learn that Dr. Cutter, who has recently given several lectures upon this important subject in this place, intends soon to visit us again for that purpose. He illustrates his subject by a skeleton and four French Manikins, and the practical and useful character of his lectures have called forth abundant testimonials in their favor. Due notice will be given at the time and place.

SLAVERS. It is a fact which New England ought to be ashamed of, remarks the editor of the Boston Eagle, that nearly every slaver which has been taken on the African coast during the past two years, was built and commanded by New England men.

SLAVERHOLDERS. The whole number of slaveholders, who are voters, are said not to exceed seventy-two thousand; while there are in the free States, nearly a million of voting freemen.

BE ON YOUR GUARD. Counterfeit American half-dollars and dimes are in circulation in Boston. They are so well executed as to deceive readily, but may easily be detected by sounding them.

TEXAS MATTERS. The Texas Senators, that are to be, are already provided for, so far as seats in the United States Senate are concerned. A paper says they are expected within a few months at the seat of Government.

President Jones has issued a proclamation, appointing the fifteenth of December, as the day for holding the election for Governor, Lieutenant Governor, and Senators and Representatives to the Legislature of the State of Texas.

DISEASE AMONG THE TURNIPS. Accounts from certain parts of England state that the destruction of the turnip crop is much more complete than that of the potato.

COMMUTED. The punishment of John Roach, alias Watkins, who was sentenced to be hung, at the late session of the Supreme Court, in Worcester, for an aggravated crime, has been commuted to imprisonment for life.

A NEW STATE. The Brooklyn, (N. Y.) Eagle contains the call for a meeting of the people of Long Island, to take into consideration the expediency of making a State of Long Island.

FOREFATHER'S DAY. This anniversary will be celebrated by the Pilgrim Society at Plymouth, on Monday, the twenty-second instant. The services will be in the First Church,—the dinner in the depot of the Old Colony Railroad,—in the evening, a ball at Pilgrim Hall.

ANOTHER TRIAL. The next Congressional election in the Ninth District of this State, comes off on the twenty-ninth instant.

UNITED STATES TREASURY. The Treasurer's report of the receipts and expenditures of the fiscal year, ending thirtieth of June last, shows the receipts, including balance in the Treasury, July 1st, 1844, to have been $37,626,513; and expenditures $29,968,206, leaving a balance in the Treasury of $7,658,306. The estimated receipts of next year are $34,478,306; and expenditures $2,627,051.

APPOINTMENT. The Governor and Council of this State have appointed Albert H. Nelson, of Woburn, District Attorney for the Northern District, in place of Asabel Huntington, resigned.

VIRGINIA SENATOR. Hon. J. S. Pennybacker, (dem.)—formerly a member of Congress from the Rockingham District—has been chosen to take the place of Hon. William C. Rives, (whig,) in the United States Senate.

MAYOR OF BOSTON. As will be seen, the whigs have completely triumphed, securing the several branches of the city government. The following statement shows the vote for Mayor:—

Josiah Quincy, jr., (whig),	5391
John T. Heard, (democrat),	1351
William S. Damrell, (native),	1633
Scattering,	83

Quincy's majority over all others, 2261.

THE PLANET MERCURY.—The Boston Traveller says, This Planet may now be seen in the evening twilight, about three-quarters of an hour after sunset. It is found just south of west, a few degrees above the horizon; and will be visible every clear night till about the fourteenth of the present month.

ENGINE AFFAIRS. The following card, from the committee of judges on the part of the Tiger company, so fully covers the matter, that we will not enlarge, except it is to say—that quite a concourse of people were present to witness the affair, and that the day, although clear and pleasant, was altogether too cold for a fair and proper exhibition:

TRIAL OF ENGINES.

The Tiger, No. 2, and the Vulture, No. 4, of this town, played this day near the Stone Temple, which resulted as follows: First—trial through three hundred feet of hose, tub and tub, for the space of four minutes, (engines being one hundred and ninety-five feet apart)—one inch and seven-eighths in favor of the Tiger. Second—through one hundred feet of hose, tub and tub, four minutes—eleven inches and three-eighths in favor of the Vulture. Third—the Vulture drafted and played, through two hundred and fifty feet of hose, into the Tiger—the Tiger playing through two hundred feet of hose and a one inch pipe, on distance, for the space of five minutes—in this position the Vulture flowed the Tiger; changing positions, the Tiger did not supply the Vulture with water—the trial resulted however, in favor of the Tiger, on the challenge—the Tiger throwing her water one hundred and twenty-four feet and eight inches, and the Vulture one hundred and twenty feet and six inches, being four feet and two inches in favor of the Tiger.

NATHL. WHITE, ADAM CURTIS, JOHN GLOVER, JR., GEORGE MARSH.

BOSTON ALMANAC. This annual calendar for 1846 has made its appearance. S. N. Dickinson, Esq., its indefatigable compiler, has spared no pains nor labor to render the present one more valuable than any of its predecessors. In mechanical execution, it is needless to say it is superior, when the fact is known that it was executed under his own observation. With the present number is a diagram of railroads diverging from Boston, distinctly pointing out the towns intersected on the several routes. This map alone is worth the price of the work. It is for sale at the Quincy Bookstore. Go and buy it.

APPOINTMENT. Nathaniel F. Safford, Esq. of Milton, has been appointed by the Governor and Council, a Master in Chancery in and for the County of Norfolk. We are gratified at this selection as Mr. Safford possesses those qualifications which fit him in an eminent degree to discharge with honor to himself and command the respect of the community, all the high duties so wisely conferred upon him by the Governor and Council of this State.

THE OREGON DISPUTE. There is doubtless a large portion of the community, who have no idea of the difference in the amount of land, between the forty-ninth degree of latitude, and the parallel of fifty-four degree forty minutes, which the Washington (D. C.) Union declares to be the intention of the United States Government to insist upon as the northern boundary line of Oregon. According to a statement made by the Commissioners of the Land Office, in 1843, the difference consists in one hundred and four million six hundred and forty thousand acres, which, at the minimum price of the public lands, is worth one hundred and thirty million of dollars.

IRELAND AND ITS POOR. At the meeting in Boston, on Monday evening last, for the relief of Ireland, Rev. Dr. O'Flaherty laid on the table seventy-nine dollars, collected in his congregation at Salem. Six hundred and thirty dollars were then raised by public contribution, during which, a gentleman requested that it might be announced that if five hundred should be raised within a fortnight, he would contribute twenty-five dollars to the fund. In less than half an hour after this announcement was made, more than five hundred dollars had been piled upon the table.

CONGRESS. Not much business has been transacted in either branch, save the election of several minor officers, to complete the organization. The committees, thus far chosen, are decidedly favorable to the views of the President, and his measures, it is opined, will be warmly sustained by his friends in Congress.

The following letter from Dr. Brigham, of Lowell, Mass., but speaks the uniform language of hundreds of other Physicians, who have tried, and therefore know how to appreciate Jayne's Expecto-rant.

Lowell, Mass., Jan. 27, 1844.
Dr. David Jayne:—Dear Sir—I have used your medicine, (so universally known by the name of Jayne's Expecto-rant) in my practice for a number of years, and can most truly say, that I have been most successful in the use of it as a mild, safe and thorough EXPECTORANT, than of any which I have ever used. It is the best for the following obvious reasons: It does not give in proper doses, occasion a disagreeable nausea. It does not weaken the large and prostrate system like most other Expectorants in common use, nor does it abate the appetite of the patient, like other nauseating medicines, which have been used by the faculty for ages gone by. I remain, yours, &c.

GREAT ENGLISH REMEDY.

For Coughs, Colds, Asthma, and Consumption.

The great and only remedy for Coughs, Colds, Asthma, and CONSUMPTION, is the HUNGARIAN BALSM OF LIFE, discovered by the celebrated Dr. Buchan, of London, England, and introduced into the United States under the immediate superintendence of the inventor.

The extraordinary success of this medicine, in the case of pulmonary diseases, warrants the American agent in soliciting for treatment the worst possible cases that can be found in the community—cases that seek relief in vain from any of the common remedies of the day, and have been given up by the most distinguished Physicians, as confirmed and incurable. The Hungarian Balm has cured and will cure, the most desperate of cases. It is no quick nostrum, but a standard English medicine, of known and established efficacy.

Every family in the United States should be supplied with Buchan's Hungarian Balm of Life, not only to counteract the consumptive tendencies of the climate, but to be used as a preventive medicine in all cases of Colds, Coughs, Spitting of Blood, pain in the side and chest, irritation and soreness of the Lungs, Bronchitis, difficulty of breathing, hectic fever, night sweats, emaciation and general debility, Asthma, Influenza, Hooping Cough and Croup.

Sold in large bottles, at $1 per bottle, with full directions for the restoration of Health.

Pamphlets, containing a mass of English and American certificates, and other evidence, showing the unequalled merits of this Great English Remedy, may be obtained of the agents, gratuitously.

JOHN DINEGAN

WOULD respectfully inform his customers and the public, that he has received several cases of English, French and German

BROAD CLOTHS, OF THE VERY BEST DESCRIPTION.

Among the selection I have made may be found, Plain and Double Weaved English BEAVERS; Plain and Figured PILOT CLOTH; Several pieces of FRENCH BROADCLOTH, suitable for Over Coats or Dress Frock Coats, which will be found to be entirely new articles in this market, and will come very cheap.

In addition to the above named, I have also received a complete assortment of Superfine Cloths, such as JET BLACK, BLUE BLACK and GOLDEN BROWNS.

A good assortment of BLUE, which will come remarkably cheap for Dress or Frock Coats, or Boys' Jackets and Pants.

A COMPLETE ASSORTMENT OF FRENCH DOESKINS AND CASSIMERES.

VESTINGS,

Of every description; FIGURED SILK AND SATIN, remarkably cheap; a good variety of Cashmere and Valencia. A Vest will come from $1.75 to $3.50, made to order.

The liberal patronage I have received since I came to Quincy, has enabled me to open as choice a selection of Goods as ever was introduced into this market.

I return my customers and the public my sincere thanks for their liberal patronage, and I respectfully invite them to call and examine my present stock of Goods. I can make garments considerably cheaper, as well as of as good cloth as can be had in any State in the city of Boston. The reason I can do these things are, in the first place I am prepared to cut and make a garment with any man that can be named there, in the next place, I can purchase my goods as cheap as any man can, and I cut and superimpose my own work. These are facts that are worth the consideration of those who wish to get their garments where they can get them cheapest and best, and to suit them in every respect or no sale.

I have adopted the one price system. I am fully convinced it is the most honest way of doing business, and my terms are Cash.

N. B. People passing through this village from the neighboring towns to visit the famous city (celebrity are liable to be caught in traps equal to those set in New York city) would find it to their advantage to call and examine Mr. Russell's style of clothing. To those acquainted with the abilities of Mr. Russell as an artist, it is unnecessary to say one word, but from all unacquainted we would submit an early call to examine his new style of Patriot or Overcoat, designed for Fall or Winter wear. Feeling confident that he will give satisfaction we recommend him to the public.

Tailoring.

I WOULD respectfully intimate to my friends and the public, that I continue to occupy rooms in the State of E. Packard. Feeling grateful for past favors, I would solicit a continuance of that patronage so liberally bestowed since I commenced business. Being regularly in receipt of the latest and most approved English, French and American styles, with the abilities of first rate workmen, (employing none else) enables me to produce a garment every way desirable in point of style and finish.

People are requested to call and examine for themselves, and not be misled by the numerous advertisements for "by square and rule works may a fool." My theory of cutting is entirely different from that used by country tailors, and in giving a perfect fit to the most imperfect form.

All asked is a fair trial and no favors.

HEALTH RESTORATIVE.

A REMARKABLE AND SINGULAR ATTESTATION has just been made by an eminent member of the Medical Faculty, as to the curative power of C. Brinckerhoff's Health Restorative in cases of Consumption, Chronic Coughs and Colds, and Pains in the Side and Chest. This gentleman furnishes his patients with the Restorative, and finds it absolutely necessary, as he never had any prescription to produce the astonishing results realized by the use of the Restorative. This gentleman sends among his medical brethren as one of the most distinguished of their number; his name is left with the proprietor for reference. There is no doubt but that in a few years the leading physicians will prescribe this remedy, and that afflicted patients will use it and bless the hour that it was made known to them. Being a truly fine herbal medicine it is consequently of more importance, as every one feels safety while using it, and no sense of danger as if he were using deleterious minerals. Mr. Wilkes a respected merchant in New York, used the Restorative and was cured wholly from a dangerous cough and expectation. The editor of the Commercial Advertiser with an earnest appeal commends it to the confidence of the sick, and affecting calls on them all to give it a fair trial before relinquishing every hope. The following certificate is from Dr. Chilton, the well known New York chemist:

"I have analyzed a bottle of medicine called 'C. Brinckerhoff's Health Restorative,' and find that it does not contain Mercury, or any other metallic preparation, nor opium in any of its forms. It is composed of vegetable matter entirely."

The Great Remedy

FOR

Consumption, Asthma, Dyspeptic Consumption, Spitting of Blood, Bronchitis, Difficulty of Breathing,

Hemorrhages, Influenza, Croup, Colds, Pain in the Breast and Side, Dyspepsia, and various affections of the Stomach and Liver.

Folger's Olosonian, or All-Healing Balsam.

IT is acknowledged that more persons die of Consumption than of any other disease. It is estimated that in the United States over THIRTY THOUSAND PERSONS annually fall victims to this dreadful scourge. The cause of the evil is generally overlooked. A short dry Cough is the precursor—a neglected Cold. These symptoms are deemed unimportant. Pain in the Side, Hectic and night Sweats follow, and death ends the scene.

Would you find a REMEDY FOR THE EVIL?

Here it is. The experience of more than twenty years has proved its efficacy, and thousands are rejoicing in its effects.

Case of INCIPENT CONSUMPTION.—George W. Burnett, Esq. of Newark, N. J., had suffered under the effects of a severe cold for more than a year, and in the month of August, when he would have expected to be in the best of health, he commenced using the Olosonian, or All-Healing Balsam. He raised blood at this time, complained of pain in his side and chest, and was very much debilitated by night sweats. His appetite was gone, and altogether he appeared to be rapidly sinking. He was so much relieved by the use of this remedy that by the month of November he left for Pittsburg, Pa. with every prospect of being permanently cured.

Read the following case of CONSUMPTION.—The cure was truly wonderful, and places the Olosonian, or All-Healing Balsam, at the head of the list of remedies for eradicating that dreadful disease.

George W. Hays, residing in this City, (New York) was seized with a severe cold in the early part of the summer. His cough became very troublesome and he began to raise blood. He complained of a severe pain in the chest and his breathing became so short that he could not walk any distance without stopping for breath. His night sweats reduced him very low. He was under the care of several physicians in Brooklyn, who told him they could do no good, as his disease was a settled and fixed Consumption. He moved to this city to die among his friends. He was by this time so weak that he could not walk without assistance. Although his friends had now given up all hope of his ever being restored, he commenced using the Olosonian, or All-Healing Balsam, and in a few weeks was so far restored as to be able to resume his business.

Mr. T. Luban, residing at 52 Pine street, was severely afflicted with Asthma, in consequence of having taken a severe cold in the early part of last winter. In the early part of the night he could sleep tolerably well, but towards one o'clock in the morning his Asthma became so severe that he was obliged to get up and sit for the remainder of the night leaning forward on a chair. His cough was most distressing through the day. He had a very low, hoarse, weak, almost every thing without relief. He never had a good night's rest in ten months, until he commenced taking the Olosonian or All-Healing Balsam, when he found immediate relief, and before using half a bottle of it was perfectly well, and now sleeps as quietly as he ever did in his life.

Hundreds of cases could be given to prove the efficacy of the great remedy. And it possesses a property superior to all others, viz: it does not constipate the bowels. Readers are suffering from any of the above symptoms of disease? Try this remedy. It will allay the Pain in your side and chest—put to flight the COUGH which deprives you of sweet sleep and repose; if you have Asthma, he assured there is no medicine in the world that will cure you so speedily, and it will arrest all those distressing symptoms which strike such terror to the mind and give such dreadful forebodings of an untimely and speedy dissolution.

Sold at one dollar, per bottle, by REDDING & Co. State street, Boston; and by the following appointed agents:

them. That was provoking! Resolved to recover them, he changed one of his notes—then another; and in less than ten minutes he left the room without a franc in his purse. Reflecting on the difficulty of leaving the gaming table a winner, he never played again.

ANOTHER HINT.

FRIEND GREEN—On perusing your valuable paper, of last week, an article appeared, which I think merits the attention of a few, (and I trust the remainder of that clique of) gossiping levelers, whose object is, and ever has been, to bring their neighbors on a level with themselves. I forbear calling names, but trusting that this will meet the eyes of the guilty, who instigate a certain part of this village, not many miles in the rear of a certain hill, I remain truly yours,

TEMPERANCE IN IRELAND.

Every true friend of the Christian reforms of the day, will rejoice to hear of the progress of Temperance anywhere on the face of the earth, for Christianity knows nothing of geographical lines. "Its country is the world, its countrymen all mankind." Men have drawn lines to divide the great family, and to array them against one another, but true Christianity tramples them under her feet.—Who would have thought that the Temperance cause would have received a new impulse, from the dram drinkers of a bar room in slaveholding Baltimore, and by their reformation and faithfulness, agitate the nation from South to North? Or, that Frederick Douglass, forbidden by the law of the land to learn to read, and toiling under the lash of the slave driver, with the powers of a mighty nation against him, and in favor of his master, should, in a few years, stand by the side of the great and good men, in Europe, and move large assemblies of men and women, by his eloquent appeals in behalf of Temperance and Freedom, while the doctors of divinity, and great statesmen, with but few honorable exceptions, withhold their influence? One is reminded of the words of our Saviour, "I thank thee, O Father, of Heaven and Earth, that thou hast hid these things from the wise and prudent, and revealed them unto babes; even so, Father, for so it seemeth good in thy sight."

The following is an extract from Mr. Douglass' letter, giving an account of his interview with Father Mathew. He writes from Cork, and says: "My first speech here, as well as at Dublin, was on the Temperance question. I have spoken on Temperance several times since. On the twenty-first instant, Father Mathew, the living savior of Ireland from the curse of intemperance, gave a splendid soiree, as a token of his sympathy and regard for friend Buffum and myself. There were two hundred and fifty persons present. It was decidedly the brightest and happiest company I think I ever saw anywhere. It was enough to delight any heart, not totally bereft of feeling, to look on such a company of happy faces. Among them all I saw no one that seemed to be shocked at my dark presence. On the morning after the soiree, Father Mathew invited us to breakfast with him at his own house, an honor quite unexpected, and one for which I felt unprepared. I found him living in a very humble dwelling, and in an obscure street. As I approached, he came out of his house, and met me about thirty yards from his door, and with uplifted hands, in a manner altogether peculiar to himself, and with a face beaming with benevolence, he exclaimed—'Welcome! welcome! my dear sir, to my humble abode'; at the same time, taking me cordially by the hand, he conducted me through a rough, uncarpeted passage, to a green door, leading to an uncarpeted stairway, on ascending one flight of which I found myself abruptly ushered into what appeared to be both drawing and dining room. There was no carpet on the floor, and very little furniture, of any kind, in the room; an old fashioned sideboard, a few chairs, three or four pictures, hung carelessly around the walls, comprised nearly the whole furniture of the room. The table was set when I went in—a large urn in the middle, surrounded by cups, saucers, plates, knives, forks, spoons, etc., etc., all of very plain order—rather too plain, I thought, for so great a man. His greatness, however, was not dependent on outward show, nor was it obscured from me by his plainness. It showed that he could be great, without the ordinary attractions with which men of his rank and means are generally anxious to surround themselves. The aim of his life appears to be to spread the blessings of temperance over the whole world. To accomplish this he spends no time. His time, strength, and money, are all freely given to the cause, and his success is truly wonderful. When he is at home, his house is literally surrounded with persons, who have come miles, to take the pledge. He seldom takes a meal without being interrupted by some one to take the pledge. He was called away twice, while there, to dismiss a number who had come to take the pledge. This he did with great delight.

"Cork contains one hundred thousand inhabitants—one-half this number have taken the pledge of Father Mathew. Five millions, four hundred and eighty-seven thousand, three hundred and ninety-five souls have received the pledge from him, and still the number is daily increasing by the goodness of this truly good man, who I, that I besought him to administer the pledge to me. He complied with promptness, and gave me a beautiful silver pledge. I now reckon myself, with delight, the fifth of the last five of Father Mathew's five millions, four hundred and eighty-seven thousand, three hundred and ninety-five temperance children."

The newspapers in Cork, Dublin, and other places, notice his lectures very favorably.

LETTER FROM BOSTON.

BOSTON, THURSDAY, DEC. 18, 1845.

In my letter to you two weeks since, I noticed the President's Message, and expressed an opinion that it would be well received by the American people; the result has proved the remark to be true. A large portion of the American press has commented favorably on the first American address to Congress of Mr. Polk. And it is evident from the proceedings of Congress so far, that he has a large majority of both branches to sustain him in his prominent measures. The Nestor of the House, Ex-President Adams, it is said, will stand by Mr. Polk, to the letter, in his Oregon views. The new Speaker of the House of Representatives, Dr. Davis, from Indiana, a free State, is very talented and popular, and may well feel honored, as being the first Speaker chosen from a non-slaveholding State for thirty years past. There is every prospect that the present will be strictly a business session.

This morning's mail brings the important intelligence of the admission of Texas into the Union, as a State, on the part of the House of Representatives.

tives, by a vote of one hundred and forty-one to fifty-seven. The previous question was called, and the vote taken with very little debate; an effort was made for a re-consideration, without success, and the bill passed to be engrossed. The Senate will doubtless concur, but not so summarily, as the previous question, in this body, cannot be sprung. A debate of some days may occur, on this great question of admission, and mighty talents called forth. It is not improbable that, by the first of February next, the two Senators and two Representatives from the State of Texas, will take their seats in the National Halls at Washington.

But a greater than the Texas question is on the tapis, at Washington—I mean our claim to the whole of Oregon. Resolutions are now before the Senate, urging Congress to prepare for war with Great Britain, in the contingency of her open hostility to the President's Message, which probably we shall loudly hear from by the next steamer. Great Britain may, from the tone of the Message, declare war immediately, and a fleet be on our coast before the ideas of March rest. General Cass has taken a very warlike stand in the Senate, and seems supported by a portion of both parties.

Business continues lively, in Boston, for winter, with fair prospects of 1846 exceeding in activity and extent, the business transactions of the present year.

Yours in haste,

ENGINE INTELLIGENCE.

Annexed is the statement of the judges on the part of the Vulture Engine Company relative to the trial on the 13th inst.—that of the Tiger's judges was published in the Patriot of the 13th inst.

TRIAL OF ENGINES.

We, the undersigned, committee of judges on the part of the Vulture, were somewhat surprised to see in the Patriot of last Saturday, a communication signed by the judges on the part of the Tiger, designing to impress the public with the idea that the trial, which came off on the twelfth instant, resulted in favor of the Tiger. Why was it necessary for them to publish any statement till the whole committee were consulted? We will not call in question their motive, but since they have, by their premature action, denied us the privilege of signing a proper communication with them, we will give what we know to be the true result.

First—Trial through three hundred feet of hose, tub and tub, for the space of four minutes, engines being one hundred and ninety-five feet apart—one inch and seven-eighths in favor of the Tiger.

Second—Through one hundred feet of hose, tub and tub, for the space of four minutes—seven inches and three-eighths in favor of the Vulture.

Third—The Vulture drafted from the town well, and played through two hundred and fifty feet of hose, into the Tiger, whose tub was filled within four inches of the top—the Tiger playing through two hundred feet of hose, and a one inch pipe, on distance, for the space of five minutes. At the expiration of two minutes, the Tiger began to flow over, and continued so to do during the remaining three minutes, and it was during the third minute that the Tiger threw her water the greatest distance, viz: one hundred and twenty-four feet and eight inches.

Changing positions—the Vulture's tub filled within four inches of the top—threw her water the first minute one hundred and twenty feet and six inches, and in one minute and five seconds stopped for want of water. The Tiger failed to supply her. The Vulture was obliged to stop five times, during the five minutes, for the want of water. Hence, in drafting and playing, the Vulture proved herself much the smartest engine; and on distance, we hesitate not to say, that the Vulture would have thrown water considerable the farthest, had the Tiger been able to have given her a sufficient supply. Instead, then, of the trial resulting in favor of the Tiger, the facts show, and even the Tiger's committee themselves have acknowledged to us privately, that the Vulture obtained a complete triumph.

As to the first trial we do not consider it a fair one. The Tiger company played two strokes after the gun fired to stop, and the hose leading from the engine was not raised, as agreed upon—which would have made a difference of some five or six inches in favor of the Vulture, instead of one and seven-eighths in favor of the Tiger, as brought in.

We think it due, not only to the Vulture's company, but to Mr. Thayer, whose mechanical skill has been well displayed in the power and success of the Vulture, to give a true statement of the facts, that the one-sided statement of the Tiger's committee, may not leave a wrong impression upon the public mind.

JAMES NEWCOMB, EBENEZER A. SHAW, JAMES LOVELL, ELIPIAS S. CHAPIN.

Quincy, Dec. 16th, 1845.

The following is a reply from the judges on the part of the Tiger Engine to the above statement of the Vulture judges.

ENGINE AFFAIRS.

In a published statement from the Committee appointed by the Vulture Engine Company, bearing date December sixteenth, after expressing surprise at the appearance of a communication in the last number of the Patriot from the Committee appointed by the Tiger Company, they ask—"why was it necessary for them to publish any statement till the whole Committee were consulted?" which we answer—members of the Tiger Company desired a true statement of the facts, and three of our number repaired to the Hancock House, immediately after the trial, for the express purpose of consulting the Vulture's Committee, where, after considerable search, we obtained an interview with three of them, which interview resulted in one of their number expressing his opinion in general terms favorable to the Vulture, without any reference to results previously agreed upon—the other two expressing at the time no opinion whatever. This interview was abruptly broken, the Vulture's Committee leaving us for dinner, without naming any time for any future interview; therefore, we could not do otherwise than make a simple "statement of facts," which facts they, in their communication, acknowledge.

The Vulture's Committee say, at the first trial "the Tiger company played two strokes after the gun fired to stop." If so, (which we deny,) they should, at the time, have insisted on another trial, which no one of them proposed. They now say it was not a "fair one." We say the Vulture's men remained in the Tiger's tub, till one of the men removed it, after the Tiger's breaks stopped; but we are content to abide with the decision of the Committee, "as brought in."

They also say, that "it was during the third minute that the Tiger threw her water the greatest distance." We say it was during the first minute. They also say, "Instead, then, of the trial resulting in favor of the Tiger, the facts show, and even the Tiger's Committee themselves have acknowledged to us privately, that the Vulture obtained a complete triumph." We said, and now say, "The trial resulted in favor of the Tiger, on the challenge," which was on distance.

We will close this communication, by inquiring of the Vulture's Committee, When and where did the Tiger's Committee acknowledge to you privately, that the Vulture obtained a complete triumph?

ADVERTISING & NEWSPAPER AGENCY.

V. B. PALMER, American Newspaper Subscription and Advertising Agent, No. 20, State Street, Boston, No. 30, Ann Street, New York, No. 53, Pine Street, Philadelphia, and Corner of Calvert and Baltimore Streets, Baltimore, is agent for the Quincy Patriot in those cities. Merchants and others who wish to advertise or subscribe, can learn the terms, etc., on application at either of the above offices, where a copy of the paper may be found.

GOODRICH'S NATIONAL GEOGRAPHY. This book, by HON. S. G. GOODRICH, well known as "Peter Parley," is likely to be of great advantage to the cause of thorough instruction in geography. It is designed wholly for teaching, and must greatly abridge the labor of both master and pupil; while the latter will be more rapidly and thoroughly taught. A most happy invention has been attached to the work—a globe map, which answers the purpose of an artificial globe. This is to be held in the hand, while the pupil goes on with the description of continents, oceans, islands, countries, etc. From this the shape and position of the leading geographical features of the earth are to be learned.—The evident result must be, that the pupil will obtain an indelible impress of the great outlines of the earth's surface. How much fruitless toil and study will be thus saved, and how completely will the difficulty, arising from the use of disjointed maps, giving disjointed images to the mind, be overcome!

The descriptive features of the work are prepared with great spirit and simplicity. The mechanical execution is superior to that of any school book within our knowledge. The work is especially worthy the attention of instructors, who will find it to render the teaching of geography far more easy and effective than it has hitherto been.

SOCIAL BALL. We notice that invitations have been extended for a social dance, at the Hancock House, in this town, on the twenty-fourth instant. The music for the occasion will be excellent and beyond praise—Flagg's Band, of five pieces. The managers are known as being energetic and persevering, and consequently every thing, so far as they are interested, will be arranged to meet the acceptance of all present. Tickets, two dollars.

PREPARE FOR COLD WEATHER. S. Stetson Bates, Congress street, Boston, whose advertisement appears in the columns of the Patriot, has a large assortment of the various kinds of stoves, and especially of all the different patterns of air-tights. His merited celebrity, as the depot for obtaining stoves, courteousness in making sales, determination to sell at a small advance, and spirit of enterprise to keep a large assortment on hand, render a call highly advantageous to the purchaser, who wishes to get suited, not only in the article and price, but to deal with an honest man.

INDIANA UNITED STATES SENATOR. The Hon. Jesse D. Bright, (dem.), has been elected by the Indiana Legislature United States Senator for six years from the fourth of March last.

GOVERNOR OF VIRGINIA. William Smith, Esq., of Fauquier, (dem.), has been elected Governor of Virginia, for three years, from the first of January, 1846. His majority over all others was twenty-eight.

A NAVAL HERO DEAD. Commodore Jesse D. Elliott, commandant at the Navy Yard at Philadelphia, died on Wednesday evening of last week, in that city. The Commodore has been ill for some time of a complication of disorders, including a disease of the heart, and was in the sixty-second year of his age. He has played a conspicuous part in our naval history, and rendered important service to his country. His death is a loss to the service, as well as to the public and his friends, by whom he was much respected.

PROVISION STORE. As will be observed by his advertisement, Mr. William Frye has taken the provision stand lately occupied by George W. Kenison, in this town, where it is his intention to keep all the varieties usually found in a Meat and Vegetable Market. His efforts to accommodate and disposition to please should command for him a liberal patronage.

ARRESTED. Albert J. Tirrell, the alleged murderer of Mrs. Maria A. Bickford, at Boston, a few weeks since, has been arrested in New Orleans, and committed to await the requisition from the authorities of this State. It seems he had shipped at New York, as a sailor, under an assumed name, which fact came to the knowledge of some of the police officers in that city, after his departure, and they immediately communicated with the police officers in New Orleans, who boarded the ship on her arrival, and thus secured him without trouble. It is said he had with him a six-barreled revolving pistol, loaded with powder and balls, and each of them capped. It is stated that a Jarvis Vining, formerly of Weymouth, and who was acquainted with him, recognized Tirrell, when summoned to the examination.

DOOR SPRING. We have had placed upon our office door, one of Ellis' Improved and Patented Invisible Door Springs, which is an excellent article, and far superior to any thing of the kind that has fallen under our observation. It is a spring that, by its self-action, will close the door of a house, without presenting to the eye an unsightly appearance; and it is certainly a convenient, cheap and serviceable invention. Isaac S. Clough, formerly of this town, is the proprietor, and George W. Kenison has been appointed an agent for Quincy, Weymouth, Hingham, Plymouth, and the intervening towns, to whom orders must be addressed, and he will fit them to doors if desired.

CONGRESS—TEXAS AND OREGON. It will be seen by the letter from our Boston correspondent that Texas has been admitted into the Union by the House of Representatives. The Senate has also passed unanimously, the resolutions of inquiry offered by Gen. Cass of Michigan, relative to the naval and military power of the country and the condition of the fortifications. He thinks it is time to prepare for the Oregon dispute in season.

SHIPWRECK. The barque Zamora from New Orleans for Boston was driven ashore on Monument Point, about four miles below Plymouth, on Tuesday morning last. The vessel had been built but a few months. There was an insurance on the vessel and cargo. The chief mate and three colored seamen were drowned—the others escaped.

The following letter from Dr. Brigham, of Lowell, Mass., but speaks the uniform language of hundreds of other Physicians, who have tried, and therefore know how to appreciate Jayne's Expecto-rant.

LOWELL, Mass., Jan. 27, 1844.

Dr. David Jayne: Dear Sir—I have used your medicine, (so universally known by the name of Jayne's Expecto-rant) in my practice for a number of years, and can most truly say, that I have been more successful in the use of that as a mild, safe and thorough EXPECTORANT, than of any which I have ever used. It is the best for the following obvious reasons. It does not give in proper doses, occasion a disagreeable nausea. It does not weaken the lungs and prostrate the system like most other Expectorants in common use, nor does it abate the appetite of the patient, like other nauseating medicines, which have been used by the faculty for ages gone by. I remain, yours, &c.,

GREAT ENGLISH REMEDY.

For Coughs, Colds, Asthma, and Consumption.

The great and only remedy for Coughs, Colds, Asthma, and CONSUMPTION, is the HUNGARIAN BALM OF LIFE, discovered by the celebrated Dr. Bueland of London, England, and introduced into the United States under the immediate superintendence of the inventor.

The extraordinary success of this medicine, in the case of pulmonary diseases, warrants the American agent in soliciting for treatment the worst possible cases that can be found in the community—cases that seek relief in vain from any of the common remedies of the day, and have been given up by the most distinguished Physicians, as confirmed and incurable. The Hungarian Balm has cured and will cure, the most desperate cases. It is no quack nostrum, but a standard English medicine, of known and established efficacy.

Every family in the United States should be supplied with Buchan's Hungarian Balm of Life, not only to counteract the consumptive tendencies of the climate, but to be used as a preventive medicine in all cases of Colds, Coughs, Spitting of Blood, pain in the side and chest, irritation and soreness of the Lungs, Bronchitis, difficulty of breathing, hectic fever, night sweats, emaciation and general debility, Asthma, Influenza, Hooping Cough and Croup.

It is sold in large bottles, at $1 per bottle, with full directions for the restoration of Health.

Pamphlets, containing a mass of English and American certificates, and other evidence, showing the unequalled merits of this Great English Remedy, may be obtained of the agents, gratuitously.

It is said that by rubbing red hot iron with the horn of a sheep, it will be coated with a durable and shining black varnish.

Of all the fierce and fell passions which afflict humanity, none can compare with lust. It rushes to indulgence, reckless of consequences, trampling on all law, human and divine, prostrating in its mad career, like the dire sirocco of the desert, all that is valued, beautiful and lovely. Its demoralizing influence is felt through all the ramifications of society; inducing more suffering than any other individual cause. Generations yet unborn cry from their nothingness—stop thy abuses!

What is called the ash pone, the hoe cake, or the baked corn bread of Virginia, can be made of Northern corn. No laboring class in the world are healthier and stronger than the slaves who live on this bread, with pork and bacon.

It is a part of humanity for all to act as if members of a common compact for mutual safety. Every one should strive with all endeavor to do his share in introducing and making known every means of rescue from any common danger. We feel it so especial and marked a duty, that for our part we ask our fellow beings that are afflicted with any disease of the Lungs, Liver or Chest, to use the Health Restorative, which is constantly advertised in our columns. It is a perfect safeguard in those diseases, and will never do the injury of disappointing the sick. Let every one assist in spreading it wherever such complaints are known. 35

Recent alterations at this place have increased the accommodations for the exhibition and sale of such goods, and greater attention will be given to this business the present season than heretofore. It has been the aim of the proprietor to obtain an extensive assortment of

VESTINGS.

Of every description; FIGURED SILK AND SATIN, remarkably cheap; a good variety of Cashmere and Valencia. A Vest will come from $1.75 to $3.50, made to order. The liberal patronage I have received since I came to Quincy, has enabled me to open as choice a selection of Goods as ever was introduced into this market.

For my customers and the public my sincere thanks for their liberal patronage, and I respectfully invite them to call and examine my present stock of Goods. I can make garments considerably cheaper, as well and of as good cloth as can be had in any Store in the city of Boston. The reason I can do these things are, in the first place I am prepared to cut and make a garment with any man that can be named there, in the next place, I can purchase my goods as cheap as any man can do, and I cut and superintend my own work. These are facts that are worth the consideration of those with wish to get their garments where they can get them cheapest and best, and to suit them in every respect to no sale. I have adopted the one price system. I am fully convinced it is the most honest way of doing business, and my terms are Cash.

VESTINGS, EVERY DESCRIPTION NOW IN USE.

All persons wishing to clothe the outer man would find it to their advantage to give us an early call.

N. B. People passing through this village from the neighboring towns to visit the famous city, (where they are liable to be caught in traps equal to mock quincy in New York city,) would find it to their advantage to call and examine Mr. Russell's style of cutting. To those acquainted with the abilities of Mr. Russell as an artist, it is superfluous to say one word, but from all unacquainted we would solicit an early call to examine his new style of Pattern or Overcoat, designed for Fall or Winter wear. Feeling confident that he will give satisfaction we recommend to the public.

JOHN RUSSELL.

Quincy, Oct. 4.

Tailoring.

I WOULD respectfully intimate to my friends and the public, that I continue to occupy rooms in the Store of E. Packard. Feeling grateful for past favors, I would solicit a continuance of that patronage so liberally bestowed since I commenced business. Being regularly in receipt of the latest and most approved English, French and American styles, with the abilities of first rate workmen, (employing none else) enables me to produce a garment every way desirable in point of style and finish.

People are requested to call and examine for themselves, and not be enjoin by the rignarole advertisements, for "by square and rule works many a fool." My theory of cutting being entirely different from that used by country tailors, aids me in giving a perfect fit to the most imperfect form.

All asked is a fair trial and no favors.

C. BRINCKERHOFF'S

HEALTH RESTORATIVE.

THE medicine, when first introduced, some years since, met with opposition and deadly aimed hostility from ignorant and vain declaimers, who threw the date of venem at it, classing it among the nostrums of the age. Those fruitless attempts to injure this great medicine, have now in a great measure passed away; the base individuals who uttered them have sunk away, conscious of their mistaken zeal, and left the Restorative to proudly rank itself as the first and greatest medicine of the age. Consumption, that veritable destroyer of the beautiful and lovely of our kind, Liver Complaints, Coughs and Colds, Pains in the Breast and Side, and their concomitant evils, are rendered harmless and inert, when met by a prompt and efficient use of the Restorative. Most opportunely, the efforts of the Proprietor to place his invaluable compound before the public, are now in the way of being crowned with success, and in every place where the angel of destruction, under the cloak of disease, can be found, the Health Restorative shall drive him afar, and raise up the suffering mortals, and open to them the joys of a state of renewed health and energies. What a blessing to the nearly bereaved relatives, to witness the opportune aid instilling new life into the almost deceased dear one! Heed the voice of earnest and brotherly exhortation and entreaty, and resort at once, while there is yet time, to that best of all earth's treasures to the almost hopeless sick one, the Health Restorative. The following certificate is from Dr. Chilton, the well known New York chemist.

"I have analyzed a bottle of medicine called 'C. Brinckerhoff's Health Restorative,' and find that it not only contains Mercury, or any other metallic preparation, nor opium in any of its forms. It is composed of vegetable matter entirely."

For the Quincy Patriot.
WASHINGTON.
Pierced with delight, O Washington!
Thou Godlike son of Mars,
Who purged the fields of Christendom—
Surpassed the raging wars,
When darkest clouds of tyranny
Hung o'er our mountain's brow,
The genius of sweet liberty,
Sat weeping far below.

Boldly her banner he unfurled,
Forth streaming in her light;
Bade tyranny to hell be hurled,
To shades of endless night;
Then led us through in infancy
Into the field of blood,
And ragged with thoughts of tyranny,
Patrolled the dreary wood.

Great Hector of the western world
With conquering sword and shield,
He taught the tyrant's flag to curl—
His marshalled hosts to yield.
Blessings of peace to us have given
True garlands in our land,
And Liberty, sweet boon of Heaven,
Walks with us hand in hand.

RETROSPECT.
Another year is closing o'er us,
Passing to that bourne
Where slumber those that have preceded,
Never to return.
Of those that were beloved and cherished,
But a year ago,
Of all that made earth vocal then,
Oh! where are millions now?

They are gathered to their fathers—
Ask you, "where are they?"
Underneath the grassy hillsides,
In the church-yard, old and gray;
Where the winds above are moaning,
In their quiet beds they lie,
With the cold earth on their bosoms,
And their faces to the sky.

Oh! the ages that have vanished,
Since the murdered Abel died,
Every age has seen its millions
Buried by the victims side.
Oh! the nations gone forever,
And the tribes that are no more,
Not a dirge to them remaineth,
Save the surge upon the shore.

By the walls of olden Carthage,
By the sunny isle of Greece,
In the solemn tombs of Egypt,
Sleep the men of old in peace
In the hoary mountain passes,
Where for liberty they fell,
In the dim and mystic forest,
In the quiet rural dell.

In the churches of old England,
Where the echoes now awake,
That arose upon the stillness,
When the holy martyrs spake;
By the frozen shores of Sweden,
By the blushing hills of France,
By the moorland and the mountain,
Over Scotland's brown expanse.

On each hill, in every valley
Of our native land,
Beneath the murmur of the waves,
Upon the ocean's strand;
Yet the earth amid these changes,
Smiles, as on that morn,
When the angels sang together,
And the stars were born.

"I AM NOT OLD."
I am not old—though years have cast
Their shadows on my way;
I am not old—though youth has passed
On rapid wings away.
For, in my heart a fountain flows,
And round it pleasant thoughts repose;
And sympathies and feelings high,
Spring like the stars on Evening's sky.

I am not old—Time may have set
His signet on my brow,
And some faint furrows there have met,
Which Care may deepen now,
Yet Love, fond Love, a chaplet weaves,
Of fresh, young buds and verdant leaves;
And still in fancy I can twine
Thoughts, sweet as flowers, that once were mine.

ANECDOTES

A gentleman having a bad leg, was told by his physician that he must not drink, or the liquor would run into it. One day the doctor called upon him, and found him with his bottle before him, out of which he had been drinking pretty freely.
"Ah!" exclaimed the physician, "what did I tell you?"
"All right, doctor," said the invalid, pointing to his feet, which were elevated upon a high table—"it can't run down my leg!"

A young married couple riding home from church, out West, on a rainy day, the husband looking up and perceiving the clouds breaking away, said, "I hope we shall have a little sun." "Oh, la, my dear," simpered the innocent wife, "I would much prefer a little daughter!"

A physician, who ordered his patient to take wine and dark, was surprised, on calling the next time, to find him on the floor, with a bottle of Port, and yelping like a house cur.

"Papa, one of my school-fellows says, his brother wears mustaches; what are they?" "Mustaches, my son, are little bunches of hair worn on the lip by certain dandies, as a substitute for brains." "Well, papa, those who wear mustaches, what are called hair-brained people?"

"Mother," says a square built archer, about five years old, "why don't my teacher make me monitor sometimes?" "I can lick every boy in my class but one."

Worms Kill Thousands.

CHILDREN are most subject to them, but persons of all ages are liable to be affected with them. Bad health, paleness about the lips, flushed cheeks, picking at the nose, wasting away, leanness, pain in the bowels, joints or limbs, disturbed sleep, frightful dreams, nervousness, and sometimes a voracious appetite, are among the symptoms of worms. Many are doctored for months for some other imaginary disease, when one box of Sherman's Worm Lozenges would effect a cure. Dr. Ryan, corner of Prince street and the Bowery, cured a man of worms that was reduced to a skeleton, and by only one box of Sherman's Lozenges; he is now as fat as an Alderman. The Hon. B. B. Rensselaer has cured the cure of one of his children by them. The sale of over two millions of boxes has fully tested them. They are the only infallible worm destroying medicine known. What family will be without them?

Consumption, Coughs, Colds, Whooping Coughs, Asthma, and all affections of the lungs, will find a healing value in Sherman's Cough Lozenges. They saved the Rev. Richard De Forest, the Rev. Mr. Streeter, Jonathan Howarth, Esq., and that worthy old man, Leonard, from the consumptive's grave. They cured in one day the Rev. Mr. Dunbar, the Rev. M. Hancock, Wm. H. Attee, Esq., of distressing coughs. They are the pleasantest cough medicine and cure the commonest of all known diseases.

Headache, Sea-sickness and indigestion, relieved in from five to ten minutes by Sherman's Camphor Lozenges. Persons attending crowded rooms or travelling will find them to impart buoyancy of spirits and relieve their energies. Those suffering from too free living will find a few of the lozenges to dispel the horrors and looseness of spirits. Mr. Knuth of the Sunday Mercury, has repeatedly cured himself of severe headache by them. Captain Chadwick, of the packet ship Wellington, has witnessed their efficacy in a great many cases of sea sickness. They operate like a charm upon the agitated or shattered nerves, as Sherman's Poor Man's Plaster does upon the Rheumatism, lumbago, pain or weakness in the side, back, breast, or any part of the body. Mr. H. G. Duggins, 30 Ann Street, Henry R. Goulding, 55 1/2 Chatham street, Moses J. Henriques, Esq., and a multitude of others have experienced the wonderful effects of these Plasters. Price only 1/2 cent each. It is necessary to see that you get the genuine "Poor Man's Plaster" and Plasters, as there are many worthless articles attempted to be palmed off in place of them, by those who would trifle with your life for a shilling.

Dr. Sherman's warehouse is at 106 Nassau street, New York. Also, sold by Redding & Co., 8 State street, Boston; J. Babcock and M. D. Plummer, Milton; Eli Thayer, Weymouth; King & Nash and N. Dyer, Abington; R. Gleason, Dorchester; Wm. A. Torrey, South Scituate; E. Dubois, Randolph; and by Mrs. E. HAYDEN, rear of the Stone Temple, Quincy. June 28. 1f

FOR
Consumption, Asthma, Dyspeptic Consumption, Spitting of Blood, Bronchitis, Difficulty of Breathing, Hoarseness, Influenza, Croup, Colds, Pain in the Breast and Side, Dyspepsia, and various affections of the Stomach and Liver.

Folger's Olosanion, or All-Healing Balm.
IT is acknowledged that more persons die of Consumption than of any other disease. It is estimated that in the United States over THIRTY THOUSAND PERSONS annually fall victims to this dreadful scourge. The cause of the evil is generally overlooked. A short dry Cough is the precursor—or a neglected cold. These symptoms are deemed unimportant. Pain in the Side, Hectic and Night Sweats follow, and disease ends the scene.

Would you find a REMEDY FOR THE EVIL? Here it is. The experience of more than twenty years has proved its efficacy, and thousands are rejoicing in its effects.

Case of INCIPENT CONSUMPTION—George W. Barnett, Esq. of Newark, N. J., had suffered under the effects of a severe cold for more than a year, and in the month of August, when his Cough had reduced him so much that he feared he would die, he commenced using the Olosanion. He raised blood at this time, complained of pain in his side and chest, and was very much debilitated by night sweats. His appetite was gone, and altogether he appeared to be rapidly sinking. He was so much relieved by the use of this remedy that by the month of November he left for Pittsburg, Pa. with every prospect of being permanently cured.

Read the following case of CONSUMPTION—The cure was truly a wonderful one and places the 'Olosanion or All-Healing Balm,' at the head of the list of remedies for eradicating that dreadful disease.

George W. Hays, residing in this city, (New York) was seized with a severe cold in the early part of the summer. His Cough became very troublesome and he began to raise blood. He complained of a severe pain in the chest and his breathing became so short that he could not walk any distance without stopping for breath. His night sweats reduced him very low. He was under the care of several physicians in Brooklyn, who told him they could do no good, as his disease was a settled and fixed Consumption. He removed to this city to die among his friends. He was by this time so weak that he could not walk without assistance. Although his friends had now given up all hope of his ever being any better, he commenced using the 'Olosanion, or All-Healing Balm,' and in a few weeks was so far restored as to be able to resume his business.

Mr. T. Luban, residing at 52 Pine street, was severely afflicted with Asthma, in consequence of having taken a severe cold in the early part of last winter. In the early part of the night he could sleep tolerably well, but towards one o'clock in the morning his Asthma became so severe, that he was obliged to get up and sit for the remainder of the night leaning against a chair. His Cough was most distressing throughout the day. He had, during his sickness, tried almost every thing without relief. He never had a good night's rest in ten months, until he commenced taking the Olosanion or All-Healing Balm, when he found immediate relief, and before using half a bottle of it was perfectly well, and now sleeps as quietly as he ever did in his life.

Hundreds of cases could be given to prove the efficacy of the great remedy. And it possesses a property superior to all others, viz: it does not constipate the bowels. Reader, are you suffering under any of the above symptoms of disease? Try this remedy—it will allay the Pain in your side and chest—put to flight the COUGH which deprives you of sweet slumber and repose; if you have Asthma, be assured there is no medicine in the world that will cure you so speedily, and it will arrest all those distressing symptoms which strike such terror to the mind and give such dreadful forebodings of an untimely and speedy dissolution.

Sold at one dollar, per bottle, by REDDING & Co. State street, Boston; and by the following appointed agents:

Mrs. Hayden, Quincy; J. Babcock, Milton; M. D. Plummer, Milton; Eli Thayer, Weymouth; Wm. A. Torrey, do; King & Nash, Abington; N. N. Dyer, do; A. E. Dubois, Randolph; R. Gleason, Dorchester. 1f August 16.

CLICKENERS' SUGAR COATED VEGETABLE PILLS.

A MEDICINAL preparation is herein announced which has been long desired, and sought for, and which the public must one day and acknowledge the advantage of. It is a purgative composed of COATED SUGAR, so that it leaves no taste whatever of its internal ingredients. In fact the medicine is so entirely disguised, that if a person were to swallow the pills without being informed that they were, he would believe them to be simply lumps of pure sugar, nor could he afterwards, unless by his great purgative effect, suspect that he had been taking medicine, for these pills are so skillfully prepared, that they do not irritate the bowels; and thus the patient who takes them avoids two evils which attend all other purgative medicines, namely: nausea and pain. Medicine administered in all other sweet forms has the disadvantage of being mixed with the sugar, and hence produces a mingled flavor, which, to most persons, is more disagreeable than unadulterated bitterness. In these pills this is altogether avoided; the sugar and the medicine being entirely distinct from each other, so that the former must be thoroughly removed before the latter can manifest itself to the taste. It is universally known that nearly all diseases originate with impurity of blood. Pure blood is therefore essential to health. We must not, however, wait until the blood is impure, for then it takes time—and that time passes in ill health—to rectify it; but when the slightest impurification of the system is indicated by costiveness, or any other sign, it admonishes us that superfluities are gathering in the system, which should at once be got rid of; for the removal of the chyle (from which the blood is formed) in a healthy state, and purity of blood must be the result. This fact, as stated, is universally known; but people are so averse to medicine, that, unless the case is urgent, they prefer the disease to the cure, until an impaired constitution, or a fit of sickness, relieves them of their folly of conduct. Still they are not aware that the medicine, if administered in almost all its forms, was never, as disgusting as it is now here. If these pills are as described, the public will freely and gladly patronize them; and the proprietor merely asks a trial, which he is sure of receiving, to prove that he assumes no merit for them which they do not fully possess.

Clickener's Sugar-coated Vegetable Purgative Pills are prepared and sold, wholesale and retail, for exportation, by C. V. CLICKENER & Co., Chemists, at the wholesale and retail drug warehouse, No. 78 and 81 Battery street, New York; and at the cent per box, with full directions, and sold by the following list of Agents

J. Babcock, M. D. Plummer, Milton; Eli Thayer, William A. Torrey, Wm. Nash, A. Raymond, Weymouth; R. N. Dyer, N. Dyer, Abington; R. Gleason, R. F. To'nan, Dorchester; R. F. Randolph, Mrs. E. HAYDEN (rear of Stone Temple); and GEORGE H. LOCKE, Quincy. 1f June 28.

THE PROBLEM.

CHAPTER I.

Well, George, here is the money I borrowed you some time ago. I take shame of myself to have kept you out of it so long after the time I had fixed for the re-payment; somehow or other my savings don't slip through my fingers.

I could have wished, for your own sake, you had been more punctual; but no apology is necessary, as the delay has not occasioned me any inconvenience.

You are very good natured. I am afraid not; for if I had wanted the money, I should not have scrupled to ask for it at the promised time.

This conversation passed between two clerks in a mercantile house; they were both of the same age, neither was there much difference in their capacity; but Edward, having been in the counting house several years, was now in the receipt of a salary of one thousand a year. George, as his junior in point of time, received only six hundred.

After the last remark of George, Edward remained silent a few minutes, apparently in deep thought. It was some minutes after the usual hour of closing the counting-house, and George was preparing to go.

Ah! you are going home. Well, I sometimes feel as if I could wish I had a home to go to, for a bachelor's lodging don't quite come up to my idea of the word.

Why don't you marry, then? And how am I to support a family? when I can hardly pay my own way without borrowing. And yet—Here he relapsed into thoughtful silence.

You seem to be in some trouble. If so, and I can be useful to you—

No; I am only solving a problem. I did not know you had a turn for mathematics.

I believe you will prove the abler mathematician. But I give up for the present. Well, I wish I knew where to go.

Suppose you go home with me, for once.

Well, I don't care if I do. I had partly made up my mind to go to a party; but I am pretty well used up with last night's jollification, and my head aches consumedly.

Well, I will give you a cup of tea, to set it to rights.

Edward did not anticipate much gratification in passing an evening with his friend. He is married, poor fellow, thought he, and I have heard has three or four little ones. How can they all live on six hundred a year, while I can hardly on a thousand? I dare say I shall find the whole family crowded into a little back room, on a second or third floor, in some dirty street, furnished with a rag carpet, a pine table covered with oil cloth, four or five wood chairs, and as many ragamuffin children; and, perhaps to complete this picture of comfort, "the mother of the Gracchi" at the wash tub. Oh, laugh! but I am in for it once.

They passed several streets, and also several of what an unsophisticated stranger might have supposed to be streets, had they not been labelled at the corners with the unpredominant and unaristocratic appellations of "squares," or "places." We are democratic people, and especially the aristocracy of wealth is unknown among us, or ought to be.

At last George paused before a decent two-story brick-front house, in a respectable looking street.

Here we are, at last. This is a pretty long walk from the counting-house; but you know rents are so high down town, that a man in moderate circumstances can hardly get a room that way, except in some street of doubtful reputation.

Edward's apprehension was realized in one respect, for they ascended to the second floor.

He was somewhat relieved, however, to find that his friend led to the front room; and when the door was thrown open, he was taken by surprise, for the apartment was furnished with neatness, and even with elegance. A lady, very neatly attired, was engaged in needlework, at the time George opened the door; and a handsome little boy, seated near her, was reading to her. This looks like comfort, thought Edward. He was introduced, and received with courtesy.

Where are your little ones? he inquired of George.

Don't you hear them romping and laughing in the back room? I will call them in.

No, if you please, we won't disturb them. I would rather step there with you, to look on their diversions.

With all my heart, said the pleased father, giving Edward rather undue credit for an interest in children. In fact, finding they also occupied the back room, Edward wished to see how far this circumstance explained the neatness of the parlor. No doubt, thought he, they have to crowd a great deal of dirt and discomfort into one room, to keep the other nice. But he was mistaken. The back room, though less elegantly furnished than the front, exhibited an appearance of neatness and comfort.

Some might have objected to the litter of playthings scattered about the floor by the children; but for our own part, we think it spoke of comfort, more than all the rest.

And all the children were well dressed, thought Edward. They returned to the room. Edward had already noticed, with some surprise, a handsome book-case; and he now went up to examine its contents. He expected to find little but shilling literature. The collection proved to be not very extensive, but, so far as it went, was composed of the standard works of English, American and French literature, in the best editions, and neatly bound.

This appears to be a valuable collection. Too valuable, perhaps, for my means. But this is my besetting weakness. I am an epicure in books, and can no more enjoy a favorite book miserably got up, than an alderman can enjoy his favorite dish miserably cooked.

I commend your taste; but it must have cost you considerable to gratify it.

Why, if I had been told the sum total of the cost of such a collection, at first, I believe I might have been a little alarmed; however, it has been made so gradually, that I have hardly been aware of the expense.

Tea was now announced. There had been no time for extraordinary preparation, yet the table was furnished with plenty and elegance, and Edward enjoyed the repast far more than his last night's extensive riot. After tea, the conversation became general. Edward happened to speak of the late oratorio, but in a moment secretly blamed himself for alluding to an entertainment he could not suppose they could be acquainted with. He found, however, in the course of conversation, that they were familiar with all the higher order of public amusements. By some occasional prattle with the children, he perceived they were pretty well educated. He inquired what school they attended, and found that it was one that not only bore a high reputation, but charged a high price.

As he rose to take his leave, he thankfully accepted the invitation to repeat his visit. His friend, on lighting him down, observed an air of deep abstraction on his face; and as they stood in the door, asked him if his headache was still troublesome.

Oh, no! it is entirely dissipated. How pleasant the evening has been! By the by, excuse me for asking, have you any source of income beyond the counting-house?

Not a farthing. May I know why you ask? I will tell you to-morrow, after counting-hours. What an inexplicable mystery!

CHAPTER II.

The next day the friends remained in the counting-house after the usual hours of closing, for the purpose of conversation.

I have been thinking, said George, of your inquiry last evening, and inclined to suppose from it that you had some idea of suggesting an increase of my salary.

You give me too much credit for good intentions. The object of my inquiry was merely in the expectation of a solution to a problem; but your answer only made it more intricate.

Cannot I assist you? I have dipped a little into Euclid.

I believe you can, without the help of algebra or geometry; and I now request you will, for I am fairly at a non-plus.

Well, I will see what I can do, said George, taking up a slate and pencil.

Well, in the first place, said Edward, I understand that you have no source of income beyond your salary of six hundred a year; out of which you pay a pretty good rent, so far as I judge from your accommodations.

Only a hundred and fifty.

And that leaves just four hundred and fifty for all your other expenses. You have a wife and three children to provide for. Your house is well furnished; your family are well dressed; your table is well provided; your children are well educated. You do not appear to deny yourself any rational and elegant amusement; and in one respect you even indulge in a luxury of taste. Nay, you have been able to oblige me with a considerable loan, and to wait patiently for its return. Is not this all true?

I thankfully admit it.

On the other hand, I have no one to provide for but myself, and my salary is a thousand a year. Yet somehow I am continually getting in embarrassment, find nothing saved at the year's end, and on looking back do not find that I have realized more enjoyment, nor as much as you appear to enjoy. Your six hundred appears to be more than my thousand; there is the problem.

And you have applied to the right quarter for a solution, for it is one that I have had occasion to make out for myself. In my bachelor days I found my expenses exceeding my income, and was obliged to deny myself some indulgence of my more refined tastes, by a scarcity of funds. Still, I never thought of the practicability of a better state of affairs, till I happened to see a lady whose amiable qualities engaged my affections. It was obvious even to me, that before inviting her to share my fortunes, I ought to have some fortune to share. But where was it to come from? I applied for an increase of salary, but without success. I then began to consider whether I could not reduce my expenses, and for the next three months kept an account of them, living at my usual rate. At the end of that time, I examined the account. I found that for board and clothing, I had not expended more than was reasonable and proper, and that the amount of those items fell far short of my other expenses.

Pray, what were they?

Cigars, wines, mint juleps, standing treats. Oh! I begin to understand.

I now seriously examined myself how far any of these items was a necessary expenditure, and how far they had contributed to my real enjoyment. I was compelled to acknowledge that I had not made, nor deserved to make, any real friends, by treating them to what each could have provided for himself for a couple of shillings, while the aggregate expense had emptied my pockets; and the enjoyment had generally been marred by riot, quarreling, and subsequent sickness. Satisfied on this point, I at once cut off some heavy items of expenditure, but still indulged in what I considered an innocent enjoyment, and required by the usage of society. One evening, however, as I was sauntering through Broadway, undecided which way to go, I observed a number of gentlemen and ladies entering the Tabernacle, and thought I would look in to see what was going on. A gentleman had just begun his lecture. After a vivid description of the evils of intemperance, he made a sudden and startling appeal to the moderate drinker. I felt an irresistible conviction that I had not done my duty either to myself or others. When he concluded, several, at his invitation, stepped forward and signed the pledge; and I did not hesitate to follow their example. I little thought that my Julia, whose absence from home had occasioned my being abroad that evening, was a witness of this action. Released from the customary drains on my pocket, I soon found that I could live within my income. I now offered myself, and was accepted. Some time after, in a confidential conversation, I learned from Julia, that her consent never would have been given but for my recent reformation; that she never could have been persuaded to entrust her happiness to one who stood on that slippery brink of intemperance known by the name of moderate drinking. And, verily mine has been a rich reward. Every thing has prospered in her care. She is prudent without meanness, neat without parade, cheerful without folly, and pious without sullenness. And then—

Say no more. The problem has been solved to my satisfaction; and from this hour I am determined to profit by it.

And we trust some of those who read this story, may adopt the same resolution.

THE 'MUDDLED' MAN.

The following is afloat, without the owner's name attached. It is a capital sketch, anyhow, and will repay a perusal:

"It is most amusing," said Richard Mervyn, as he relinquished the attempt to rise from the gutter at the corner of — and — streets. "It is really astonishing how soon this dreadful climate of America brings on old age. I shall never survive to get home and write a book about the place—never! Here I am, six feet two without my stockings, sprawling in a dirty republican gutter, without being able to help myself out of it. There is a lamp winking in my face as if it wants to laugh, and would, if it had a mouth; and a big brute of a dog just nosed me, to see whether I was good to eat. What a country! What gutters! and what liquor! I took only nine smaller of whiskey, and what with that and premature old age, I verily believe I am assassinated—I'm a gone chicken!"

Mr. Mervyn now clamored so loudly that assistance soon came.

"Silence there!—what's the matter?"

"Matter yourself—I'm being done, or as some people say, I'm doing. The march of mind has tripped, and Richard Mervyn is too deep for himself. Help me out—gently—there. Ain't I in a pretty pickle? This is what the doctors call gutta serena, isn't it?"

"When I was at school the boys would have called you a guttural."

"They wouldn't have known much grammar if they did. I'm liquid. See me drip."

"Oh! ho!" said the watch, "don't try to be funny; I know you well enough, now you have washed your face. You're the chap that locked me up in my box once, and when I burst open the door, you knocked me heels over head, and legged it."

"That's me. I did that thing. How do you like the ups and downs of public life? Isn't variety charming?"

"If it wasn't that I'm a public functionary, and mustn't give way to my feelings, I'd break your cocoanut, and ease my mind by doing as I was done by. I'll make an example of you, however. You're my prisoner. Halla Cysla to the watch 'us. That's the Dutch for being took up."

"Well, give us your arm. Don't be afraid of the mud. Gutter mud is very wholesome—look at the pigs, how fat it makes 'em; and if you like fat pork, why shouldn't you like what makes pork fat? So—so—steady. Now I'll tell you all about 't'other night. I was passing your box in a friendly promiscuous sort of a way, I thought you were asleep, or had run down, and I turned the key to wind you up. If a watch ain't wound up, it can't either keep good time, or even go."

"Whether your name be Walker, or not, you must stop."

"Not without a go-cart you can't force me to go—I'm a legal tender and you must take me. Haven't I got an office, or at least a public situation here on these steps? If I must go, it must be on the Yankee principle of rotation; bring me a wheel-barrow? Reform me out regularly."

The wheel-barrow was procured, and away they went.

"So we go," said Mervyn, "Charley's making a barrow night of me; gently over the stones! I don't like bumpers except when I get them of porter. This is the way to Wheeling—hurra, cart before the horse!"

Arriving at the watch-house, he insisted on being wheeled up stairs, and styled the place a barrowial castle.

"I'm a modest man," said he, "and no stairer. If I can't have a ride up, I think myself entitled to a draw-back."

So saying, he attempted to escape, but was soon caught, being, as he said, "like Goldsmith's works, beautiful chased." The punster was carried aloft, and the next morning, sober and penitent, paid his tipsy fine and carriage hire, with a doleful countenance.

SIGNS.

Solomon said, many centuries ago: "Even a child is known by his doings, whether his work be pure and whether it be right."

Some people seem to think that children have no character at all. On the contrary, an observing eye sees in these young creatures the signs of what they are likely to be for life.

When I see a little boy slow to go to school, and glad of every excuse to neglect his book, I think it a sign that he will be a dunce.

When I see a boy in haste to spend every penny as soon as he gets it, I think it a sign that he will be a spendthrift.

When I see a boy hoarding up his pennies, and unwilling to part with them for any good purpose, I think it a sign that he will be a miser.

When I see a boy or girl always looking out for themselves, and disliking to share good things with others, I think it a sign that the child will grow up a very selfish person.

When I see boys and girls often quarrelling, I think it a sign that they will be violent and hateful men and women.

When I see a boy who never prays, I think it a sign that he will be a profane and profligate man.

When I see a little boy willing to taste strong drink, I think it a sign that he will be a drunkard.

When I see a child obedient to its parents, I think it a sign of great future blessings from Almighty God.

When I see a boy fond of the Bible, and well acquainted with it, I think it a sign that he will be a pious and happy man.

And though great changes sometimes take place in the character, yet, as a general rule, these signs do not fail.

HEALTH AND COMFORT. To prevent cold feet wash them frequently, and rub them thoroughly with a coarse cloth: this removes obstructions from the pores, and produces a healthy state which is conducive to warmth. When the feet appear clean the pores may be obstructed and the perspiration impeded so as to produce discomfort, and in some measure injure the health. To prevent cold feet at night, in addition to the above cleansing process, take off the stockings a short time before retiring, and rub the feet hard until they are not only warm, but begin to feel hot. This will greatly add to the pleasure of health, which, in many cases, greatly depend on many things which may to some appear trifling.

To keep the feet dry use good stout boots or shoes, and stuff the leather, upper and lower, full of water proof composition. Tar is a good ingredient, as it will bend and not break. Two parts of tar, two of beef's tallow, and one of beeswax, makes a good composition for boots and shoes. Apply it quite warm, and warm the leather that it may penetrate. As farmers are frequently exposed to wet, they should be careful to keep their feet dry and warm, for on this their health and comfort, in a great measure, depends. There are a great many kinds of composition, that are good to resist water and preserve leather, and the proposition of the above may be varied. Tar and tallow will answer alone; so will tallow and beeswax. Linseed oil is used as a good ingredient in water proof oil composition. Neat's foot oil is excellent and preserves the leather soft. Castor oil has been highly recommended for this purpose.

A BRIGHT TRICK. Too much gin and sugar have been many a man's ruin, but in the present case too little of those articles may cause some trouble to an individual who played off a rare joke upon a commission merchant in New Orleans—if caught. The person alluded to entered, one day last fall, into a commission house in that city, and arranged to have a hog-head of "sugar," and several puncheons of "gin," warehoused for a few days. The hog-head and puncheons arrived shortly, and were stored; drayage, portage, etc., was defrayed by the merchant, and the owner, with samples, came up, sold the articles, and received one hundred dollars in advance on account. The owner not having returned, according to promise, to pay charges, and receive the balance of the purchase money for his goods, a trick was suspected, the hog-head and puncheons were opened; the former was found to contain a light sprinkling of sugar, underlaid with sand, and the latter contained each a tin vessel, holding a pint of gin, inserted in the bung-holes—the balance was pure Mississippi water. The gent who made the raise has been tracked to Mobile.

SOAP SUDS. If the suds usually made in a farmer's family, were to be rigidly economized, and applied to his tillage and grass lands, the addition to the crops would remunerate him amply for all the labor and expense required in making the application, besides being an important and permanent advantage to the soil. By conducting it into a tank, or reservoir, properly constructed, it would furnish him the means of adding to his manure heap, in the ratio of at least a cart load to every hog-head of suds; and this, for most purposes, would be equal to the best manure manufactured in his yards and styes. It is matter of surprise that farmers, who are by no means remiss in the performance of obvious duties connected with the management of their farms, do not take more pains to save this article. We have often alluded to its fertilizing properties, and we can assure our readers that we think it important.

REMINISCENCES. The first cotton raised in the United States was grown in Virginia, and the first manufacture of cotton in this country, was by a Virginia lady, a near relative to Gen. Washington, being a vest pattern, afterwards presented to President Jefferson. The first iron forge in the Union was erected in South Carolina, and eighty years ago South Carolina exported to England over ten thousand pounds of silk. A few years ago it was an offence, punishable with a heavy fine, to establish a factory in Charleston, (S. C.) that was worked by steam power; now that law is repealed, and a company with two hundred thousand dollars capital, are establishing a Cotton Manufactory there.

SORE THROAT. We have known several instances in which this distressing complaint, in its worst stages even, has been immediately alleviated and speedily cured by the following remedy: Mix a pennyworth of pounded camphor with a wine glass of brandy, pour a small quantity on a lump of sugar, and allow it to dissolve in the mouth every hour. The third or fourth generally enables the patient to swallow with ease.—Medical Journal.

OFFICE-HOLDERS IN FRANCE. France has only about twenty thousand persons possessing the elective franchise; yet, exclusive of the army and navy, she has thirty-six thousand six hundred and forty-eight employees paid for the budget. They are for the most part, however, wretchedly paid.

THE HEBREW. The Hebrew has a peculiar aptitude for managing money. Joseph was treasurer to Pharaoh, Daniel to Nebuchadnezzar, Mordecai to Artaxerxes, and Levi to Don Pedro the cruel. The Moors, who first invaded Spain, had an Israelite for Chancellor of the Exchequer; and a firm of the same nation, are the wealthiest bankers of Europe, lending money to all the nations of the earth.

VARIETY. The sunflower produces four thousand seeds. Wild ducks fly ninety miles an hour. The cocoa tree supplies the natives of the countries in which it grows with bread, water, wine, vinegar, brandy, milk, oil, honey, sugar, needles, thread, clothes, cups, spoons, basins, baskets, paper, masts for ships, sails, cordage, nails, covering for their houses, etc.

QUEEN CUSTOM. The Khan of Tartary, who does not possess a single house under the canopy of heaven, has no sooner finished his repast of mare's milk and horse-flesh, than he causes a herald to proclaim from his seat that all the princes and potentates of the earth have his permission to go to dinner.

FORTUNES. Ninety-nine out of every hundred of the fortunes which have been amassed within the space of a very few years, in regular business pursuits, may be ascribed to the power of the press. It is the means of disseminating information throughout the country, and attracting customers from all quarters.

CONFIDENCE. Confidence is the first duty of noble minds. It is only the weak and narrow-minded, who, from the somewhat hard lessons of the world, acquire the false wisdom of doubting those who have never deceived them.

The Great Remedy

Consumption, Asthma, Dyspeptic Consumption, Spitting of Blood, Bronchitis, Difficulty of Breathing, Inflammation, Influenza, Croup, Colds, Pain in the Throat and Side, Dyspepsia, and various affections of the Stomach and Liver.

Dr. O'Sullivan, or All-Healing Balm.

It is acknowledged that more persons die of Consumption than of any other disease. It is estimated that in the United States over THIRTY THOUSAND persons annually fall victims to this fatal scourge. The cause of the evil is generally unknown. A short dry Cough is the precursor of the fatal disease. These symptoms are deemed unimportant. Pain in the Side, Hoarse and night Sweats, and death ends the scene.

Did you find a REMEDY FOR THE EVIL? The experience of more than twenty years has proved its efficacy, and thousands are rescued from its effects.

OF INCURABLE CONSUMPTION.—George Burnett, Esq. of Newark, N. J., had suffered the effects of a severe cold for more than a year in the month of August, when his Cough became so much that he feared he would die, he purchased the O'Sullivan.

He raised blood, and complained of pain in his side and chest, and very much debilitated by night sweats. His appetite was gone, and altogether he appeared to be sinking. He was so much relieved by the use of this remedy that by the month of November he was in the full enjoyment of his health, and with every prospect of being cured.

At the following case of CONSUMPTION.—This was truly a wonderful one, and places the O'Sullivan or All-Healing Balm, at the head of all remedies for eradicating that dreadful disease.

Wm. Hays, residing in this city, (New York) was seized with a severe cold in the early part of the year. His cough became very troublesome, and he began to spit blood. He complained of a severe pain in the chest and his breathing became so short that he could not walk any distance without stopping. His night sweats reduced him very low.

Under the care of several physicians in Brooklyn he told him they could do no good, as his disease was settled and fixed Consumption. He resorted to this city to die among his friends. He was so weak that he could not walk without being supported. Although his friends had now given up of his ever being any better, he commenced the use of the O'Sullivan, or All-Healing Balm, and a week was so far restored as to be able to resume his business.

T. Laban, residing at 52 Pine street, was seized with Asthma, in consequence of having a severe cold in the early part of last winter. Only part of the night he could sleep tolerably, and towards one o'clock in the morning his asthma became so severe, that he was obliged to get up for the remainder of the night leaning forward in a chair. His cough was most distressing during the day. He had, during his sickness, tried every thing without relief. He never had a good night's rest in ten months, until he commenced the use of the O'Sullivan or All-Healing Balm, when it immediately relieved, and before using half a bottle was perfectly well, and now sleeps as quietly as ever did in his life.

Do you wish to be cured? Give to prove the efficacy of the great remedy. And it possesses a property not to all others, viz: it does not constipate. Reader, are you suffering under any of the symptoms of disease? Try this remedy—It cures the Pain in your side and chest—put it in your COUGH which deprives you of sweet slumbers; if you have Asthma, be assured there is relief in the medicine in the world that will cure you and it will arrest all those disagreeable symptoms which strike such terror to the mind and in dreadful forebodings of an untimely and dissolution.

QUINCY PATRIOT.

SATURDAY, DEC. 27, 1845.

John A. Green, Editor.

ADVERTISING & NEWSPAPER AGENCY.
V. B. PALMER, American Newspaper Subscription and Advertising Agent, No. 30, State Street, Boston, No. 30, Ann Street, New York, No. 53, Pine Street, Philadelphia, and Corner of Calvert and Baltimore Streets, Baltimore, is agent for the Quincy Patriot in those cities. Merchants and others who wish to advertise or subscribe, can learn the terms, etc., on application at either of the above offices, where a copy of the paper may be found.

CLOSE OF THE YEAR.

With this number of our paper, nine years will have closed since its commencement. With the numerous and conflicting interests and tastes by which an editor must always be more or less surrounded, it would be a miracle indeed, if he should in every instance be able to suit the tastes of all his readers. The only course then which he can adopt, is to give, as far as practicable, "each a portion in due season." We have endeavored during the years past, and shall so continue to arrange our paper, as to accomplish this object. What success has attended our efforts we leave for the readers to judge. We have received from many of our patrons very flattering commendations which have given us encouragement to believe that we have not labored wholly in vain, and will cheer us on to renewed and untiring efforts to merit their well wishes.

We tender to our patrons our unfeigned thanks for the numerous favors bestowed upon us in the way of advertisement and job work, and respectfully solicit a continuance of the same. We shall endeavor to make such additions to our establishment as may be required, and assure our friends that no effort on our part shall be wanting to give entire satisfaction, both in the management of the paper and in whatever job work may be entrusted to us.

As we have some payments to make out, those indebted to us for job work, advertisements, or subscription are requested to settle as soon as convenient.

Thanking most heartily, our old and steadfast friends, who have kept along with us in all the mutations of the past nine years—and most sincerely tendering our acknowledgments to the numerous patrons who have felt in with us, from time to time, on the way—we congratulate them all, on the present condition of the Patriot and its prospects, and conclude with a cordial greeting of a Happy New Year.

CONGRESSIONAL. The Senate have passed the bill for the admission of Texas—years thirty-one, says thirteen. It will be recollected that the House passed the same bill by a very decided majority—one hundred and forty-one yeas, to fifty-six nays. Texas, therefore, becomes one of the States of this Union.

A resolution has been offered in the Senate, to the effect that negotiations be opened with the government of Spain, for the cession to the United States of the Island of Cuba, the inhabitants of the same assenting thereto.

Resolutions have been introduced in the Senate, to give forthwith to England the one year's notice required of the termination of the treaty relating to the joint-occupancy of the Oregon territory; of establishing a territorial government over Oregon; erecting block houses and stockade forts, for the protection of emigrants and settlers, from the frontier to Fremont's Pass, in the Rocky Mountains, and through the territory to the mouth of the Columbia river; organizing companies of mounted riflemen to protect emigrants on their way to, and citizens resident in, the territory; granting lands to actual settlers; organizing and equipping the militia of Oregon; extending the laws of the United States over the territory; regulating intercourse with the Indians in the territory, and establishing a mail route to the city of Oregon.

In the House, the resolutions from the legislature of Massachusetts for remodeling the naturalization laws, have been presented, and occasioned considerable debate.

Mr. Adams has presented resolutions of this State relating to South Carolina and Louisiana, and asking of Congress so to legislate as to give all citizens of the United States, whether white or colored, a hearing in the District Court of the United States within those Districts, and at present denied to them.

SECOND STATEMENT. Another "statement" by John B. Gough, has appeared in one of the Boston papers—a lengthy document, occupying about five columns—relative to the charges lately brought against him by the New York National Police Gazette. Mr. Gough meets those charges with a flat denial, and says that he can, by means of a diary which he has kept, show "where I have been, with whom, where slept, and what I have done, every day and night that I have been in New York, since May 15th, 1843." His diary he will support by corroborative testimony, and calls upon the Police Gazette to name the day or night when he (Mr. G.) was seen at the house of ill-fame in Walker street, previous to the 5th of September. He moreover intimates that a suit for libel will be instituted against the publishers and editors of the Police Gazette.

PROGRESS OF TEMPERANCE. The citizens of Roxbury, held a meeting last week, at which the question was put, that the selectmen be instructed to prosecute ALL violations of the law in the town of Roxbury, and bring the offenders to justice. The Town Hall was crowded with citizens, all of whom seemed to take a deep interest in the settlement of this question, which was decided in the affirmative, by an UNANIMOUS vote.

FOREFATHERS' DAY. The celebration of the two hundred and twenty-fifth anniversary of the landing of the Pilgrims, at Plymouth, on Monday last, passed off in a happy and pleasant manner to those who took part in it; so says the editor of the Plymouth Rock. The plans of the Committee of Arrangements were admirably adapted to the occasion, and were fully and energetically carried out, as far as circumstances would allow. The tables at the Dinner and at the Ball were loaded with the richest and most luxurious fare, which was arranged in a tasteful manner; and the entertainment, as a whole, was one which those who participated in it will long remember with feelings of satisfaction.

Among the speakers were ex-Judge Charles H. Warren, who presided at the table, President Josiah Quincy, Hon. Rufus Choate, Dr. O. W. Holmes, John H. Clifford, Esq. of New Bedford, ex-Governor Edward Everett, and others.

MILITIA OF THE UNITED STATES. As much as has been said, during the agitation of the Oregon question, in relation to the numerical strength of the United States militia, it may not be uninteresting to know the number of enrolled men, subject to draft, in the United States. By referring to the Army Register, the whole number of militia reported as enrolled, in the several States, is 1,750,810 men. From the date of many of the returns, they must necessarily be far below the true standard, but they may safely be stated at two millions of men. Allowing, therefore, that a regiment should number one thousand men, (a very large allowance,) you have two thousand regiments. Now, require one company of one hundred men from each regiment, and you have the number of two hundred thousand, as contemplated by Col. Benton, of the United States Senate. Thus it will be seen the number can be raised by calling out one tenth of the actual militia force of the country.

FATAL CASUALTY. About eleven o'clock, on Wednesday last, as one of the firemen employed about the machinery of Isaac Tirrell's box-making and planing establishment, on Harrison Avenue, Boston, was about to start the machinery, the head of a large boiler suddenly burst, killing the fireman, William Ford, and William Tirrell, a son of the owner, who was at work in the shop. They were both shockingly mutilated. The boiler, which was twenty-four feet long, was driven through the front of the building, across the street, and through the brass foundry of Isaac Balbit, on the opposite side, making a distance of about one hundred feet. The building was completely shattered by the concussion, the walls and roof were torn off, and the machinery nearly destroyed. A horse and wagon, which were standing in the street, were struck by the boiler in its course. The wagon was considerably broken, but the horse escaped unhurt.

NEW PUBLICATIONS. The Monthly Miscellany and Journal of Health, is a miscellaneous publication, edited and published by William M. Cornell, M. D., of Boston, and formerly of this town. The first number is accompanied with a steel engraving of Boston Common, and among other interesting matter, contains a description of the Common. The subscription price is one dollar a year.

A new weekly paper has been started in Boston, called the "Christian Alliance and Family Visitor," to be independent of sect or party, and designed to promote the union of Christians against Popery. I. Warren and J. Horton are the editors, and contributions of the pen from the following named clergymen of Boston are promised: Rev. Dr. E. Beecher, Rev. E. N. Kirk, Rev. William Hague, Rev. A. Stevens, Rev. Joseph H. Towne, Rev. C. C. Mason. The paper is nearly of mammoth dimensions and handsomely printed; terms two dollars per annum.

A new semi-weekly paper, to be called "The Warbler," is about to be issued at Nantucket. William C. Starbuck, publisher, and Hon. S. H. Jenks, editor.

AN OLD APPLE. B. Hobart, Esq., of Abington, recently sent to the editor of the Boston Ploughman, an apple that was perfectly sound, though it is now three years since it was plucked from the tree. This apple and a barrel more, have been kept by Mrs. Elizabeth Torrey, of that place; they grew on a tree in her garden. She has occasionally shown them to her friends, who know the durability of this fruit. This apple was small, but on cutting it open, it appeared sound, though it had lost its spirit.

THE PLANETS VENUS. This planet may now be seen in clear weather at mid day, about three hours behind the sun, and a few degrees north of the sun's path. The intensity of its light will continue to increase till the 26th of January, which is the time of its greatest brilliancy.

A REJOINER. The Committee of the Vulture Engine Company make the following reply to the Tiger Committee:

ENGINE AFFAIRS.
MR. EDITOR—We have no desire to hold a newspaper controversy with the Tiger's Committee in relation to the trial of the Engines, on the twelfth instant. We have made our statement of the facts, and are ready to abide by the same; and if the Tiger's Committee wish for any further explanation, let them appoint the time and place, and we will hold ourselves in readiness to meet them.

COOL PROCEEDINGS. On Saturday evening last, about nine o'clock, while Messrs. William P. McKay and Henry T. Spear, watchmakers, of No. 52 Milk street, Boston, were setting in their store, with two of their young men, a small show-case, full of gold watches, was stolen from the window by a most audacious manoeuvre. The robber, having previously fastened the door on the outside, by means of passing a piece of barrel hoop, bent and doubled into a three-ply, through the handle, broke in one of the panes of glass, snatched a small mahogany case, containing twenty-four valuable gold watches, worth from twelve to fifteen hundred dollars, got it through the aperture, and made off with his booty, as there were no persons passing in the street, at the time, to arrest him. Mr. Spear made an attempt to catch the case, as it was passing out, but only succeeded in cutting his hand on the broken window. A reward of two hundred dollars has been offered, for the detection of the thief, and the recovery of the property.

NEW YEAR'S PRESENTS. Those in want of appropriate articles for gifts, at this festive season of the year, are reminded that at the Quincy Bookstore may be found a large variety of useful, amusing, and suitable tokens, as tributes of love, friendship and affection. In the book line, the Annuals—"Rose of Sharon," and "The Amulet," among others—are indeed excellent works, and beautifully bound and illustrated.

Go then, if you wish to make presents—and who does not—to Gill's Bookstore, and that he will suit you there can be no mistake.

It is evidently the intention to use strenuous exertions to induce the invalid to make trial of Mr. Brinckerhoff's Health Restorative. Being devoid of any species of deceit or quackery, it certainly has more claims on the notice of the sick than any other medicine. The medical Faculty, in many instances of its individual members, with characteristic honesty, have even ordered it for their patients, finding often that the usual remedies do not suit peculiarities of diseases of the Chest and Lungs. This is praiseworthy, and we hope such disinterested feeling will be shown by others of the same profession until it shall have a trial in every case.

An Important Letter. Please Read it.
The following letter from Dr. Brigham, of Lowell, Mass., speaks the uniform language of hundreds of other Physicians, who have tried, and therefore know how to appreciate Jayne's Expectorant.
LOWELL, Mass., Jan. 27, 1844.

Dr. David Jayne:
Dear Sir—I have used your medicine, (so universally known by the name of Jayne's Expectorant) in my practice for a number of years, and can most truly say, that I have been more successful in the use of that as a mild, safe and thorough EXPECTORANT, than of any which I have used. It is the best for the following obvious reasons. It does not if given in proper doses, occasion a disagreeable nausea. It does not weaken the lungs and prostrate the system like most other Expectorants in common use, nor does it abate the appetite of the patient, like other nauseating medicine, which have been used by the faculty for ages gone by. I remain, your's, &c.,

GREAT ENGLISH REMEDY

For Coughs, Colds, Asthma, and Consumption.
The great and only remedy for Coughs, Colds, Asthma, and CONSUMPTION, is the HUNGARIAN BALSAM OF LIFE, discovered by the celebrated Dr. Buchanan of London, England, and introduced into the United States under the immediate superintendence of the inventor.

The extraordinary success of this medicine, in the case of pulmonary diseases, warrants the American agent in soliciting for treatment the worst possible cases that can be found in the community—cases that seek relief in vain from any of the common remedies of the day, and have been given up by the most distinguished Physicians, as confirmed and incurable. The Hungarian Balsam has cured and will cure the most desperate of cases. It is no quack nostrum, but a standard English medicine, of known and established efficacy.

Every family in the United States should be supplied with Buchanan's Hungarian Balsam of Life, not only to counteract the consumptive tendencies of the climate, but to be used as a preventive medicine in all cases of Colds, Coughs, Spitting of Blood, pain in the side and chest, irritation and soreness of the Lungs, Bronchitis, difficulty of breathing, hectic fever, night sweats, emaciation and general debility, Asthma, Influenza, Hooping Cough, and Whooping Cough.

Sold in large bottles, at $1 per bottle, with full directions for the restoration of Health.

Pamphlets, containing a mass of English and American certificates, and other evidence, showing the unequalled merits of this Great English Remedy, may be obtained of the agents, gratuitously.

Boston Almanac for 1846,

JUST RECEIVED AT THE QUINCY BOOKSTORE.

Quincy, Dec. 13.

25th, 1845.—Jan. 1st, 1846.
Christmas and New Year's Days.

It has become the practice among all classes in the community, to celebrate the annual return of the season of Christmas and New Year, by the interchange of gifts and tokens of friendship. This custom produces a demand for articles suitable, which it has been the object of the QUINCY BOOKSTORE to supply. Recent alterations at this place have increased the accommodations for the exhibition and sale of such goods, and greater attention will be given to this business the present season than heretofore. It has been the aim of the proprietor to obtain an extensive assortment of Gift Books, Juvenile and Fancy Goods, of which the following enumeration may convey some idea, but an examination at the Bookstore will be to all much more satisfactory.

ANNUALS.

The Annuals presented to the public for this season are unusually rich and beautiful. Some of the most elegant may be mentioned, viz: The Diamond Bondiv Annual, Leaflets of Memory, The Snow Flake, The Opal, Rose of Sharon, May-Flower, Amulet, Friendship's Offering, Religious Souvenir, Christian's Annual, Forget-Me-Not, Hesperoth, Keweenaw, Rosette, which with many other books bound in the style of Anglade, rendering them as acceptable gifts, form a splendid assortment.

Miniature Editions of the Poets.

The Poems of Cowper, Rogers, Howitt, Southey, Coleridge, Montgomery, Goldsmith and Gray, Scott, Kirk White, Wordsworth, E. Cook, Campbell, S. G. Carney, Eliot, Thompson's Seasons, Young's Night Thoughts, Paradise Lost, Lalla Rookh, Lady of the Lake, Poetry of the Sentiments, Passions, Flowers, with other standard works in miniature form and beautiful binding.

JUVENILE BOOKS.

The collection of Juveniles comprises the most all the authors so popular with children, many of them new. Parents and children are invited to call and examine for themselves, and whatever may be their taste they may be sure that it will be fully suited.

GAMES.

The Pickwick Cards, a new game invented by Samuel Weller, for the entertainment of the Club. Shakespeare in a new dress, a new game for evening parties.

The Christmas Cards, or the Good and Bad Passions. The Picture Pass-Word, an original and interesting amusement with Scripture Cards. Chromo-lithographs, Scripture History, Robinson Crusoe, and his Men Friday, a game for little boys and girls. Master Riddlebury and his Pupils, Dr. Busby, Mansion of Happiness, American Revolution, Race of Improvement, etc.

New Fall and Winter Goods.

JOHN DINEGAN

WOULD respectfully inform his customers and the public, that he has received several cases of English, French and German

BROAD CLOTHS,
OF THE VERY BEST DESCRIPTION.

Among the selection I have made may be found, Plain and Double Weaved English BEAVERS; Plain and Figured PILOT CLOTH; Several pieces of FRENCH BROADCLOTH, suitable for Over Coats or Dress Frock Coats, which will be found to be entirely new articles in this market, and will come very cheap. In addition to the above named, I have also received a complete assortment of Superfine Cloths, such as JET BLACK, BLUE BLACK and GOLDEN BROWNS; A good assortment of BLUE, which will come remarkably cheap for Dress or Frock Coats, or Boys' Jackets and Pants.

A COMPLETE ASSORTMENT OF
FRENCH DOESKINS AND CASSIMERES.

VESTINGS,

Of every description; FIGURED SILK AND SATIN, remarkably cheap; a good variety of Cashmere and Valencia. A Vest will come from $1.75 to $3.50, made to order.

The liberal patronage I have received since I came to Quincy, has enabled me to open as choice a selection of Goods as ever was introduced in this market. I return my customers and the public my sincere thanks for their liberal patronage, and I respectfully invite them to call and examine my present stock of Goods. I can make garments considerably cheaper, as well as of as good cloth as can be had in any Store in the city of Boston. The reason I can do these things are, in the first place, I am prepared to cut and make a garment with any man that can be named there, in the next place, I can purchase my goods as cheap as any man can do, and I cut and superintend my own work. These are facts that are worth the consideration of those who wish to get their garments where they can get them cheapest and best, and to suit them in every respect or no sale.

I have adopted the one price system. I am fully convinced it is the most honest way of doing business, and my terms are Cash.

JOHN DINEGAN,
MERCHANT TAILOR, School Street.

VESTINGS,

EVERY DESCRIPTION NOW IN USE.

All persons wishing to clothe the outer man will find it to their advantage to give us an early call.

N. B. People passing through this village from the neighborhood of Quincy, feeling gratified for past favors, they are liable to be caught in traps equal to mock auctions in New York city, would find it to their advantage to call and examine Mr. Russell's style of cutting.

To those acquainted with the abilities of Mr. Russell as an artist, it is superfluous to say one word, but from all unacquainted we would select an early call to examine his new style of Pattern or Overcoat, designed for Fall or Winter wear. Feeling confident that he will give satisfaction we recommend him to the public.

Quincy, Oct. 4. if E. PACKARD.

Tailoring.

I WOULD respectfully intimate to my friends and the public, that I continue to occupy rooms in the neighborhood of Quincy, feeling gratified for past favors, I would solicit a continuance of that patronage so liberally bestowed since I commenced business. Being regularly in receipt of the latest and most approved English, French and American styles, with the ability of first rate tailors, and the use of the most modern machinery, I am enabled to produce a garment every way desirable in point of style and finish.

People are requested to call and examine for themselves, and not be cajoled by the rignarole advertisements, for "by squaring and rule" works many a fool of the Long Island Road, and the course of the Hudson River as far as Albany. No Massachusetts man can examine this Map of Railroads without pleasurable feelings. At a glance he sees these great arteries of business life and prosperity all centering in the great metropolis of New England. The Miscellaneous Department of the Almanac has received all due attention. The Business Directory and other local matters have been thoroughly revised, and made, in all respects, as perfect as possible.

POETRY.

THE FISHERMAN.

BY J. G. WHITTIER.

Hurrah! the seaward breezes
Sweep down the bay again;
Heave up my lads, the anchor,
Run up the sail again;
Leave to the lubber landmen
The rail car and the steed;
The stars of Heaven shall guide us,
The breath of Heaven shall speed.

From the hill top looks the steeple,
And the light-house from the sand;
And the scattered pines are waving
Their furrows from the land,
One glance, my lads, behind us,
For the lines we leave one sigh,
Ere we see the change and chances
Of the ocean and the sky.

Where the white cross on its crown!
Hurrah! for Meccatani,
And its mountains bare and brown!
Where the Caribou's tall antlers
O'er the dwarf wood freely toss,
And the footstep of the Muskox
Has no sound upon the moss.

There we'll drop our lines and gather Old ocean's treasures in,
Where'er the mottled mackerel
Turns up a steel-dark fin;
Where'er the brown cod glideth
Amidst the scaly clan,
We will reap the North-land harvest
As her reapers only can.

Our wet hands spread the carpet
And light the hearth of home;
From our fish as in the old time,
The silver coin shall come.
As the demon fed the chamber,
Where the fish of Tobit lay,
So from all our dwellings
Shall frighten want away.

Though the mist upon our jackets
In the bitter air congeals,
And our lines wind stiff and slowly
From off the frozen reeds;
Though the fog be dark around us,
And the storm blow high and loud,
We will whistle down the wild wind,
And laugh beneath the cloud!

In the darkness as in daylight,
On water as on land,
God's eye is looking on us,
And beneath us His hand!
Death will meet us soon or later,
On the deck or in the cot;
And we cannot meet him better,
Than in working out our lot.

Hurrah!—hurrah!—the west wind
Comes creeping down the bay,
The rising sails are filling—
Give way, my lads, give way!
Leave the coward landmen clinging
To the dull earth like a weed,
The stars of Heaven shall guide us,
The breath of Heaven shall speed!

* An island of red sandstone in the Magdalen group.
† Our next harbor was Little Meccatani. There the mountains were more lofty, and the most low beautiful. Near us was a rock two thousand feet high, which we ascended, and saw from the summit a chain of mountains, and an interminable series of lakes—a wild and impressive place.—Notes of Jud-den's Voyage to Labrador, 1833.

and was told that they would cost him one dollar.
"Och, by my soul, then," replied Pat, "I'd sooner have my hands go barefoot all the days of my life than give ye that for 'em."

"What are the ways of Providence?" asked a Sunday school teacher of an urchin in her class. "The railroad to Boston, and steamboat to New York," was the reply.

"Pat," bawled an Irish stevedore, "how many of ye ere there in the hold below?" "Five, sir." "Come up here, the half of ye."

The Great Remedy

FOR Consumption, Asthma, Dyspeptic Consumption, Spit-

Folger's Olossonian, or All-Healing Balm.

IT is acknowledged that more persons die of Consumption than of any other disease. It is estimated that in the United States over THIRTY THOU-SAND PERSONS annually fall victims to this dreadful scourge. The cause of the evil is generally overlooked. A short dry Cough is the precursor—or a neglected cold. These symptoms are deemed unimportant. Pain in the Side, Hectic and night Sweats
follow, and death ends the scene.

Would you find a REMEDY FOR THE EVIL?
Here it is. The experience of more than twenty years has proved its efficacy, and thousands are rejoicing in its effects.
Case of INCIPENT CONSUMPTION.—George
W. Burnett, Esq. of Newark, N. J., had suffered under the effects of a severe cold for more than a year, and in the month of August, when his Cough
had reduced him so much that he feared he would die, he commenced using the Olossonian. He raised blood
at this time, complained of pain in his side and chest, and was very much debilitated by night sweats. His appetite was gone, and altogether he appeared to be rapidly sinking. He was so much relieved by the use of this remedy that by the month of November
he left for Pittsburg, Pa. with every prospect of being permanently cured.

Read the following case of CONSUMPTION.—
The cure was truly a wonderful one, and places the "Olossonian or All-Healing Balm," at the head of the list of remedies for eradicating that dreadful disease.

George W. Hays, residing in this city, (New York) was seized with a severe cold in the early part of the summer. His cough became very troublesome and he began to raise blood. He complained of a severe pain in the chest and his breathing became so short
that he could not walk any distance without stopping
for breath. His night sweats reduced him very low.
He was under the care of several physicians in Brooklyn, who told him they could do no good, as his disease was a settled and fixed Consumption. He removed to this city to die among his friends. He was
by this time so weak that he could not walk without assistance. Although his friends had now given up
all hope of his ever being any better, he commenced using the "Olossonian, or All-Healing Balm," and in a few weeks was so far restored as to be able to resume his business.

Mr. T. Liban, residing at 52 Pine street, was severely afflicted with Asthma, in consequence of having taken a severe cold in the early part of last winter.
In the early part of the night he could sleep tolerably
well, but towards one o'clock in the morning his Asthma became so severe that he was obliged to get up and sit for the remainder of the night leaning forward on a chair. His cough was most distressing through the day. He had, during his sickness, tried almost every thing without relief. He never had a good night's rest in ten months, until he commenced taking the Olossonian or All-Healing Balm, when he found immediate relief, and before using half a bottle of it was perfectly well, and now sleeps as quietly as he ever did in his life.

Hundreds of cases could be given to prove the efficacy of the great remedy. And it possesses a property superior to all others, viz: it does not constipate the bowels. Reader, are you suffering under any of the above symptoms of disease? Try this remedy.
It will allay the Pain in your side and chest—put to flight the COUGH which deprives you of sweet slumber and repose; if you have Asthma, be assured there is no medicine in the world that will cure you so speedily, and it will arrest all those disagreeable symptoms which strike terror to the mind and give such dreadful forebodings of an untimely and speedy dissolution.

Sold at one dollar, per bottle, by REDDING & Co.
State street, Boston; and by the following appointed agents:

Mrs. Hayden, Quincy; J. Babcock, Milton; M. D.
Plummer, Milton; Eli Thayer, Weymouth; Wm. A.
Torrey, do.; King & Nash, Abington; N. N. Dyer, do.; A. E. Dubois, Randolph; R. Gleason, Dorchester. tf August 16.

A MEDICINAL preparation is herein announced which has been long desired, and sought for, and which the public must at once see and acknowledge the advantage of. It is a purgative pill COATED WITH SUGAR, so that it leaves no taste whatever of its internal ingredients. In fact the medicine is so entirely disguised, that if a person were to swallow the pills without being informed that they were, he would believe them to be simply pieces of pure sugar, nor could he afterwards, unless by its great purgative effect, suspect that he had been deceived.

These pills are so skillfully prepared, that they attend all other purgative medicines, name, a pain. Medicine administered in all other sweet forms has the disadvantage of being mixed with the sugar, and hence produces
a mingled flavor, which, to most persons, is more disagreeable than unadulterated bitterness. In these pills this is altogether avoided; the sugar and the medicine being entirely distinct from each other, so that the former must be thoroughly removed before the latter can manifest itself to the taste. It is universally known that nearly all diseases originate with impurity of blood. Pure blood is therefore essential to health. We must not, however, wait until the blood is impure, for then it takes time—and that time passed in ill health—to rectify it; but when the slightest dis-arrangement of the system is indicated by costiveness, or any other sign, it admonishes us that superfluities are gathering in the system, which should at once be got rid of; for their removal leave the chyle (from which the blood is formed) in a healthy state, and purity of blood must be the result. This fact, as stated, is universally known; but people have such an aversion to medicine that, unless the case is urgent, they pre-er the disease to the cure, until an impaired constitution, or a fit of sickness, rebukes them for the folly of their conduct. Still they had some excuse; for therefore, medicine in almost all its forms, was nearly as disgusting as it was beneficial. Now, however, the evil is most effectually removed; for GLICKENER'S SUGAR COATED VEGE-TABLE PURGATIVE PILLS have no taste whatever of medicine—produce none of the nausea and griping attendant on the operation of other medicine—while their speedy effect in removing all impurities from the system cannot be excelled by any other medicine which has ever been discovered.

It is unnecessary to say more here. If these pills are as described, the public will freely and gladly patronize them; and the proprietor merely asks a trial, which he is sure of receiving, to prove that he assumes no merit for them which they do not fully possess.

Glickener's Sugar-coated Vegetable Purgative Pills are prepared and sold, wholesale and retail, and for exportation, by C. V.
GLICKENER & Co., Chemists, at the wholesale and retail drug warehouse, No. 79 and 81 Barclay Street, New York. Price 25 cents per box, with full directions, and sold by the following list of Agents.

J. Babcock, M. D. Plummer, Milton; Eli Thayer, William A.
Torrey, W. Nash, A. Raymond, Weymouth; King & Nash, N.
Dyer, Abington; R. Gleason, R. F. Tolman, Dorchester; R.
Ford, Randolph; Mrs. E. HAYDEN (near of Stone Temple) and
